PREFACE.

The preparation of these histories, at the instance of the Volta Bureau, for publication in commemoration of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America, has evinced such generous and gratifying good-will that this Bureau desires here to record its warm acknowledgments.

To the superintendents, principals, teachers, editors, and others who have so cheerfully and effectively co-operated in the production of this historical memento, the undersigned therefore begs to express the sincere thanks of the Volta Bureau.

Special thanks are due to Dr. E. A. Fay for his kindly and painstaking labors, which have resulted in the helpful arrangement and attractive form of the valuable material.

JOHN HITZ,
Superintendent.

INTRODUCTION.

In this commemoration year it is interesting to recall the fact that the discovery of the possibility of education for the deaf was almost contemporaneous with the discovery of America. The first instance in history of a deaf-mute who learned to read and write was that recorded by Rodolphus Agricola (Roelof Huisman), who lived from 1443 to 1485.* Who this deaf-mute was, who his teacher, and how he was taught, we are not told. Juan Luis Vives (De Anima, 1538) marvelled at Agricola's story, for it seemed to him an impossibility that one deprived of the sense of instruction, as Aristotle called the sense of hearing, should be taught to read and write.

But while Vives, in deference to the authority of Aristotle, who at that time was regarded as infallible, hesitated to accept Agricola's testimony, the brilliant Girolamo Cardano, of Milan (1501-1576), following the guidance of his own reason in preference even to the authority of "the Master of those who know," was led to the truth. Cardano not only declared that the instruction of deaf-mutes was possible, though difficult, but also stated clearly and accurately the principle on which it depends; namely, that ideas can be associated directly with written words without the intervention of sound, and so "the deaf-mute can hear by reading and speak by writing."† While we teachers and

* Qua in re ut miracula transeam, quæ vidi, surdum a primis vitæ annis, et (quod consequens est) mutum, didicisse tamen ut quæcumque scriberet aliquis, intelligeret, et ipse quoque tamquam loqui sciret omnia mentis suæ cogitata perscribere posset.—De Inventione Dialectica (Paris, 1538), Lib. III, cap. 16, p. 443.

† As Cardano's books are rare, and his precise words are not quoted in any American work relating to the deaf, it seems worth while to give the most important passages here. They are taken from a copy of his Opera (London, 1663) in the Library of Harvard University:

"Sunt autem surdorum tria genera. Quidam enim sunt a nativitate tales: de quibus nunc agere propositum non est. Sunt enim hi omnes etiam muti: nam cum discamus audiendo loqui, qui audire non possunt, friends of the deaf join the multitude in honoring the discoverer of the western continent, let us also pay our tribute of respect to this less renowned fellow-countryman of his, whose discovery of the theory of instructing the deaf opened to them a new world vaster and richer than any continent—the illimitable world of the mind.

The seed sown by Cardano was slow in springing up and bearing fruit. In the great intellectual progress of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the deaf had but a scanty share. A few fortunate individuals among them, singly or in groups of two or three, were taught by Ponce, nec loqui etiam. Alii, postquam orti sunt, surdi fiunt, sed antequam loqui discant. Atque hi pari conditione muti evadunt, ut non sint a prioribus dissimiles: quamobrem et sub uno genere atque tractatione continentur. Reliqui sunt, qui surdi fiunt postquam aut loqui tantum aut scribere etiam didicerunt: atque de his sermonem nunc habere instituiamus. * * *

“Verum si, antequam legere ac scribere didicerit, surdus efficiatur, quid agere illum miserum oportebit? Crimen quidem hoc est, cum debeat discere simul et loqui et scribere et legere. Sed sit parentum hoc crimen, quid modo faciendum? Oportet ut discat scribere ac legere: id enim licet, velut ut cæco, ut facere alibi docuimus. Ardua est res, sed quam tamen etiam natus surdus efficere possit. * * * Si loqui didicisti, rogare potes ut commonstrent tibi arcana quæ sunt circa artes. Sunt autem, ut dixi, in singulis plurima. Possunt vero ea tibi signis, non secus ac verbis, commonstrari. Constat sane Romæ mimos fuisse, qui barbaro regi ita omnia gestu exprimerent, ut cum duos ex his petiisset ab imperatore, acceptos pro maximo munere habuerit. Sed et res ipsas et scripta circa vocis sonum literis hieroglyphicis, quemadmodum olim, repræsentare licet.

“Verum ut etiam de primo surditatis genere, quod ab ortu aut paulo post contingit, loquar, annon tota infantia surdi sumus ac muti, minusque sensibus robore ac mente valemus? Attamen nullus tunc infelix est eo ipso, quin artes unusquisque proprias discat. Deum itaque surdi mutique venerantur et colunt; et, quia mentis sunt participes, nihil est quod prohibeat quominus in artibus elegantiora et politiora opera perficiant, et sibi ipsi magis vivant, unde omnibus, ut et ob morum elegantiam, majore sunt in admiratione. Memini me quosdam surdos ac mutos novisse, qui cum principibus aliisque proceribus inservirent, eisdem erant grati, minusque turbæ ab illis excitabatur in aula, minus et ipsi ab aliis infestabantur. In universum, cui mens non deest, eidem nihil tam magnum videtur deesse posse quod mentis auxilio comparari non queat.”—De Surditate, cap. 7 (Vol. II, pp. 73–75).

“Refert Georgius Agricola in tertio suo libro de Inventione Dialectica vidisse hominem natum surdum et mutum, qui legere et scribere didicerit, sic ut significaret quæ vellet. Atque ita possumus efficere, ut mutus legendo audiat, et scribendo loquatur: nam ex cogitatione memoria comprehendit, quod panis, gratia exempli, rem illam quæ editur, significat. Legit itaque ratione velut in pictura: per eam enim, licet ad voces non referatur, non solum res sed actiones et successus declarantur. Et ut ex pictura visa picturam aliam effingere sub ratione etiam significati licet, ita etiam in literis. Ut enim vocis differentiæ ex pacto significant res, ita rerum aut dictionum figuræ variæ.”—Paralipomenon, Lib. III, cap. 8 (Vol. x, p. 462).

Bonet, and Carrion, in Spain; Wallis, Holder, and Baker, in England; Van Helmont and Amman, in Holland; Pasche, Kerger, Raphel, and Lasius, in Germany; Fay, Pereire, and Vanin, in France. Some of these teachers, as Bonet, Wallis, and Amman, as well as other men of the period who were not teachers, especially Dalgarno in Scotland, published treatises on the subject which are still of practical value. But while the achievements of these teachers demonstrated the truth of the theory propounded

by Cardano nearly four centuries ago, it is only within the last century and a half that the human conscience has been aroused to the duty of putting the theory into practice for the benefit of the deaf generally. The first great impulse in this direction was given by the benevolent and disinterested Abbe de l'Épée, whose school for the deaf, established at Paris about 1760, speedily became famous throughout Europe. At nearly the same time, independently of De l'Épée and of each other, schools were begun by Samuel Heinicke in Dresden, and Thomas Braidwood in Edinburgh. Heinicke's school a few years later was removed to Leipsic.

As the successful results of the instruction given in these schools became known, similar schools were established in other cities and countries, and they have continued to increase in number to the present time. Their growth and progress have been greatest during the past fifty years. In the year 1836, according to a list published in the Quatrième Circulaire of the Paris Institution, there were 134 schools for the deaf in the world. A list published in the American Annals of the Deaf ten years ago named 397 schools then in existence, and there are now about 425. In the United States fifty years ago there were only six schools, and in Canada and Mexico none ; * in the following pages are given the histories of 79 schools now existing in the United States, seven in Canada, and one in Mexico. The number of pupils in attendance at these schools on the 15th day of November last was 7,940 in the United States, 682 in Canada, and 34 in Mexico.

The first publication in America urging the importance of instructing the deaf appeared precisely one hundred years ago. It was an essay by Dr. William Thornton, the first head of the United States Patent Office, and the architect of the first Capitol at Washington, "On Teaching the Surd, or Deaf, and Consequently Dumb, to Speak." It was published in the Transactions of the American Philosophical Society, Volume III (Philadelphia, 1793).

Ten years earlier, however, an American had published a book on the subject in England. This was Francis Green, born in Boston, Massachusetts, in 1742, and the book, published anonymously, was entitled "Vox Oculis Subjecta, by a Parent" (London, 1783). Mr. Green had a son educated at Braidwood's school, and he wished the benefits of instruction to be extended to other deaf children. Returning afterwards to America, and residing at Medford, near Boston, he endeavored by frequent contributions to the Boston papers, especially the New England Palladium, and by personal correspondence with influential men, to arouse the interest and sympathy of the public. In the year 1803, with the aid of the clergy of Massachusetts, he gathered returns of the numbers of the deaf in that State, finding about seventy, and estimating that there were five hundred in the United States.

The first effort to give instruction to the deaf in America was made by the Rev. John Stanford, in New York, about the year 1810. It is described in the History of the New York Institution in the present volume. The unsuccessful attempts made two years later by John Braidwood, Jr., a grandson of the founder of the Edinburgh school, to establish schools in Virginia and in New York are described in the histories of the Virginia and New York Institutions. Braidwood also attempted to found a school in Baltimore, Maryland, but failed there for the same reason as in Virginia and New York.

These earlier efforts in behalf of the deaf in America, though they seem to have come to nought, are of great interest, for they show that the idea of instruction was in the air, and that the fulness of time for the work to begin was at hand. And though it may now be impossible to trace any direct connection between these efforts and the establishment of the permanent schools a little later* (except that a letter of Francis Green's, written in 1781 and printed twenty-four years afterwards in the Medical Repository, was read at the first public meeting in behalf of the education of the deaf in New York, and that Mr.

* Indeed, the immediate effect of Braidwood's attempts was to hinder and delay the opening of the first permanent school; for the members of his family in Great Britain, who controlled the monopoly of deaf-mute instruction there, wishing to create a similar monopoly in America, placed obstacles in the way of Dr. Gallaudet when he sought to acquire the art of instruction in the mother country.

THE GALLAUDET MEMORIAL STATUE, 1889.

Stanford became one of the founders of the New York Institution), yet it is not improbable that they all, and especially Mr. Green's eloquent appeals, by arousing public interest in the education of the deaf, had considerable influence in preparing the way for the work that followed.

An incident which had a more direct and momentous connection with this work was the meeting, early in the second decade of the century, of Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet, a student of theology at Andover, Massachusetts, with Alice Cogswell, the deaf daughter of his father's neighbor at Hartford, Connecticut, Dr. Mason F. Cogswell. It occurred when young Gallaudet was at home on a visit during one of the vacations of his theological school. Noticing little Alice one day as she was playing in his father's garden with his younger brothers and sisters, "the only voiceless one among them," his interest was deeply aroused. He at once attempted to converse with and instruct her, and in this first interview gave her the initial lesson.* Afterwards, as opportunity offered in his vacations, he imparted further instruction, so that when, a few years later, Dr. Cogswell and his associates determined to establish a school for the deaf, it was to Dr. Gallaudet, as the person best fitted to undertake the work, that their minds immediately turned. With the opening of this school at Hartford, in 1817, the actual history of American Schools for the Deaf begins. The story of that school, and of the others that have since arisen, is told in the following pages.

The first suggestion of this collection of histories was made in the Deaf-Mutes' Journal of December 1, 1893. On the 22d of that month the Superintendent of the Volta Bureau issued the following circular :

* This incident is commemorated in the Gallaudet Memorial Statue at Kendall Green, Washington, D. C., a picture of which is given on the opposite page. The statue, a beautiful work in bronze by Daniel E. French, was presented to the National Deaf-Mute College in 1889, by the deaf people of the whole country, in grateful remembrance of their Friend, Teacher, and Benefactor, the Founder of Deaf-Mute Instruction in America.

VOLTA BUREAU,

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 22, 1892.

A desire having been expressed in different quarters that the Volta Bureau should collect, and issue in one or more volumes, for the occasion of the World's Columbian Exposition, the histories of all schools and institutions for the education of the deaf in America, the Volta Bureau is disposed to carry out this idea, provided it can be assured of the hearty co-operation of superintendents and principals.

With a view to have such histories serve as a correct index of present conditions and facilities, it is desired that each school and institution prepare and print its own history according to a somewhat uniform plan as to character of contents and size of publication. The latter should conform, as nearly as can be, to the dimensions of the pages of the American Annals of the Deaf (9 x 5 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches; printed matter, including running title, 7 x 3 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches). Of these separate histories this Bureau should be furnished with two thousand copies by the first of February next.

Schools and institutions not having printing facilities of their own could have the printing done elsewhere, and schools which have no means whatever available to have the printing done at their own expense can send the MS. of the history of their school to the Volta Bureau, which, in such exceptional cases, will itself attend to the printing.

Among other things, it is desirable—

1. That each history embrace, if possible, engravings and plans of the school or institution, as well as portraits of its present superintendent and principal. If these are not available for publication, single drawings and photographs of the aforementioned should be sent for preservation in the archives of this Bureau.

2. A complete list of its teachers and employees and of its directors or board of managers on the first of January, 1893.

3. A chronological list of all its superintendents or principals.

4. A chronological list of all its journals and other publications.

5. A list and brief statement of purpose of all societies of the deaf in the institution or locality, with names of officers.

6. A brief mention of any preceding schools or institutions no longer existing in the locality or known to have existed within the State or Territory.

7. Tabulated statistics of all kinds.

Each institution or school supplying the Bureau with material for this work will receive a complimentary copy of the same. The remainder of the edition, after supplying, at cost, teachers and individuals interested in the education of the deaf who may subscribe for the work, will be judiciously distributed among the libraries of all nations as a work of reference.

Please inform this Bureau if you will co-operate in carrying out the proposed plan to the extent of supplying the requisite history of your school or institution, either in print as indicated, or in manuscript, prepared by yourself or by some person designated by you. And, furthermore, kindly state how many, if any, extra copies of the work you wish to secure for your teachers and others by subscription.

If this project meets with the approval of the majority of your colleagues it will be at once taken in hand by the Volta Bureau, and the work will be issued in proper form (unless unavoidably delayed) by the date of the opening of the World's Columbian Exposition.

Soliciting an early reply, I am, sincerely yours,

JOHN HITZ,
Superintendent.

On the 6th of January, 1893, a sufficient number of principals and superintendents having signified their approval of the plan and promised their co-operation, the work was fully decided upon. It has been carried forward as rapidly as possible on the general plan suggested in the circular, with the supplementary addition of the histories of several organizations not schools, designed to promote the education of the deaf, a list of American periodicals published for the benefit of the deaf, an alphabetical list, derived mostly from the school histories, of the names and addresses of American instructors of the deaf, and a list of the publications of the Volta Bureau.

The histories of the American, New York, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Illinois, South Carolina, Missouri, Wisconsin, Michigan, Iowa, Texas, Columbia, Alabama, California, Kansas, Minnesota, Clarke, Arkansas, Maryland, Nebraska, St. Joseph's, West Virginia, Colorado, Chicago, Western Pennsylvania, Western New York, New England Industrial, South Dakota, Pennsylvania Oral, New Jersey, Utah, Texas Colored, Montreal Catholic (Male and Female), Ontario and Manitoba schools were printed by the respective schools—most of them by their own pupils; those of the other schools, which lacked the necessary means or facilities, have been printed by the Volta Bureau. The History of the Wisconsin System of Public Day-Schools was printed by the Wisconsin Phonological Institute. No doubt greater uniformity and elegance of appearance, and, by reason of continuous paging, greater convenience of reference would have been attained if all the histories had been printed at one press; but in that case the collection would have been deprived of the interest and value which now attaches to a large part of it as the handiwork of the pupils.

The histories were nearly all prepared by the heads of the schools, or by persons designated by them. In some cases where the writers had been the principal actors in the events described, and their modesty deterred them from recording fully their own achievements, we must read between the lines in order to give credit where it is justly due.

It was gratifying to the editor to find that twelve of the histories were written wholly or partly by persons whom he had formerly had the pleasure of teaching in the National Deaf-Mute College. Five were written by graduates of other American schools for the deaf, so that, intellectually as well as mechanically, the histories represent to a considerable extent the work of the deaf themselves.

The portraits of the heads of schools were included with the histories, at the urgent request of the Volta Bureau.

If the time allowed for preparation had been longer, many of the histories could have been made more complete, and greater unity and harmony in the mode of treatment could have been secured; but it is hoped that the work, as it is, fully accomplishes the purpose aimed at by the Volta Bureau, which was to give a clear and truthful presentation of the American Schools for the Deaf as they exist at the present time, and to place on record in a permanent form the most important events of their past history.

THE
FOR THE
EDUCATION AND INSTRUCTION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB.

In the year 1807 Alice, the youngest daughter of Mason F. Cogswell, M.D., of Hartford, Conn., a man eminent in his profession and in philanthropic works, became deaf through scarlet fever. Anxious for the education of this beloved child, Dr. Cogswell appealed to the General Association of the Congregational Clergymen of Connecticut to aid him in ascertaining the number of persons in the State afflicted in like manner, and at a meeting of the association, held at Sharon, in June, 1812, it was reported by a committee previously appointed for the purpose, that there were eighty-four deaf and dumb persons within the limits of the State. If a like proportion of deaf-dumbness existed in other States there were probably four hundred such persons in New England, and in all the United States about two thousand. Surely enough of these must be of school age to sustain a good school on this side of the Atlantic.

Bringing these facts to the attention of his wealthy and influential friends, Dr. Cogswell succeeded in interesting them in the project of establishing a school for their education.

On the 13th of April, 1815, the following gentlemen met by invitation at his house, viz.: "Ward Woodbridge, Esq., Daniel Wadsworth, Esq., Henry Hudson, Esq., Hon. Nathaniel Terry, John Caldwell, Esq., Daniel Buck, Esq., Joseph Battell, Esq. (of Norfolk), Rev. Nathan Strong, D.D., and Rev. Thos. H. Gallaudet." After prayer by Dr. Strong invoking the Divine blessing upon their deliberations, and after a full discussion of the practicability of sending some suitable person to Europe to study the art of instructing the deaf and dumb, Dr. Cogswell and Mr. Woodbridge were appointed a committee to ascertain the name of some suitable person, who would consent to go, and to obtain subscriptions to defray his expenses. In one day Mr. Woodbridge, who was one of the leading business men of Hartford, raised sufficient funds for the purpose. The Rev. Thos. H. Gallaudet, a graduate of Yale College and of Andover Theological Seminary, was solicited to make the journey and fit himself to take up the new enterprise. On the 15th of April, 1815, he signified to the committee his willingness to do so, and on the 25th day of May he sailed for Europe. It is not necessary in this brief history to recount the story so often told of the obstacles encountered by Mr. Gallaudet in England and Scotland in his endeavor to acquire the method of instruction in use there, and of the open-armed hospitality extended to him by the Abbe De l'Epee at Paris, where every facility was afforded him to accomplish the purpose for which he had crossed the Atlantic. Having secured as his assistant Laurent Clerc, who had been a brilliant pupil and, later, a teacher in the Royal Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Paris, Mr. Gallaudet returned to New York August 10, 1816. These two spent the following eight months in visiting prominent places throughout the country to obtain subscriptions and to interest the general public in the cause of deaf-mute education, the accomplished deaf-mute exciting universal wonder and admiration.

While Mr. Gallandet was abroad, friends at home were active in forwarding the project. At the session of the General Assembly of Connecticut, held at Hartford, in May, 1816, an act of incorporation was passed in accordance with the petition of sixty-three citizens of Hartford, who, with their associates, were by it "formed into, constituted, and made a body politic and corporate by the name of the Connecticut Asylum for the Education and Instruction of Deaf and Dumb Persons, with the rights and powers usually granted to incorporations for educational purposes."

CONNECTICUT ASYLUM, 1817.

Under this charter the school was opened at Hartford, April 15, 1817, with seven pupils, increasing within a year to thirty-three, the first permanent school for the education of deaf-mutes in America.

In other countries, schools of this class had been sustained entirely by private charity, and had had only transient means of support. The founders of the school at Hartford, while availing themselves of private charity to put it in operation, and demonstrate the need of it, and its ability to meet that need, at once set to work to put it on a reliable basis of support. In October, 1816, the Legislature of Connecticut was appealed to for aid and made an appropriation of five thousand dollars. In 1819, the Congress of the United States, under a motion made by Henry Clay, gave to the school twenty-three thousand acres of public land, and with the proceeds of the sale of this land grounds were secured, suitable buildings erected, and a permanent fund provided. In 1819, Massachusetts provided by legislative appropriation for the education of twenty indigent pupils here. In 1825, New Hampshire and Vermont adopted the same policy of educating their deaf-mute children here at the expense of the State. Other States soon followed this good example. Thus, through the efforts of the founders of this school the humane, just, and wise policy of educating deaf-mutes at the public expense was firmly established in this country, and has been adopted by almost every State in the Union. In some of the Western States means for the education of deaf-mutes are secured by constitutional provision. This has put the schools for deafmutés in the United States on a better basis, financially, than those in any other part of the world.

An unfortunate impression has prevailed that the institution is provided with abundant funds for carrying on its work. Such is not the case. Since the grant made by Congress in 1819, gifts and bequests have been very few and scanty. By far the largest was that of the late Morris Mattson, M.D., of New York, who became interested in the school through his deaf-mute sister's connection with it, and made it his residuary legatee. To the disadvantage of the institution in its present needs, his example has not been followed.

STANDARD FOR TEACHERS.

The first Principal of this school, the Rev. Thomas H. Gallaudet, was a man of liberal education, broad culture, and rare tact and pantomimic skill. Realizing the difficulties of deaf-mute education and the requirements for success in it, he called about him, as assistant teachers, men of similar qualifications and fit to be his co-laborers, in working out by correction, revision, and expansion of the French system a new, American system of instruction. Thanks to the wise conservatism of its managers, the standard of qualifications for a teacher of deaf-mutes at the outset of the work in this country has been steadily maintained here, and to it may be attributed in no small degree the prestige which this school has ever enjoyed. Twenty-nine graduates of Yale College, besides graduates of other colleges, have been enrolled in its corps of instructors. For a long time this school served as a normal school for the training of teachers to take charge of the new schools springing up. Every new teacher entering upon the work of instruction here, as well as those from other schools resorting to it to acquire the system of instruction, took a regular course of lessons in the sign language from Mr. Clerc, the living embodiment of the French system, and each paid him fifty dollars therefor. The high standard set for the country at the beginning, and the endeavor to live up to it, have secured results in the education of deaf-mutes which have caused American schools for the deaf to be universally acknowledged to be the best of their kind in the world.

MANUAL TRAINING.

Mental discipline and acquirements are but a part of the good to be derived from the school course. Manual training, now beginning to be considered an essential part of school training for all children, is doubly so for deaf-mutes. For their future welfare it is not only necessary that they should form habits of industry, but that every boy should learn how to care for and use tools, and acquire at least the rudiments of a trade, that he may be able to compete successfully with those favored with hearing.

Very early in the history of this school this need was recognized, and a plan was adopted of making manual training a requisite part of the education of its pupils. Instruction in this new department was begun in 1822, and in the following year two large and convenient workshops were erected. From that day to this, manual training has been a part of the instruction of every able-bodied boy — rich and poor alike — passing through his school course here. Habits of industry are invaluable, and they should be acquired at the formative period of life. It is of much less importance what one learns to do, than that one should learn to do promptly and well whatever one undertakes. With industrious habits, a trained eye, a skilled hand, and cultivated judgment, one may acquire a new trade with comparative ease, but where all these are wanting, to start on any new line of work is a difficult task.

Boys receive instruction in cabinet-making and shoe-making. Until 1892, there was a tailor's shop also. Most of the girls learn to sew and to do some of the lighter parts of house work.

In the cabinet-shop the boys learn how to use wood-working tools, and when they have finished their school course, they find it comparatively easy to secure employment in carpenter shops, in furniture establishments, or in any other occupation in which that class of tools is used. Those who return to farm life find the knowledge which they have obtained in this branch of instruction valuable in saving the cost of repairs and in the manufacture of many needed and useful articles. The cabinet-shop is supplied with power for the turning-lathe and heavy sawing, but the rest of the work here, as all of that in the shoe-shop, is performed by hand, as the object is not to turn off a large amount of work, but to teach boys the use and proper care of tools.

Shoe-making has proved a useful trade for many boys, as it requires very little capital. One can start in the trade almost anywhere, and very seldom does a good cobbler fail to find sufficient work to make a comfortable living.

Drawing is carefully taught in order to cultivate the hand and the eye, and as a preparation for understanding working plans in the mechanical arts, and as laying the foundation for designing and other art work with those who show special talent in those lines.

An extensive inquiry made, in 1886, among former pupils of the school, showed them engaged at that time as follows:

2 Matrons, Assistant, in a school for deaf-mutes,

A large number of the women are married and have homes of their own. Many others live with their parents, and are useful and efficient members of the household. Of these two classes no note is made in the above list of occupations.

WAGES.

As a rule the wages reported are not inferior to those earned by others in the same kinds of work, and some are receiving wages above the average.

One shoemaker earns $125.00 per month on an average, others report an average of $60.00 per month, others $40.00 per month, and the lowest reported in that trade is $1.00 a day—the wages of boys little more than half way through their teens.

One weaver earns $53.00 a month, others $40.00, others $30.00 to $35.00.

Carpenters generally report wages of $2.00 a day.

Cabinet-makers earn from $1.25 to $2.25 a day.

One mechanic earns from $75.00 to $80.00 per month.

Clock-makers report wages varying from $1.25 to $3.00 per day for piece work.

Burnishers report wages varying from $1.25 to $5.00 per day for piece work.

Teachers receive wages which will not compare unfavorably with the wages paid for teaching the same grades of classes in the profession generally, the highest salary reported being $1800.

The patent lawyer, in a competitive examination for the chief examinership in the patent office, received the highest mark, but being debarred from that office by his infirmity, he entered upon the practice of patent law, in which he has gained a lucrative practice.

It will be seen by a glance at the list given above, that there is a great variety in the occupations of former pupils. Comparatively few of them have followed the trades learned at school, but all have carried with them the trained hand and eye, the cultivated judgment, and the industrious habits acquired. In no case have they found these a hindrance to their advancement, but, rather, on the foundations thus laid they have built their success. There is nothing degrading, or belittling, in the acquirement of any honest handicraft. The false impression that there was has started many a young man on his way to the almshouse or the jail. Honest industry of any kind is honorable. Voluntary idleness is degrading, whether it be found among the rich or the poor, among the learned or the ignorant.

The plan of manual training first put into operation here has been adopted by nearly every school for deaf-mutes in the country, and to it may be attributed in no small degree the fact that a deaf-mute pauper or vagrant from among graduates is rarely found, though impostors not infrequently assume the role of deaf-mutes that they more readily may work upon the sympathies of the public and so procure the means of living without labor. As a class, the country through, deaf-mute graduates are honest, industrious, thrifty, and respected citizens, and not a few of them have brought up families of hearing children, who have risen to positions of influence and honor.

AGE OF ADMISSION.

In the early years of the school the time allowed to the beneficiaries of the several States was very short, and that the pupils might be able to accomplish the most in the time allowed, the age of admission was set high, as the following extract from the twenty-seventh annual report will show :

“Those children who were to receive no aid from any public body, and whose term of instruction was therefore not limited, like that of beneficiaries, have always been admitted to the Asylum at the age of ten years, if their friends desire it ; and in a few cases they have been taken at an earlier age, because, it was presumed, that if five years were not sufficient, they would be kept still longer under instruction. But for the larger class of its pupils, the Asylum, in view of the whole subject, and after much consideration, fixed upon fourteen years at first, and afterwards upon twelve, as the best time for the commencement of their education. This course was adopted in accordance with the views and wishes of a most respectable board of commissioners, appointed by the legislatures of Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont, to examine into the state and condition of this institution, as respects its funds, and the instruction, treatment, and employment of the pupils, and to ascertain the terms and conditions upon which the deaf and dumb, who may be sent to the Asylum by those States, will be received."

In 1843 the age of admission was again reduced, as will appear by the following vote passed by the board of directors :

"Voted, That the earliest age for the admission of pupils into the Asylum be eight years ; with the hope that all such that are admitted at an earlier age than twelve years shall be continued for the term of six years at least."

It is interesting to notice the change in the age of pupils at admission since then. An examination of the records shows that of the first one hundred pupils only eight were under ten years of age, when they began their school course ; fifty-three were sixteen years of age or over ; forty-two were eighteen years of age or over ; fifteen were over twenty-five years of age, and one had reached the age of fifty.

Of the last one hundred admitted previous to May, 1889, forty-eight were under ten years of age ; nine were over sixteen years of age, and only four had passed the age of eighteen. One had reached the age of twenty-seven.

The average age of the first one hundred pupils at admission was 17.91 years. The average age of the last one hundred at admission was 10.77 years — a gain of 7.18 years in the right direction.

TIME ALLOWED FOR INSTRUCTION.

In the matter of time allowed at school, the deaf-mute children of this generation are highly favored above those of two generations ago. On this point the seventh annual report of this school speaks as follows : "Some pupils stay at the Asylum only two years, and four is thought by many a pretty considerable time for completing their education. And yet in this time some hope that these infants in knowledge, though they may be men in stature, as ignorant of knowledge of language, when they begin, as the little child who is taking his first lessons in his primer, can be taught how to write English with grammatical accuracy, and to read books with understanding, and also have their minds opened to the reception of moral and religious truth, and to an acquaintance, perhaps, with arithmetic, geography, and history, and in addition to all this, become tolerable proficient in some mechanical employment. Could such things be accomplished in the education of those who are deprived of two of the most important faculties which man enjoys, it would put to shame all that is done by the most ingenious and attentive parents, and at the most celebrated schools, in training up to knowledge and usefulness those who are favored with hearing and speech and all the superior facilities of acquiring information and improvement, which these valuable privileges afford."

In 1825 the commissioners above referred to visited the school, and after full consultation with the board of directors, the latter passed the following preamble and resolution, viz. :

"WHEREAS, it is necessary, not only for the good of the pupils, but for the convenience of the Asylum, that every pupil should continue at least four years, that being the least time in which they can acquire even an ordinary education,

"Resolved, That it is expected that no one will be placed here for a less term than four years."

In 1835, the regular term of instruction was extended to five years.

As we look back over this history, and consider the very short time allowed for the school course, and consider, moreover, that the majority of the pupils on entering the school had reached an age when the mind had lost its pliability, we do not wonder that the attainments in language were so limited that they failed to free themselves from deaf-muteisms, but, rather, considering the circumstances, we marvel that they were able to accomplish so much as they did. All honor to them ! All honor to the teachers, who, in spite of all drawbacks and discouragements, fitted their pupils to take their parts in life so well! What would be thought in these days of two years, or four years, as the period allowed for the education of deaf-mutes?

As time has passed on, the necessities of the case have been appreciated better, and the period of instruction has gradually been increased. Massachusetts now allows ten years to every one of its deaf children, and gives power to the Governor to extend the time beyond that limit in the case of meritorious pupils, "recommended therefor by the principal or other chief officer of the school in which they are members." In the rest of New England the State authorities have discretionary power to extend the time to about the same limit. One more step in advance is needed, viz., to grant the same privileges to the deaf child that are accorded to his hearing brothers and sisters, to enter school as soon as he is old enough, and remain until his education is completed, including instruction in the kindergarten, the primary school, the grammar school, and in speech and lip-reading.

METHODS OF INSTRUCTION.

Great changes have also taken place in the methods of instruction. Finding an insurmountable barrier to acquiring the system of instruction in Great Britain, Mr. Gallaudet went to France, partially learned the system there in use, and brought it, embodied in the person of Laurent Clerc, to this country. It was a marvelous system, but there was too much machinery about it, and like all the machinery of those days it was crude and cumbersome. Too much time was spent over the sign language. It seems sometimes to have been regarded as an end rather than a means. The lever was mistaken for the load which it was intended to move. For example, in the teaching of language, instead of presenting the idea vividly in brief natural signs, and then turning at once to written, or spelled, language, the idea was first given in free natural signs, next in word signs in the order of the words, and, lastly, by signs in the order of the words, each word being accompanied by other signs indicating the part of speech and giving its grammatical construction. After all this preparation came the written language for the idea.

Other crudities there were. Mr. Gallaudet, with his coadjutors, set to work to improve this instrument which had been placed in their hands. Their successors have pursued the same course. One after another its useless and cumbersome parts have been removed, and its usefulness has been increased thereby. It is, and will always continue to be, the easiest and most efficient medium of thinking for the congenitally deaf. It is invaluable as a means of conveying ideas rapidly, both in giving information and in making explanations. Every teacher of the deaf should be a master of the sign language, and should use it with perfect freedom and yet with great discretion. It should never be more than a means to an end. In the days when the school period was so short, the end sought was to lay up knowledge in the sign language. Now we have passed beyond that, and merely use it as a means of reaching the point where all knowledge may be reached through the English language and stored in it.

The system of instruction is now thoroughly eclectic — writing, speech, lip-reading, manual spelling, pictures, pantomime, actions, and the sign-language are all freely used. The ends aimed at are the mental development of the pupil and a mastery of the English language, and any means which will conduce to these ends are unhesitatingly employed.

ARTICULATION.

Articulation has always had a place in the instruction given in this school. From the beginning the semi-mute and semi-deaf have had their speech kept up and improved by special attention. The subject was investigated from time to time in its workings in other countries by special agents of this and other schools, and the best light to be had was followed. In the very limited time allowed for the school course, and considering, also, the age at which pupils were admitted, it was not deemed wise to extend the instruction beyond the above-named classes. As the school period was increased more could be done. In 1845 the following resolution was passed by the board of directors :

“Voted, In view of the facts and results obtained by Mr. Weld, the Principal of the Asylum, during his late visit to various institutions for the education of deaf-mutes in Europe, that the board of directors will take efficient measures to introduce into the course of instruction in the Asylum every improvement to be derived from these foreign institutions; and with regard to teaching deaf-mutes to articulate, and to understand what is said to them orally, that they will give it a full and prolonged trial, and do in this branch of instruction everything that is practically and permanently useful.”

In accordance with this resolution about thirty pupils received special instruction in speech and lip-reading during the school year of 1845-6. In the following year forty pupils were so instructed. Three years later we find the class in articulation and lip-reading still numbered about forty, and so on, showing that there was a thorough and persistent attempt in the spirit of the resolution, and with results in some cases, both in speech and lip-reading, which have rarely been excelled.

In 1857, a special teacher of articulation was employed by this school—the first engaged by any school for deaf-mutes in this country—and from that time to this, with the exception of one break of five years, the school has not been without a special instructor in those branches.

This was the first eclectic school to make use of Bell's System of Visible Speech as an aid in teaching deaf-mutes to speak. Mr. Alexander Graham Bell spent the months of May and June, 1872, in the school in introducing the system and in training teachers to give instruction in it.

Of late years more attention has been given to articulation and lip-reading, and their field has been broadened. This school, while holding fast to all that is good in the past, has settled upon the policy of giving all new pupils a thorough and prolonged test, under special teachers, as to their ability to acquire speech and lip-reading, and of dropping only such as those teachers regard as hopeless cases. With the rest daily instruction in speech and lip-reading is continued through the course. This plan has been adopted in the belief that intelligible speech, even if imperfect, is valuable, and that it should be given to every pupil who can acquire it, even at a partial sacrifice of development in other directions, which will require an addition of one or two years to the time now allowed for the school course in order to make good the loss.

An examination of the school's records in 1889 revealed the following facts :

Of the pupils received into this school during the previous four years seventy-four per cent. gave sufficient promise of success in acquiring speech and lip-reading to warrant their continued daily instruction in those branches. Of those thus taught forty-seven + per cent. were born deaf; fourteen + per cent. lost hearing under two years of age; twenty-four + per cent. lost hearing between the ages of two and four years; and fourteen + per cent. lost hearing after the age of four years.

The more than twenty-five hundred pupils who have received instruction at the American Asylum have come from twenty-five States, the British Provinces, and the West Indies, viz. :

Maine,	Georgia,
New Hampshire,	Alabama,
Vermont,	Louisiana,
Massachusetts,	Texas,
Rhode Island,	Indiana,
Connecticut,	Illinois,
New York,	Michigan,
New Jersey,	Wisconsin,
Pennsylvania,	Ohio,
Maryland,	British Provinces,
District of Columbia,	West Indies,
Virginia,	California,
North Carolina,	West Virginia.
South Carolina,

At the present time (1893) only the six New England States are represented by its pupils.

Likewise the following :

Of the first hundred pupils admitted to the school —

46 were born deaf.

30 became deaf at two years or under.

7 became deaf from three to eight years of age inclusive.

0 became deaf at over eight years of age.

17 unknown at what age deafness occurred.

1 had one deaf parent.

28 came from 23 families in which there were forty other deaf children.

0 was reported as having parents related by blood.

In one family represented there were 6 deaf-mute children.

In one family represented there were two deaf-mute sons and one deaf-mute daughter who were married before this school was established.

In another family there were 4 deaf-mute children.

Of the last hundred pupils admitted —

41 were born deaf.

26 became deaf at two years of age or under.

22 became deaf from three to eight years of age inclusive.

1 became deaf at over eight years of age.

10 unknown at what age deafness occurred.

5 have deaf parents, and in these families there are thirteen other deaf children and two hearing children—12 of these deaf children coming from two families.

9 children, having hearing parents unrelated by blood, come from seven families having more than one deaf-mute child—the whole number of deaf children in these families being 16, and the number of hearing children 24.

2 children come from families in which the parents are cousins, and the two families together have six deaf-mute children and fifteen hearing children.

Up to May 1891 five hundred and ninety marriages of former pupils had been reported. From these had sprung eight hundred and eleven children, of whom one hundred and four, or nearly thirteen per cent. were reported congenitally deaf. Nearly one half the marriages were without issue.

The deaf-mutes of America have not failed to testify their love and admiration for their first teachers, Thos. H. Gallaudet and Laurent Clerc, nor to show their appreciation of their labors in their behalf. In September, 1850, they presented each with a costly solid silver service, and to each they have erected, at their own expense, on the grounds of the institution, a permanent memorial at a total cost of more than six thousand dollars.

SUPPORT.

The school is supported partly by the income from its invested funds and partly by State appropriations, and is under the management of a board of directors composed of some of the most prominent business and professional men of Hartford and ex officio, the Governors and Secretaries of the six New England States.

The charge for board and tuition is $175 a year and this expense is met by State appropriations. This covers from two-thirds to three-fourths of the actual cost, the rest being provided from the income of the funds.

The school employs sixteen regular teachers, a special teacher for a blind deaf-mute, a teacher of drawing, and an instructor of Swedish gymnastics.

BOOKS PUBLISHED.

The Ellen Lyman Memorial Fund of $2,000, given by Mrs. Lafayette S. Foster of Norwich, Conn., and an Illustrative Fund given by the Hon. Joseph Davis of Lynn, Mass., have provided means for publishing a few books specially adapted to the use of deaf children. By this aid the following books have been published and are doing useful service in a large proportion of the schools for the deaf in the United States and in some schools in Canada and England, viz.: First Lessons in English — a graded course of instruction in language in four volumes — by Miss Caroline C. Sweet; Talks and Stories — one hundred short stories and seventy-five conversations for practice in language — prepared by W. G. Jenkins, M. A.; Bits of History — one hundred stories gathered from United States history — compiled by John E. Crane, B. A., and "A Story Reader" — a volume of short stories for young pupils — compiled by Miss Ida V. Hammond.

The American Annals of the Deaf and Dumb, now known all over the world as the official organ of the schools for the deaf in America, originated with the teachers of this school, and they furnished nearly all of the articles for the first two volumes. It was published quarterly then, as now, and the Board of Directors of the school appropriated $300 towards the expense of publishing the first volume.

At the First Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf and Dumb, held at the New York Institution in 1850, the magazine was adopted by that body, which became responsible for its support, and placed it under the management of its executive committee, but the editorship was still filled by a teacher of the American Asylum, first by Mr. Luzerne Rae, and after his death by Mr. Samuel Porter, who held it until the magazine was suspended on account of the Civil War.

The management of the school is wisely conservative, but it moves on in no old grooves, is wedded to no system. It gladly examines and tests every new thing that promises to be an improvement, and with alacrity adopts whatever proves itself worthy of adoption. It believes in proving all things and in holding fast that which is good. It makes no changes merely for the sake of change, but is ever ready to make any change for the sake of improvement. It stands where it has always stood, in the front rank of schools for the deaf.

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE THE CONNECTICUT ASYLUM FOR THE EDUCATION AND INSTRUCTION OF DEAF AND DUMB PERSONS.

1. Be it enacted by the Governor and Council and House of Representatives in General Court assembled: That John Caldwell, Nathaniel Terry, Daniel Wadsworth, Mehitable Wadsworth, Susan Tracy, Ward Woodbridge, Henry Hudson, Daniel Buck, Mason F. Cogswell, Joseph Battell, William H. Imlay, Charles Sigourney, David Porter, David McKinney, Isaac Bull, Thomas S. Williams, John Morgan, Samuel Tudor, Jr., John Butler, George Goodwin, John Beach, James Ward, Roswell Bartholomew, George Smith, Joseph Rogers, Moses Tryon, Jr., Nathan Strong, Jr., Charles Seymour, James H. Wells, Jonathan W. Edwards, William W. Ellsworth, William Watson, Russel Bunce, Eliphalet Terry, Seth Terry, Lynds Olmsted, Thomas Lloyd, James B. Hosmer, Joseph Trumbull, Samuel Tinker, Horace Burr, Russell Talcott, Christopher Colt, Eliphalet Averill, Nathaniel Patten, Joseph Wells, William Ely, Spencer Whiting, Barzillai Hudson, Jr., Jonathan Law, George Goodwin, Jr., Daniel Crowell, Charles Goodwin, Michael Shepherd, Caleb Goodwin, Dudley Buck, Aaron Chapin, Jared Scarborough, Barzillai Hudson, Jacob Sargeant, Peter Thatcher, Talcott Wolcott, Nathaniel Spencer, and their associates be, and they hereby are, formed into, constituted, and made a body politic and corporate, by the name of "The Connecticut Asylum for the Education and Instruction of Deaf and Dumb Persons," and by that name they and their successors shall and may have perpetual succession: shall be capable of suing and being sued, pleading and being impleaded in all suits of what nature soever, may have a common seal, and may alter the same at pleasure, and may also purchase, receive, hold, and convey any estate, real or personal, the annual income of which shall not exceed five thousand dollars.

2. And be it further enacted, That the said Asylum may, from time to time, elect a President, and such other officers as they may find necessary or convenient, may elect additional members, and the said Asylum may make by-laws, respecting the number, qualifications, and duties of their officers; the mode of election and admission of members, the time, place, and manner of holding their meetings, and the number necessary to make a quorum, and all other by-laws which they may deem necessary for the due regulation of said Asylum, not repugnant to the laws of this State or of the United States.

3. And be it further enacted, That the first meeting of said Asylum be held at the State House in Hartford, on the second Monday of June next.

4. And be it further enacted, That this act or any part thereof, if found inadequate or inconvenient, may be altered, amended, or repealed.

General Assembly, May Session, 1816.

CHARLES DENISON,

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

JOHN COTTON SMITH, Governor.

Attest,

THOMAS DAY, Secretary.

AN ACT TO ALTER THE NAME OF THE ASYLUM.

At a General Assembly of the State of Connecticut, holden at Hartford in said State, on the first Wednesday of May, Anno Domini 1819:

Upon the petition of the "Connecticut Asylum for the Education and Instruction of Deaf and Dumb Persons," showing to this assembly, that the said institution, although styled the Connecticut Asylum, was originally founded for the relief of the Deaf and Dumb wherever situated, and that no preference has ever been given to applicants for admission on account of their local residence. And that, in consideration that the Congress of the United States have very liberally granted, for the use of the Asylum, a township of land, and in consideration also of the contributions of charitable individuals in the other States in the Union, the members of the corporation are desirous of changing its corporate name so that in future it be called "The American Asylum at Hartford, for the Education and Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb."

Resolved by this Assembly, That the name and style of said corporation be and the same is hereby changed, and that hereafter it be known and called by the name and style of "The American Asylum at Hartford, for the Education and Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb," anything in the original act of incorporation to the contrary notwithstanding.

Provided, however, That this act shall be so construed, that any bequest, devise, gift, grant, covenant, or promise, that has been or may be made to said corporation by either of said names, shall take effect; and this act shall in no wise prejudice the said corporation in respect to any privilege or benefit to which it may have been entitled had not the same been passed.

And it is also provided, That no misnomer of the said corporation shall prevent the same from taking benefit of any bequest, devise, gift, or grant when the intention of the testator, deviser, donor, or grantor can be clearly understood.

A true copy of record.

NEW YORK INSTITUTION FOR THE INSTRUCTION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB.

The New York Institution for the Instruction of the Deaf and Dumb, at present located on Washington Heights in the City of New York, ranks second in date among American Schools for the Deaf, the American Asylum at Hartford preceding it about a year. Nevertheless, its origin, as will be seen, was as independent as that at Hartford.

Several years previous to the founding of the Institution, there were two distinct attempts made in New York to instruct the deaf. The first effort was made by Rev. John Stanford, a man whose memory is still cherished as a bright example of piety and zealous labor in behalf of the unfortunate. Finding in the almshouse, of which he was chaplain, several children whose ears were closed to the ordinary means of religious teaching, he made an effort to impart some instruction to them. For this purpose, he provided them with slates and taught them to write the names of some familiar objects ; but for any further progress, peculiar processes of instruction were necessary, of which he had no knowledge. He consequently found himself compelled to await a more favorable period for the realization of his wishes. The opportunity at length came, as he was subsequently one of the founders of the Institution and a member of the Board of Directors.

At this period, very little was known in America of the success of European teachers. Still it was known, in a general way, to men of science, that skill, patience and benevolence had triumphed over the difficulty of deafness and its consequences ; and with the names of De l'Epee and Sicard, of Braidwood and Watson, there had probably reached America some rumors of the different systems in use in France and England respectively. Be this as it may, deaf children of wealthy families had been sent from America to Great Britain to be educated. One of these was from New York, the son of a gentleman named Green, who, as early as 1780, was placed under Thomas Braidwood, whose school in Edinburgh attracted so much attention in its day. A letter from Mr. Green, giving an enthusiastic account of his son's progress, appeared in a medical journal, and exerted an influence upon the founders of the

New York Institution. At the same time, and for several years preceding, three deaf-mutes of the name of Bolling, belonging to the Virginia family of that name, were also under the care of Braidwood, and were said to have been remarkably well educated.

In the beginning of 1812, John Braidwood, a grandson of Thomas Braidwood, came to America, with the design of setting up a school for deaf-mutes on a magnificent scale. Col. William Bolling, a brother of the three deaf-mutes just mentioned, having himself children afflicted with the same privation, invited young Braidwood to his house, and furnished him with funds to establish a boarding school for the instruction of deaf-mutes, proposed to be located in Baltimore. Possessed of talents and skill as a teacher, Braidwood was totally deficient in steadiness and moral principle. He squandered in dissipation and debauchery the funds entrusted to him, and after a succession of failures, resulting from his weakness, he finally died a victim to the bottle. In the course of his melancholy eccentricities, he made his way to New York, and collected a few deaf-mutes to form a school in that city, which, however, was soon broke up, like those in Virginia, by his own misconduct.

His undertaking in New York attracted the attention, among others, of DR. SAMUEL AKERLY, afterward one of the earliest and most efficient friends of the New York Institution, of which he was, for ten years, at once physician, secretary, and superintendent, and also the compiler of an early volume of "Elementary Exercises for the Deaf and Dumb," published in 1821, and not without merit in its day, though long since laid aside.

In 1816, William Lee, Esq., on his return from Bordeaux, France, where he had been consul, brought a circular letter from Mr. F. Gard, the distinguished pupil of the Abbe St. Sernin, and for many years a teacher at the Institution of Bordeaux. The letter was written in excellent English, which M. Gard had studied, and was addressed to "Philanthropists of the United States," and contained an offer of himself as teacher of the deaf and dumb. Mr. Lee handed it to SAMUEL L. MITCHELL, M.D., a physician in this city, and a man eminent in his day for learning, philanthropy and social influence. DR. MITCHELL'S sympathies were at once aroused, and he conversed with Rev. Mr. Stanford, who, as has been mentioned, had met a number of deaf-mutes in the course of his ministrations, and with DR. AKERLY, whom he knew as a man with a heart open to every call of benevolence. These three gentlemen called a meeting at the house of Rev. Mr. Stanford, at which were present, besides themselves, Gen. James Mapes, Elisha W. King, John B. Scott, Silvanus Miller, R. Wheaton, James Palmer, Nicholas Roome, and Rev. Alexander McLeod. This meeting resulted in another more public, at Tammany Hall, at which the feasibility of instructing the deaf and dumb was demonstrated by evidence, which Dr. Mitchell had collected; and then arose the more practical question as to whether there were enough deaf-mutes in the city to justify the establishment of a school. The outcome was the first census of deaf-mutes ever made in this country. The committee appointed presented, at a third meeting on January 23d, 1817, reports from seven of the ten wards of the city, giving the names and residences of sixty-six deaf-mutes. The population of the city was 120,000, which showed a proportion of 1 to 1,818. It was believed by some that these could be accommodated at one school, and consequently those belonging to the City of New York could be sent to the school under Rev. Dr. Gallaudet at Hartford, Conn., which might be injured by another school in New York City. Therefore, further proceedings in New York were considered by some as unnecessary. These and other reasons were urged at the time, and had a preponderating influence on the majority of the gentlemen present, with the result that the public meetings were adjourned sine die.

The gentlemen who first met on this interesting subject, were still firm in their purpose, and the meetings which were subsequently convened, were attended by those only who wished a school established in New York. In the Spring of 1817, they accordingly met and organized a list of officers and directors, at the head of which was the HON. DEWITT CLINTON, and a petition was presented to the Legislature for an Act of Incorporation. The high character of the applicants, and the unexceptionable, though novel, nature of the application, insured a ready and favorable hearing, and on the 15th of April, 1817, the New York Institution for the Deaf and Dumb acquired a legal existence with the usual corporate privileges. By an interesting coincidence, this was the same day that the school at Hartford was opened for the reception of pupils. On the 22d of May, 1817, the board of directors met for the first time. Their first act was to appoint a committee to write to England for a teacher, under the impression that the system of articulation, introduced by Braidwood, would be of more value than the French system, which discarded it. No answer was received till the summer of 1818, when the terms demanded were so exorbitant that it was impossible to accede to them.

On the twenty-fourth of March, 1818, the deaf and dumb of New York were collected in the court room of the City Hall, and lent an affecting influence to an address delivered by Dr. MITCHELL to an assemblage of the prominent ladies and gentlemen of the city, upon the necessity of making provision for their education. On the twentieth of May of the same year, Mr. ABRAHAM O. STANSBURY, a gentleman of liberal education, who had been a year in the asylum at Hartford, in charge of the administrative department, occupied a room which the city authorities had kindly set apart in the almshouse, and whom, after waiting in vain to hear from Europe, the directors of the New York Institution had engaged to take charge of their new school. Around him were grouped four young deaf-mutes, who had been brought to him that morning, and whom he was in the act of teaching the letters of the manual alphabet. They were to live at home and come to him every day. Before the close of the year 1818, had been gathered thirty-three pupils, and Miss Mary Stansbury had been engaged as an additional teacher. Twenty-four of these pupils were day scholars, and nine were boarders, who, with the other additions during the first eleven years, were accommodated in rooms hired at 41 Warren Street for their benefit. Some of these were paying pupils, but the expenses of the majority were defrayed by charitable contributions, and by the City of New York, which agreed to make an annual appropriation of $400.

At the Annual Meeting of the members of the institution, composed of ladies and gentlemen who had agreed to pay three dollars annually, or thirty dollars in one sum, held on the third Tuesday of May in that year, in accordance with the terms of the charter, Dr. MITCHELL was elected President, in place of DE WITT CLINTON, who, having been elected Governor, felt constrained to retire. In the spring of 1819, as the number of pupils had reached forty-seven, it was found impossible to support the institution on the limited resources they could command, and DR. AKERLY, as secretary of the Board of Trustees, accompanied by MR. STANSBURY and eleven of his pupils, proceeded to Albany, and held an exhibition before the Legislature. The result of the favorable impression thus created was the passage, on the 13th of April, 1819, of two Acts—one making a direct appropriation of $10,000 from the State treasury, and the other securing to the institution a moiety of the tax on lotteries in the City of New York, from which, for fourteen years thereafter, a considerable part of its income was derived.

In June following, MR. HORACE LOOFBORROW was engaged as an assistant teacher. In June, 1821, a further grant was obtained from the Legislature of $2,500, and on the 16th of April, 1822, was passed an Act appropriating $50 each per annum for thirty-two indigent State pupils, four of whom were to be sent from each Senate district, and authorizing the supervisors of any county in such district to send to the institution, at the expense of the county, any deaf-mutes not provided for by the preceding arrangement. In this way, it was thought, no deaf-mute need be left without instruction. The term of instruction was, however, unfortunately limited to three years. In the meantime, important changes had taken place in the organization of the institution. MR. STANSBURY departed for Europe in May, 1821, and MR. HORACE LOOFBORROW was made Principal. The administrative department of the institution was placed in the hands of DR. SAMUEL AKERLY, as superintendent and physician, who occupied this post till February, 1831. In 1827, an Act of the Legislature was passed, granting $10,000 to aid in the erection of buildings for the permanent use of the institution, coupled with three conditions: 1st. That the directors should raise an equal amount; 2d. That the location and plans should receive the approval of the Superintendent of Common Schools and the expenditures be accounted for to the State Comptroller; 3d. That the institution should be subject to the inspection of the Superintendent of Public Schools, this officer being, at the same time, authorized to visit other institutions for the deaf and dumb, and to suggest to the directors such improvements in the system of instruction as might seem to him desirable.

The directors having complied with all the conditions, on the 19th of October, 1827, the corner-stone of the new building was laid on Fiftieth Street, between the Fourth and Fifth Avenues, by the Hon. Azariah C. Flagg, Secretary of State, and ex officio Superintendent of Common Schools, in presence of a large assemblage of friends of the institution. The site selected was an acre of ground donated by the city, but some ten acres of land adjoining were leased for the use of the pupils.

For one who sees it now, densely built up with elegant stone structures, palatial dwellings, churches, hotels, the college, and the cathedral, it is difficult to realize that this was then a rural spot, surrounded by green fields, woods and meadows, and reached only by country roads.

The building was dedicated on the 30th of September, 1829. The address on the occasion was delivered by REV. JAMES MILNOR, D.D., Rector of St. George's Church, who, at the election in May, had been chosen as the successor of DR. MITCHELL, in the office of President. Though the cost had exceeded the original estimate by $15,000, amounting in all to $35,000, the entire amount, except $10,000 given by the State, was secured by the directors, who thus far exceeded the conditions imposed upon them by law.

MR. STANSBURY had not been a teacher at Hartford, and his ideas on the method of instruction were rather crude and vague. Consequently, at New York, experience was as yet wanting, and the first teachers, themselves groping in the dark, endeavored, by Dr. Watson's work on deaf-mute instruction, to teach articulation, at least to such of their pupils as retained a remnant of speech or of hearing. The results attained, as might be expected, were so unsatisfactory that the attempt was soon abandoned. MR. LOOFBORROW endeavored to reduce to practice the directions given in the works of Sicard, with such modifications as his own experience and ingenuity suggested. He was a man of intelligence and energy, and had he been better seconded in the department of instruction, his success, in many instances very creditable, would have been greater and more uniform. But, with the exception of one worthy lady teacher, and of a gentleman who continued but a year or two, his assistants were inadequate to the work. Moreover, the signs used by him and his assistants were often clumsy and arbitrary, as compared with those Mr. Clerc brought from the school of Sicard and Bebian ; nor was this the main disadvantage. The large number of pupils who attended irregularly as day scholars, not only made unsatisfactory progress themselves, but hindered the progress of their classes. Owing to the deficiency of well-qualified teachers, there was less moral and religious control exercised over the pupils than was desirable, and the school began to suffer in comparison with the neighboring ones at Hartford and Philadelphia.

This popular opinion affected even the Legislature of the State, and, as has been noted, on the occasion, in 1827, of the grant to aid in the erection of permanent buildings, the condition was annexed, that the Institution should be subject to the official inspection of the State Superintendent of Common Schools, and that high officer was directed "to ascertain by comparison with other similar institutions, whether any improvements can be made." Mr. Flagg visited the Institutions at Hartford and Philadelphia, and made a careful comparison of their systems of instruction with that which had been pursued in New York. The consequence of his examinations and recommendations were that, after a contest of two or three years between the party that supported the old teachers and the party that desired to place the school on higher ground, a change of men and measures was resolved on.

The labors and anxieties connected with erecting a suitable building having been brought to an end, the directors now turned their attention to making improvements in the internal management, and especially in the personnel of the corps of instruction. Under the inspiring guidance of their new president, they inaugurated measures designed to give the institution a leading position in this country and in the world. Dr. MILNOR visited Europe in 1830, at his own expense, and inspected a large number of institutions. On his return, he brought with him, from the Paris Institution, Prof. Leon Vaisse, an instructor who held a high rank in the corps of the Paris Institution, to which he returned after some years of service in New York, and where he was successively made vice-principal and principal.

The services of HARVEY P. PEET, A.M., who had been associated with Dr. Gallaudet in the Hartford Institution as an instructor since the year 1822, and had, during most of the time, had charge of the administrative department of that institution, were soon after engaged to combine, under one head, the hitherto separate offices of principal and superintendent.

From this dates a new era in the history of the institution. MR. PEET (afterwards known as DR. PEET, by virtue of the title of LL.D., conferred upon him by the Regents of the University of the State of New York), entered upon his duties on the 1st of February, 1831, and at once, with characteristic vigor, began to introduce the changes which his experienced eye found necessary. He was a man of judgment and indefatigable energy, and he left nothing unattempted that would redound to the benefit and reputation of the institution. He always kept it before the public eye, both in the city and at the Capital. He procured teachers who had the making of men that would be considered eminent in any profession, as will be seen in the list of instructors employed in the Institution in his time, and which appears at the close of this sketch. He prepared and published a course of instruction for the deaf and dumb, and originated and furthered, during his life, a system of conventions of teachers of the deaf, which have continued to the present time. He constantly contributed himself, and urged his associates to contribute, articles for various periodicals, chiefly the American Annals of the Deaf, supported by all the institutions in the country, and in every way inspired enthusiasm in his associates as well as in his pupils. The result was that the institution gained a full measure of that public favor that was essential to its prosperity.

The period of instruction was lengthened at various times, showing a gradual advance in correct public sentiment. The law of 1820 allowed but three years to each State pupil. This period was extended, in 1825, to four years, and, in 1830, to five. Two years more were added to the term in 1838, for such pupils, usually about one-half of the whole, as desired to continue, and gave promise of profiting by the extension. Again, in 1853, the Legislature gave its sanction to the High Class, established the year before, by authorizing the continuance of those State pupils selected as suitable members of such a class, for three years' instruction in the higher branches of education after the completion of the regular term. A similar extension of the regular term, and the same privilege for the more deserving, of remaining an additional term as members of the High Class, was granted to its State pupils by the State of New Jersey, which sent part of its deaf-mutes to the New York Institution up to the date of the opening of the Institution at Trenton, in 1883. Finally, the term reached eight years, and additions were made to the number of State pupils, till, by the act of 1862, every indigent deaf-mute in the State, between the ages of twelve and twenty-five, was entitled to education at the public expense. The number of pupils was, also, steadily increased by the wide dissemination of notices of the Institution circulated in its Annual Reports ; by the union with the New York Institution, in 1836, of the Central Asylum, established in 1821 at Canajoharie, N. Y.; by sending through the State to seek out the uneducated deaf ; and by a tour, in which DR. PEET visited every city, and many towns of importance, in the State.

The buildings at Fiftieth Street were twice enlarged, and a third addition was in contemplation, when it became evident that the out-of-door space surrounding the Institution would be unfavorably contracted by the construction of new streets and avenues.

Meanwhile the Directors had acquired a title to the premises they had hitherto leased, and it was thought that it would be a wiser policy to sell their land, which had appreciated in value, and purchase a site further removed from the denser portion of the city. They accordingly, with the permission of the Commissioners of the Land Office, sold their buildings and grounds, which subsequently became the site of Columbia College, and purchased of Colonel James Monroe his beautiful country seat known as FANWOOD, on Washington Heights, embracing thirty-seven and a half acres of land, and commanding a beautiful view of the Hudson River, which forms its western boundary. This beautiful demesne derived its title from the favorite child of he who gave the country the era of good feeling, and, with fitting coincidence, it subsequently became the cognomen of a beautiful little deaf child, who found in the Institution the first mother and home she had ever known. The original purchase, from municipal necessities caused by the extension of streets and boulevards, has been reduced to some twenty-six acres. The arrangements and proportions of the new edifice were made the subject of profound study and reflection, and resulted in a plan and elevation which were regarded by all familiar with the needs of such an institution as combining more points of excellence than any that had been yet adopted. This fact is evidenced by the numerous suggestions the buildings have furnished to other institutions of this class, which have copied them more or less closely in later structures.

The corner-stone of this edifice was laid on Tuesday, November 22d, 1853, under the superintendence of Hon. Jacob A. Westervelt, the Mayor of the City of New York, and was an occasion of the deepest interest. A little over eight years before, on the 8th of April, 1845, had occurred an event which carried deep grief to all the friends of the institution. DR. MILNOR, who for nine years had held the office of vice-president of the institution, and had been for the last fifteen years of his life its president, gratuitously devoting more time and labor to its interests than any of his associates or predecessors in the board of directors, died after an illness of only a few hours. At the annual meeting of the society in the May following, ROBERT C. CORNELL, who had been one of its vice-presidents, was elected to the vacant seat, "but, even in the hour of his election, the hand of death was laid upon him, and the society separated with congratulations on their choice, only to have their second bereavement," Mr. Cornell dying a short time after his election.

N. Y. INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB AS PROPOSED.—Building opened, Dec. 4, 1856.

PLAN OF INSTITUTION BUILDINGS AT FANWOOD.

The Board of Directors then selected DR. HARVEY P. PEET as their president, and combined in one the offices of president and principal. He had, therefore, occupied a position of peculiar prominence in all the proceedings looking to the erection of the new buildings, and on the day which realized the hopes of years, he had been selected to deliver the principal address to an audience composed of gentlemen occupying high positions in church and state and society, of teachers of the deaf from different parts of the country, and a large number of graduates of the institution. By the 4th of December, 1856, the new building was so far completed as to justify the removal, on that day, of the pupils, then numbering three hundred and fifteen souls, to their new house on the banks of the Hudson River.

The grounds occupied by the institution comprise, at the present time, about twenty-six acres, and are located on the Hudson River, at Washington Heights, between One Hundred and Sixty-second and One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Streets. The entrance to the grounds are at the junction of Amsterdam Avenue and Kingsbridge Road, near One Hundred and Sixty-third Street. The buildings occupy a portion of the lawn at an elevation of one hundred and twenty-seven feet above the river—fronting westward.

The buildings—including the front, wings, and school-house in the rear, form a quadrangle of two hundred and forty feet front, and more than three hundred feet in depth. Within the quadrangle is a fifth or central building. The shops and other out buildings occupy convenient locations to the north and east of the boys' wing and school-house. The four exterior buildings have each four stories, including the basement—the central building only three—the chapel which occupies its upper part having an elevation equal to both the upper stories.

The front building is one hundred and fifty feet long, by fifty-five deep—besides a projection of twelve feet in the centre, from which a piazza projects. Entering by this piazza, there is an entrance hall of twenty feet wide and forty deep, terminating on the great staircase, and crossed at that end by a corridor of ten feet wide, which runs the whole length of the building, one hundred and fifty feet. There are corresponding corridors in each of the stories above, leaving the rooms on each side twenty feet deep, from the doors upon the corridors to the front or rear windows. From each extremity of the corridors, as seen in the plan, halls extend to the connections with the wings, and the staircases in the towers.

On either side of the entrance hall is a reception room for visitors, and a director's room. The hall itself is lined with cabinets containing valuable mineralogical and conchological collections, and a fine exhibit of birds and curiosities from Ceylon, the islands of the Pacific and the north-west coast, with specimens of the various woods originally found on the grounds of the Institution. The large space in the wall near the door is occupied by Mr. John Carlin's masterpiece, which he bequeathed to the school. In the reception room are cases for the library, in which are over 4000 volumes, including one of the finest collections of works on the Deaf and their instruction in existence. On the same floor are rooms for the principal and for the matron. The second story contains rooms for the teachers who lodge and board in the institution, for such visitors as may have claims to special attention, and for other purposes. In the upper story are dormitories for the pupils of the female department, and the hospital for ordinary cases of sickness—a special building for contagious diseases, known as the Cottage Hospital, near Fort Washington Avenue, is far removed from the main buildings—the basement of this building contains rooms for domestics, store-rooms, etc.

Each of the wings is one hundred and twenty feet by forty-six. Entering one of them through the passage or hall leading from the central corridor, you find on the first floor the saloon or sitting room for the pupils, one hundred and six feet by forty-two in clear interior space, and sixteen feet to the ceiling. In these spacious and lofty rooms, well warmed in winter, and well ventilated at all times, the pupils have seats, tables for reading, or study, or composition, in the evening, and at such other fragments of time as reading and study may be order. The evening light here, as in the other rooms, is furnished by gas.

In the basement of the wings are wash and bathing rooms; in the second story, separate dormitories, wardrobes, etc.; and in the upper story of each an open dormitory, of size corresponding to the sitting room below, and of equal height. Instead of the pillars which, in an ordinary building, would be required to support the floors in rooms of such dimensions, the floor of the dormitory is braced up by trusses, and supports the floor below it by iron rods. By this expedient, the four great rooms, the saloons below, and the dormitories above, are left entirely clear of pillars or supporting rods. Each of these four rooms has a clear content of over seventy thousand cubic feet, which, with the provision for the renewal of the air by ventilation, and the height of the ceiling, secures to each pupil abundant breathing space and pure air. The staircases in the towers, afford to the principal and matron access to the apartments of the pupils under their care. The main staircases to the dormitories are at the eastern end of each wing, and to give every guarantee of safety in case of fire, are constructed of stone. In addition to this the main building, with the adjoining wings, are connected by an improved system of fire signals centering in the main hall, from whence a special alarm can be sent at a moment's notice to the City Fire Department.

The Academic Building is in the rear of the main building, and is one hundred and fifty feet by fifty-five, containing class, lecture, library, laboratory and cabinet rooms, with the art studio and necessary offices. Each class has a large, lofty, well-lighted and well-ventilated room, of an average size of twenty by twenty-eight feet. In the basement of this building, are the air chambers of the heating and ventilating apparatus, store rooms, wash rooms, etc. The exterior of the building is furnished with an elaborate system of fire-escapes to facilitate safe and speedy exit in case of necessity.

The central building contains on its first floor the dining-room, under which in the basement are the kitchens, and on its second floor the chapel, eighty by sixty feet, and over thirty feet high, with ten lofty windows. It is also ventilated by a large skylight in the roof. At the east end, against the wall, is the platform, raised three feet above the floor, for the officiating teacher, while the pupils and spectators occupy seats rising successively one behind the other. As the worship in which the deaf and dumb can share must be addressed to the eye only, care is taken that every eye in the congregation can rest with ease on the platform, and that the light should be thrown that way. It will be seen by the plan that the pupils have access to the chapel by corridors from their respective sitting rooms, each department entering by its own door ; and after the morning prayer and explanation by signs of a text of scripture, each department passes along another corridor to the school-house. The same corridors also give access to the dining-room under the chapel. From the first building, the access to the chapel is by the great staircase. In the chapel, besides the religious exercises by which school is opened each day, public worship in the language of gestures, intelligible to all the pupils, is held every Sabbath. Here, also, public exercises are held on certain days of the year.

On the northern boundary of the grounds is located the building containing the shops, erected in 1869, and containing trade schools for instruction in printing, carpentry, cabinet-making, shoemaking, chair-caning and tailoring. The building is 100 feet by 30, presenting three stories of brick above a basement of stone, and its construction was completed at a cost of nearly $20,000.

The steam apparatus is placed in a separate building, at least one hundred feet from the main buildings. From this boiler-house steam is conducted to the air chambers under the school-house, already mentioned. In this room, which is some twenty-one by thirty feet, and sixteen feet high, fresh air is heated by the steam, and then distributed by the action of a fan-blower, through air chambers and flues under and from beneath, through all the buildings. Each room has a separate flue connecting with the air passage in the base of each building, and a separate flue to carry off the vitiated air.

From this sketch of the internal arrangements, we return to the external features of the main building as it now appears. The basement is of a beautiful, speckled-gray granite, from Seal Harbor Island, Maine, as are also the window sills and lintels. The upper stories are indicated by courses of the same material, running round the entire building. The walls, with the exceptions just indicated, are of brick, as equally durable and far more economical than stone ; and to save the expense of frequent renewals of paint or stucco, the external walls are faced with yellow Milwaukee brick, giving, with the granite, an agreeable contrast of light tints. The roofs are of slate, with a cornice of granite. The other architectural features of the buildings will appear from an inspection of the plans.

Work on the preparation of the site was begun in the summer of 1853. Much expense and delay was incurred on one part of the site, in removing a vast deposit of rock ; and on another, in removing a quicksand, the place of which had to be filled up with concrete, to the depth, in some places, of eighteen feet. There being a water front to the property, a wharf was built, on which the building materials were landed from the river, and carried up the hill, at first by teams, on a graded road ; but this road being too circuitous, a railroad was laid on a rapidly inclining plane directly down the face of the hill, up which cars loaded with brick, stone, lime, etc., were drawn by stationary steam power, at a great saving in the cost of transportation. The buildings were put up chiefly by day labor, under the direction of competent engineers and superintendents. The cost including the shops, boiler-house, and steam and warming and ventilating apparatus, exceeded four hundred and fifty thousand dollars, exclusive of the cost of the grounds.

To give a better idea of the magnitude of the buildings, we add that the areas of the several floors in the five main buildings is very nearly three acres ; about double the area of the buildings on Fiftieth Street. As the latter were found capable of comfortably accommodating from 220 to 240 pupils, these buildings can afford comfortable accommodations for at least 550 deaf-mutes, with principal, teachers, officers and the necessary domestics.

Two years after the opening of the new building, DR. H. P. PEET, finding that his new field of operation would tax to the utmost the energies of his life, and believing that the interests of the institution would be subserved by the selection for president of some other member of the board, resigned that office, continuing, however, to discharge the duties of principal, which had so long been merged in those of president. He was succeeded by BENJAMIN R. WINTHROP, Esq., a gentleman who had for many years taken the deepest interest in the institution, and had, as one of the directors, contributed very greatly to its success, by generous devotion, without compensation, of time, money and influence. After the removal of MR. WINTHROP to France, where he had taken up his permanent residence, SHEPHERD KNAPP, Esq., a gentleman identified with the growth and progress of the city and of the institution, the oldest living director except DR. PEET, was, in 1869, elected president. He was, on his resignation two years after, succeeded by REV. WILLIAM ADAMS, D.D., who continued in the office and performed the duties with zeal and ability till his demise, on the 31st of August, 1880. The office was next filled by EX-JUDGE HENRY E. DAVIES, LL.D., of the Court of Appeals, who was succeeded by the HON. ERASTUS BROOKS, whose valued counsels, extensive information and active services, were of inestimable advantage to the school. Upon his death, on September 30th, 1886, the vacancy was filled by the election of HON. ENOCH L. FANCHER, LL.D., the present president.

HON. ENOCH L. FANCHER, LL.D.

With the superior accommodations offered by the new buildings and improved facilities, the number of pupils continued to increase, till, in 1863, a law was passed which authorized the supervisors of the counties to send to the Institution, at the expense of the counties, all indigent deaf-mutes between the ages of six and twelve. The passage of this Act was dictated by the most humane considerations, inasmuch as it was ascertained that there were many young deaf-mutes in almshouses, under circumstances likely to be detrimental to them in various ways, and others running about the streets in our large cities, exposed to every danger, and affected by influences likely to inflict permanent injury upon their morals and manners. With this additional provision, the number of pupils in 1867, fifty years after the Institution was founded, amounted to 439, and in 1870 to 616, the highest number ever reached. From which time the number has decreased, owing to the establishment of seven other institutions for the deaf in the State, and one in New Jersey, so that the attendance at this writing is about 300.

On the 26th of June, 1866, the closing day of the academic year, was celebrated the semi-centennial anniversary of the Institution. There were in attendance a great number of invited guests, among whom was a large representation from the American Asylum at Hartford.

The character of the occasion may be inferred from the following order of exercises.

1. The chair occupied by Benjamin R. Winthrop, President of the Institution.
2. Reading the order of exercises By Joseph W. Patterson.
3. Prayer..... By Rev. Francis Vinton, D.D.
4. Reading letters from invited guests, By Rev. Thomas Gallaudet, D.D.
5. Introductory Address.....By the President.
6. Semi-centennial Address,
By Harvey P. Peet, LL.D., Principal of the Institution.
7. Address.....By Rev. William Adams, D.D.
8. Other Addresses.
9. Exercises by the pupils.
10. Benediction.

In the report of the proceedings, it is observed that "the interest of the occasion was greatly enhanced by the fact that DR. H. P. PEET, after more than thirty-six years' service as the head of the Institution, was about to retire, and hence his address was a farewell. His son, ISAAC LEWIS PEET, LL.D., who had been for fifteen years Vice-Principal of the Institution, had just been unanimously elected to succeed him."

A second semi-centennial celebration was held by the graduates of the Institution, on the occasion of the second biennial meeting of the Empire State Association of Deaf-Mutes, August 28th, 29th and 30th, 1867. At this remarkable gathering were assembled about five hundred deaf-mutes from all parts of the country as guests of the Institution, probably the largest meeting of the kind the world ever saw. The event of greatest interest on this occasion was the presentation to DR. H. P. PEET, on behalf of his former pupils, of a valuable silver plate.

Though DR. PEET had retired from the active duties of principal, he did not entirely dissolve his connection with it, but continued to live in the Mansion House on the grounds, with the title of Emeritus Principal, and by his counsel and co-operation strengthened the hands of his successor till his death, which took place on the 1st of January, 1873.

About three years before, had occurred a change in the administration of the Institution which was the result of a still further increase of pupils, the average attendance having reached 535. The Institution was divided into two co-equal departments, one of which, the educational department, was placed under the Principal, and the other, the administrative department, was committed to a Superintendent. The first superintendent was DR. BROOKS, who had acquired a reputation as an efficient manager of an Institution, at the New York Juvenile Asylum, of which he had been superintendent. In him the offices of superintendent and physician were united. He retired in the spring of 1873, and was succeeded by WILLIAM PORTER, M.D. The Legislature of 1874 removed the word indigent from its statute book, so far as the deaf and dumb are concerned, and offered the benefits of education to all alike, whether the children of rich or poor parents, thus removing the temptation from parents to abridge the term of instruction, either by deferring sending their children to school too late or by removing them too early, as had very often been the case.

DR. PORTER, after ten years of efficient service as superintendent and resident physician, retired in 1883, and was succeeded by DR. JAMES C. CARSON, who, in September, 1884, resigned to accept a more lucrative position in the State's service. DR. GEORGE S. KNICKERBOCKER became superintendent in October, 1884, but resigned in June, 1885, and was succeeded by MR. CHAUNCEY N. BRAINERD, who had been connected with the Institution for eighteen years as steward. As superintendent, MR. BRAINERD managed the administrative department with singular ability and far-seeing judgment till his retirement in February, 1893.

One effect of the law of 1863, allowing the admission of pupils of six years of age, was largely to increase the proportion of small children, and it became necessary to classify and separate them from the older pupils.

On the 9th of February, 1875, the Executive Committee of the Board, to whom was referred the question of separating children under twelve years of age from the older children, recommended as wise policy the speedy selection, for purchase, of 100 to 200 acres, which would suffice for all future wants of the Institution, and to which it could be removed as necessity might require.

A new Committee of Observation was appointed, consisting of five members of the Board of Directors, who, at once addressed themselves to the duty thus imposed. In June, 1878, GEORGE A. ROBBINS.

the Hoge Place, at Tarrytown, was purchased for the Institution, and a building was opened there, for the use of the Primary Department, on Tuesday, October 14th, 1879. Upon this occasion MR. GEORGE A. ROBBINS, the Treasurer of the Institution, speaking for the Board, gave an outline of the causes which led the Directors to prepare for a prospective removal of the Institution from its present site, a purpose which had been under consideration for several years previously. After three years' experience, it was found that the additional expense caused an annual deficiency of several thousand dollars, and consequently this branch was permanently closed at the end of the summer term in 1883, the young pupils being, thereafter, domiciled at the Mansion House adjoining the Institution, and the idea of removing from the present site being permanently abandoned.

Following the custom which has long obtained at the Institution, of having the school represented at foreign congresses of Teachers of the deaf, the Board of Directors, in addition to appointing the principal to represent the school, selected two members of the Board as special delegates to the International Congress for the Amelioration of the Condition of the Deaf, held in Milan, Italy, September 6th to 11th, 1880. One of the gentlemen thus selected was the REV. CHARLES A. STODDARD, D.D., the present first Vice-President of the Institution, whose report of the work of the congress and his deductions therefrom is appended to the Sixty-Second Annual Report of the Institution, for the year 1880. In the same publication also appears another report on the Congress from the pen of REV. THOMAS GALLAUDET, D.D., a member of the Board and likewise a delegate to the Congress.

At the New Orleans Exhibition, held in 1884-85, the Institution presented an exhibit consisting of contributions by the intellectual, industrial and artistic departments, arranged according to the accompanying illustration. Other institutions for the deaf in various parts of the country were represented by special exhibits, but the New York Institution was awarded the diploma for excellence.

On August 23d to 27th, 1890, the Twelfth Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf and the First International Convention in America was held at the Institution, the three hundred and fifty delegates and their friends being entertained as the guests of the Institution. Forty years previous, in August, 1850, the initial convention of this body was held at the Institution, and of those who attended the first gathering, but two were present at the last, REV. DR. THOMAS GALLAUDET, and DR. ISAAC LEWIS PEET. A pleasant feature of the convention was the presentation to DR. PEET, by a number of his former pupils, of a life-size oil portrait of himself, and which now adorns the library of the Institution.

The next important event in the history of the Institution was the retirement, on January 1st, 1893, of the venerable ISAAC LEWIS PEET, LL.D., who had been actively engaged in the Institution as a teacher for nearly forty-eight years, the last twenty-five as Principal. He was honored by the Board of Directors with the title of Principal Emeritus.

His mantle fell upon ENOCH HENRY CURRIER, M.A., who had been intimately associated with him for nearly twenty-one years, and was thoroughly prepared, by familiarity with the theory and practice of deaf-mute education, to assume the responsible position of Principal. Within a month of this appointment, PROFESSOR CURRIER, as Principal, was further honored by being placed in sole charge of the institution, the system of double responsibility, which had obtained for twenty-three years, being finally abolished. The Institution thus resumes its earlier organization with all the advantages of possessing at its head a man fully equipped for the position.

The system of instruction in use is known as the Combined System, in contradistinction to all such systems as confine themselves to some exclusive method of expression. Its instruments are writing, the manual alphabet, pantomime, significant gestures for individual words, lip-reading, articulation, and grammatical symbols, and the special training afforded by the Kindergarten drill ; consequently the system is eclectic, rather than partisan, the needs of the individual pupil determining the special course to be followed. Thus nothing is rejected which it is thought may be conducive to the benefit of the pupils.

Great attention is paid to the dictation of sentences by means of the manual alphabet, the pupils receiving aid from the teacher when the meaning of any word is unknown to them. They are then encouraged to give their version of what has been dictated, on the large slates with which the walls of the class-rooms are lined.

ENOCH HENRY CURRIER, M.A.

In this way, phraseology appropriate to all the affairs of life is systematically poured in upon their minds. They become familiar with forms, words, phrases and idioms. Language becomes a second nature, and appeals to their minds practically in the same manner that it does to hearing persons; and the longer the process is continued, the more certain is it to transfer the deaf-mute from his condition as a foreigner, to that of one "to the manner born." All this is accompanied by persistent practice in composition, a most useful form of which is keeping a daily journal of current events into which the pupil's own experience and observation largely enters.

In teaching grammar, great use is made of a system of symbols invented by the late Prof. F. A. P. Barnard, when he was an instructor in the Institution, but whose forms and application have since been modified, till now all the grammatical relations in a proposition, both general and particular, may be presented to the eye at one and the same time. By the use of these symbols, the construction of a sentence may be clearly unfolded to the pupil, so that he will understand it readily, and vice versa, he is enabled to construe any passage, so as to show his own knowledge of the connection of the words.

As the pupil progresses in language, arithmetic, geography, history, and physiology, the natural sciences and the higher studies of an academic course are gradually introduced, till he becomes familiar with the ordinary branches taught in schools for the hearing, and, when he reaches the Academic department proper, he can pursue a range of studies that gives elevation to his conceptions and independence to his modes of thought and expression. In this course, he acquires a knowledge of the physical sciences, of the higher mathematics, of the principles of rhetoric and logic, and even of mental and moral philosophy.

In addition to this, good manners, refinement and good taste, are carefully inculcated by precept and example. In furtherance of this, the instruction given in art has been found to be invaluable. All the pupils receive, each week, a lesson in drawing from the object, and a selected number have special instruction in designing, in wood carving, in clay modeling, in plaster casting, in the ornamentation of porcelain, in sketching from nature and in painting in oils and water colors.

The system of lectures by signs early inaugurated by Dr. H. P. PEET, has been continued to the present time, and is carried out in turn by all the gentlemen employed as instructors. Great use has been made of visible illustration in connection with the lectures, and the ordinary exercises in the class-room. The Institution has an excellent collection of minerals and shells, a good philosophical apparatus, and satisfactory models of the different parts of the human body. In addition to these, the fine stereopticon, together with the opaque object attachment and the microscope attachment, enable our pupils to receive instruction and entertainment almost inexhaustible.

The religious teaching introduced by DR. H. P. PEET, which consists in conveying to the pupils an idea of their relations to God and of the duties growing out of these relations, without any tinge whatever of sectarian doctrine, either Protestant or Roman Catholic or Jewish, has been continued. The result of this system is, that the pupils conform to the wishes of their parents, as they are encouraged to do, in the ecclesiastical relations they form either in the vacations or after they permanently leave the institution.

The subject of teaching articulation to the mute, and lip-reading to the deaf, has, as is well-known, engaged the attention of the directors and of all the principals of the institution. The questions connected with it were at one time regarded as of such importance that the Rev. George E. Day, D.D., formerly a teacher in this institution, but now a professor in Yale college, was especially intrusted by the Board on the occasion of two separate trips to Europe, several years apart, to investigate, first, the system which obtained in Germany, and afterward the system in vogue in Holland. The letters of instruction he received from DR. H. P. PEET, and his valuable and exhaustive reports on the subject, hold a most important place in the literature of our profession. Not content with this, however, DR. PEET, accompanied by his son, visited Europe himself, and spent six months in further inquiring into the subject.

The result of all this examination and study is that articulation holds a high place in our estimation, and continues to be regarded as an important method of expression which it is desirable to confer upon all deaf-mutes, whenever its acquisition will not require such an excess of time and labor as to interfere with their progress in other respects.

In the year 1869, a class was organized and taught by the pure oral system under the direction of Prof. Bernhard Englesman, who had but recently retired from the principalship of a school which he had founded in New York City, and which afterward became the institution now known as the New York Institution for the Improved Instruction of Deaf-Mutes. The practice inaugurated by him continued several years under Prof. Weston Jenkins and PROF. ENOCH H. CURRIER, but it was finally concluded to substitute for it the present system of giving an hour's lesson daily in articulation and lip-reading to every pupil in the Institution, making the acquisition of language dependent upon other methods.

For semi-mutes, however, who, having heard in early years, retain more or less of the spoken language of childhood, or for the semi-deaf, who possess a degree of latent hearing, sufficient to warrant aural training to render spoken sounds intelligible, too much stress cannot be laid upon the necessity of careful and thorough instruction in speech and speech reading.

The last named subject of instruction—to wit, articulation—has been modified by one of the most interesting discoveries in the history of deaf-mute education. At the instigation of Mr. Richard S. Rhoades, of Chicago, we experimented with the audiphone designed by him to enable the deaf to hear, through bone conduction, sounds in the air, not addressed to any one individual in particular. We have also used the rigid metallic ear trumpet, which has surprised deaf persons, who, without it, were absolutely unconscious of ability to perceive vocal sounds, but who were keenly sensible thereof, when these sounds were uttered within its cavity. But it was finally reserved to PROFESSOR CURRIER, by an independent discovery, to show that, through the flexible ear tube, fifty out of three hundred and seventy, or a little over one-seventh of the pupils in attendance at the time of the investigation, were not only able to hear the voices of others, but, for the first time in years, and, in most cases, in their lives, to hear their own voices.

The result of this discovery is of the greatest importance. It is not sufficient for the pupil to hear what is said to him. He must also hear himself say the same thing. In practical instruction, the teacher first speaks to the pupil, through the flexible tube inserted in his ear, and then requires him to transfer the mouthpiece to his own lips and repeat the words that have been spoken to him. This enables him to compare his own enunciation with that of his instructor, and, after repeated trials, to imitate it with an approach to exactness. But for this, he would be entirely dependent upon the ear of his preceptor, to whom he would have to look for information as to whether he was speaking correctly or not. Now, he can depend, in great measure, upon his own ear, and merely ask of his teacher that he repeat his words a sufficient number of times to enable him to make the necessary number of comparisons.

CURRIER'S CONICO-CYLINDRICAL CONVERSATION TUBE.

CURRIER'S CONICO-CYLINDRICAL CONVERSATION TUBE.

[With duplex ear-piece for the class-room.]

This education of the ear and of the voice will have the effect to enable a certain number of our pupils eventually to take their place in the society of the hearing, and to converse with all individuals who may have the kindness to address them through the mouthpiece of the tube. Of late years the difficulty involved in imparting articulation to the deaf has been diminished by an invention of Professor A. Melville Bell, which has been introduced into this country by his son, Dr. A. Graham Bell. This consists in an alphabet of sounds, and indicates, by means of appropriate symbols, the organs of speech employed and the manner in which they are affected in utterance.

One great advantage is that the pupil not only easily remembers, for the time being, what he is taught to do in this way, but retains it so long as he keeps the symbols in mind. In this way will probably be obviated the great drawback of which the old writers on the subject complained, and which is acknowledged still to exist by their modern disciples—to wit, that the pupils are apt to lose their speech when they leave school.

Our pupils are, moreover, encouraged to practice constant reading. There are now, for their use, in the library, 5,567 bound volumes and over 8,300 pamphlets. Besides these, they have the use of twenty-three folios in the Mercantile Library in this city, the institution having long since been presented with a corresponding number of shares in the Clinton Hall Association, to which the Mercantile Library is indebted for its building. On these folios, books are drawn out for them weekly by the librarian of the institution.

An important branch of instruction afforded by the Institution deserves more than passing notice—the class of blind, deaf and dumb pupils. In the fall of 1874, after being nearly three years in school, a little boy, James H. Caton, a congenital deaf-mute, had the misfortune to contract a severe illness, in consequence of which he lost the sight of both his eyes. On his recovery, after the lapse of a year, the attempt was made to continue his education in connection with one of the ordinary classes, the teacher giving him some special attention, and supplementing his work by means of monitors. This did not prove satisfactory, and it became necessary to evolve an entirely new method of instruction for this special case. This was accomplished, and the work of instruction was carried on through the sense of touch alone, by means of the manual alphabet, raised letters and the typewriter. Young Caton became an adept in the use of the typewriter, and made really remarkable advancement in the use of correct idiomatic English. In addition to this, he made rapid progress in Arithmetic, Geography, History, and all the studies of the regular and advanced courses, finally graduating with honor from the High Class.

While Caton was pursuing his studies under the new method, another blind, deaf and dumb boy, and a girl similarly afflicted, were added to the class—Richard T. Clinton and Martha Moorehouse. Clinton was twelve years of age, when he came to school, and had no knowledge whatever of language. They pursued the same course as was used with Caton, and with like success. Since then the class has been continued and has given the blessing of education to seven deaf, dumb and blind children, two of whom are now under instruction—Catharine McGirr and Orris Benson—with a fair prospect of making even greater advancement than those preceding them in the class.

Little Benson came to the Institution at the age of six, and as in the case of the other pupils of this class, had no knowledge of language, or anything else. His case seemed more difficult than any of the preceding, as his extreme youth made it necessary to place him among the younger children, and form, as it were, a new class distinct from that which the blind pupils had hitherto been placed. However, the marvelous progress this child has made within the short time he has been at school, can only be fully appreciated when his performances in response to the questions and directions of his teacher are witnessed.

Since the year 1831, great importance has been attached to giving our pupils a knowledge of some handicraft, by means of which they may support themselves in after life. The trades at present taught are printing, cabinet-making, carpentering, shoemaking, tailoring, baking, gardening, wood-carving, chair-caning, and artistic designing, for the boys; and plain sewing, dressmaking, shirt-making and cooking, for the girls.

In the Academical department, into which enter those of our pupils, who, favored by the possession of hearing in early childhood, or by an additional period of three years' instruction secured by law to thirty-six selected pupils, have attained a higher degree of advancement than falls to the lot of the majority, are pursued those studies which characterize the high schools of the State. From this department have graduated many deaf-mutes, who have occupied positions of prominence and responsibility in various avocations, to success in which they have attained, in spite of obstacles that would have disheartened them, had they been less thoroughly trained. In its proper place, in the statistics, will be found an illustrative list of the vocations at present pursued by some of our former pupils.

With these advantages, and with this record, the institution offers, to the parents of deaf-mutes, the prospect of a good education and of future usefulness and happiness for the children whose calamity they have so much lamented, and to the State, the guarantee of an equivalent for the means so willingly and liberally furnished for sustaining our work, in the intelligent, prosperous, law-abiding citizens.

The following lists of the Presidents, Principals, Superintendents, Librarians, Professors and Teachers, connected with the Institution since its opening in 1818, together with statistics with respect to the number of pupils, the causes of deafness, the success with which our pupils have met since leaving the Institution, and other tables, are fraught with much interest.

Though the causes of deafness are numerous, it is fortunate that means have been found to mitigate and almost neutralize the effect of a calamity which, but for this and kindred Institutions, might well be regarded as appalling.

The total number of different pupils who have been under instruction in the Institution at different periods, has been 3,345, of whom 1,113 were known to have been born deaf, 371 were believed to have been born deaf—a total of 1484—and 1861 became deaf from various causes, in successive periods, and at different ages, as will be seen in the tables embracing these subjects.

ALTHOUGH the education of the deaf and dumb had been carried on in Europe most successfully for many years previously, it was not until 1815 that any steps were taken to establish a school for their instruction in America. In that year a number of gentlemen in Hartford, Conn., furnished the means for sending a young clergyman, Thomas Hopkins Gallaudet, to Europe to acquaint himself with the methods of instructing the deaf employed there, with a view to their introduction in this country. Mr. Gallaudet visited Great Britain, and after endeavoring in vain to induce the heads of the English and Scotch schools to give him the desired information, he chanced to meet in London with the Abbé Sicard, the successor of the benevolent Abbé de l'Épée, who, upon learning the nature of Mr. Gallaudet's mission, cordially invited him to visit and inspect the celebrated school in Paris, of which he had charge. This invitation was eagerly accepted, and Mr. Gallaudet accompanied the abbé to Paris. Here he was given all the information that he desired, and, what was perhaps of quite as much importance, secured the services of Laurent Clerc, one of Sicard's most brilliant pupils, who returned with him to this country as a teacher.

In 1817, shortly after Mr. Gallaudet's return, the American Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb was opened at Hartford, and the work of educating the deaf in this country was fairly begun. The eight months between their arrival and the opening of the school were consumed by Mr. Gallaudet and Mr. Clerc in visiting several of the important cities of the country, among them Philadelphia, for the purpose of arousing public interest in the proposed school. In Philadelphia, on December 7, 1816, they addressed a public meeting held in Washington Hall, on South Third Street, at which the Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, William Tilghman, presided, and John Bacon acted as secretary. Great interest was aroused in the subject of the education of the deaf, and the meeting appointed a committee of prominent citizens to solicit contributions for the proposed school. The action of the meeting in taking measures to assist an enterprise without the borders of the commonwealth gave rise to a brief but spirited discussion in the public prints of the day, in the course of which the action of the meeting was as warmly defended as it was criticised.*

It is an interesting fact that about the time Mr. Gallaudet was in Paris studying the method of Sicard, a pupil of the Abbé St. Sernin, at Bordeaux, M. Gard, made overtures to several distinguished citizens of Philadelphia, and was given considerable encouragement to cross the ocean and establish a school in this city. The success of the efforts to establish the school at Hartford, and the fear that an attempt to establish a similar school elsewhere might do harm to the prospects of one or both schools, led to the dropping of the matter. The following letter written by Jonah Thompson, and published in one of the Philadelphia papers, will throw light upon a portion of the early history of deaf mute education in this country with which the public is not generally acquainted :*

* For the information in regard to the visit to Philadelphia of Mr. Gallaudet and Mr. Clerc, I am indebted to a newspaper clipping preserved in a scrap-book formerly the property of Jonah Thompson, and donated to the library of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb by his grand-nephew, John T. Morris, a member of the present Board of Directors.

THE ABBÉ SICARD,
Successor of the Abbé de l'Épée and Teacher of Laurent Clerc.

As an individual whose feelings have for some time past been considerably interested in the instruction of the deaf and dumb, I could not but regret the publication of Mr. Gard's letter in a morning paper, and beg leave to submit a few observations on the remarks accompanying it.

This letter was enclosed some months since by Mr. Lee, the American Consul at Bordeaux, to a number of respectable gentlemen in different parts of the United States, and several individuals on their own responsibility contemplated giving Mr. Gard every encouragement to emigrate to this city. The measure was, however, abandoned by information of Mr. Gallaudet's progress in the necessary arrangements for forming a school in Connecticut, uniting the advantages of the English and French mode of tuition, and thereby promoting a uniform system in the United States.

The principles of education are entirely different in those rival countries. Indeed almost as much dissimilarity prevails as exists in their respective languages. This has been occasioned by national prejudices and has prevented Mr. Braidwood and the Abbé Sicard, with their adherents in each system, from realizing the advantages which each might have derived from the other. By the French method, attention is exclusively given to the improvement of the mind of the pupil and extending his mental conceptions to the highest degree of expansion and communication by signs as well as by writing. From the necessary abstraction from other subjects, except the one immediately exciting attention, we may reasonably conclude that from minds thus improved great perfection in science will be attained. Indeed it is questionable whether more sublime ideas have ever been expressed than those communicated in writing by the pupils of the Abbé Sicard, particularly by Clerc, Massieu and Gard.

According to the Wallis and Braidwood plan, the deaf are taught to speak, which is always possible when the powers of hearing are alone suspended, and when they have sufficient intellect to receive instruction. But this is extremely difficult. It requires great labor, and, with the most perfect, the voice is very disagreeable and monotonous. The pupil is taught to utter vocal sound and to know when he utters it, but as he cannot hear, it is long before he can ascertain the meaning of his teacher.

After acquiring the power of uttering sound, he is taught that each letter produces a different motion of the muscular organs of speech which is communicated to the lips, and by steadily observing a speaker, he is able to comprehend in this way what is expressed.

THOMAS HOPKINS GALLAUDET, D.D.

As the art is still in its infancy and the different systems are the conceptions of but a few individuals, let us now promote a language combining the advantages of each, or the opportunity will be forever lost of establishing a uniform system of communication without which those taught by different tutors will be unintelligible to each other. No individuals are better calculated for this purpose than Mr. Gallaudet and Mr. Clerc, and at the first and only establishment in the United States let persons be instructed to promote the important object. With this view I should decidedly conceive any attempts at introducing Mr. Gard would be impolitic and premature.

Mr. Thompson's wise counsel was followed, and the citizens of Philadelphia gave their undivided support to the school at Hartford. No steps were taken at the time towards the founding of a school in Pennsylvania, and the establishment of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, the third oldest in the country* and now admittedly the finest and most complete school for the deaf in the world, was brought about in an altogether unlooked-for way.

There were quite a number of deaf children in Philadelphia, who were frequently to be seen wandering about the streets, exciting by their neglected appearance and uncouth gestures the laughter and ridicule of the cruel and thoughtless, and the interest and compassion of the benevolent. To one man in Philadelphia the miserable condition of these children appealed most powerfully, and led him to perform an act of practical philanthropy which deserves to be forever held in grateful remembrance. This was David G. Seixas, an humble Israelite, who kept a little crockery store on Market street, between Sixteenth and Seventeenth streets. Picking up on the streets a number of these children he clothed and fed several out of his scanty means, and, with other deaf children whom he induced to come, instructed them as best he could. What particular method of instruction he pursued is not certainly known. He was doubtless aware of the main incidents of Laurent Clerc's visit to Philadelphia, if he was not actually present at the public meeting, and he had probably read of the methods of instruction pursued at Hartford, of accounts of which the newspapers of the day were full, and with this meagre knowledge, supplemented by the crude sign language which his ingenuity devised, he was able to begin the education of his unfortunate charges. The little school, which must have been established late in 1819, or early in 1820, had eleven pupils, five boys and six girls. Notwithstanding his lack of experience the success of Mr. Seixas must have been considerable, for the fame of the little school and of its devoted teacher spread rapidly and enlisted the sympathy and support of the philanthropic people of the city.

On the ninth of April, 1820, several prominent citizens, among whom were Roberts Vaux, Horace Binney, Clement C. Biddle, Jacob Gratz, Dr. N. Chapman, William Wilkins, of Pittsburg, and Joseph Correa de Serra, the Portuguese Minister, met Mr. Seixas, by appointment, at the house of Mr. Vaux, and after a lengthy interview, decided to call a public meeting to consider the propriety of establishing an institution for the education of the deaf and dumb.

The meeting was held in the hall of the Philosophical Society, on South Third Street, on Wednesday evening, April 12. Rt. Rev. William White presided and William Meredith acted as secretary. Mr. Vaux made an address, in which he submitted a plan for organizing an institution. This plan was referred to a committee, of which Mr. Vaux was chairman. The report of this committee was submitted at a meeting held on Saturday evening, April 15. The constitution presented by the committee was adopted with some amendment, and was signed by those present. The constitution was as follows:

ARTICLE I. The Institution shall be located in Philadelphia, and supported by the annual and life subscriptions of its members, by the donations and legacies of the charitable, by such aid as the Legislature may be pleased to afford, and by the money to be received for the education of children whose parents, guardians or friends are of ability to pay.

ARTICLE II. The officers of the Institution shall be a president, four vice-presidents, a treasurer and recording secretary. They shall be ex-officio members of the Board of Directors, and their duties shall be such as are implied in their titles, or shall be prescribed by the by-laws. And said officers shall not receive any fee or compensation for their service in performing their several duties, either directly or indirectly, excepting the treasurer and secretary.

ARTICLE III. There shall be a board of twenty-four directors, members of the Institution, who shall annually, at the meeting next succeeding their election, appoint one of their number to act as corresponding secretary. Their duties shall be such as shall be defined by the by-laws. There shall also be a committee of twelve ladies selected annually by the Board of Directors at their first meeting, to aid in the management of the asylum under such provisions as may from time to time be prescribed by the by-laws.

ARTICLE IV. Any person shall be entitled to become a member by paying annually, or in gross, the sum which shall be required by the by-laws for an annual or life subscription.

ARTICLE V. The members of the Institution shall meet annually on the first Wednesday in May, in the city of Philadelphia, (at such hour as the directors may prescribe) for the election of officers and directors and the transaction of other business, and to receive the annual report of the directors. Adjourned and special meetings may be held as shall be provided by the by-laws.

ARTICLE VI. The right of membership may be relinquished, and the resignation addressed in writing to the Board of Directors shall be accepted by them; Provided, the member shall have discharged all demands due by him or her to the Institution.

ARTICLE VII. The funds of the Institution shall be at the disposal and under the management of the Board of Directors, subject, however, so far as relates to that part derived from the life subscriptions, to such restrictions as may be imposed by the by-laws, and subject also to such restrictions as may accompany the grant of aid by the Legislature. And it shall be the duty of the directors for the time being to present to the speaker of the Senate and of the House of Representatives, respectively, in the month of December, annually, a statement of the funds and expenses of the Institution, and of the number of children received and educated therein during the year immediately preceding, and of the parts of the State whence they have come, distinguishing between those who have been supported and educated gratuitously, and others.

ARTICLE VIII. Indigent children, resident anywhere within the State, shall be received into the school and asylum, maintained and educated gratuitously so far as the funds of the Institution will admit; Provided, that when more children shall be offered for the benefit of this Institution than can be received at any one time, the president and directors shall apportion their number among the several Counties of this Commonwealth, according to their representation (when application shall be made) that every County may equally receive the benefits of the same.

ARTICLE IX. The number of officers and directors may be increased or diminished, as convenience shall require, at any annual meeting of the members of the Institution, notice of the intended alteration being previously given, and twenty members, being a majority of the members present, consenting; and any general meeting shall be competent to make, alter or repeal by-laws, rules and regulations, twenty-one members being present at the same.

A third meeting was held on Wednesday evening, April 26 when the following officers and directors were elected: President, Rt. Rev. William White; Vice-Presidents, Robert Patterson, Horace Binney, Roberts Vaux, Dr. N. Chapman; Secretary, Henry J. Williams; Treasurer, John Bacon; Directors, William Meredith, John Vaughan, Clement C. Biddle, Jacob Gratz, J. N. Barker, General T. Cadwalader, William J. Duane, Samuel Archer, Paul Beck, R. Walsh, Jr., Alexander Henry, Rev. P. F. Mayer, Dr. William Price, Calender Irwin, Reuben Haines, Dr. Franklin Bache, Samuel B. Morris, W. W. Fisher, Benjamin Tilghman, Caleb Cresson, William McIlvaine, Joseph Gratz, Samuel Canby and Samuel R. Wood.

It is worthy of note, as illustrative of the abiding interest which the members of the original Board took in the welfare of the school, that most of them continued to take an active part in the management of the Institution to the time of their deaths, and that many of them are represented on the present board by descendants in the third generation.

The Board of Directors appointed a committee to confer with Mr. Seixas, with a view of securing his services as teacher, and another committee to prepare an address to the inhabitants of Pennsylvania, setting forth the objects of the Institution and soliciting pecuniary aid. At the next meeting of the Board, held May 6, it was announced that Mr. Seixas had been engaged at a salary of $1000 per annum.

Mr. Seixas was installed as principal on May 15, and the little class met for the time being at his house. On May 25 a public exhibition was given at Washington Hall, with the result of still further awakening public interest in the school. The number of pupils rapidly increased, substantial assistance was accorded the young Institution by the wealthy and philanthropic, and all things pointed to a future of rapid growth and great usefulness.

First President of the Institution.

During the summer of 1820 in accordance with the instructions of the Board, Mr. Seixas visited the Hartford school and made a careful inquiry into the methods of instruction in use there. Upon his return he reported very strongly in favor of the manual method of instruction, and urged that the directors secure a house for the exclusive use of the Institution. Accordingly, in August, a house on High (now Market) street, near Seventeenth, formerly occupied by the Widow's Society, was secured, and Mary Cowgill was appointed matron. Here the school opened in the fall of 1820.

On January 10, 1821, Mr. Seixas, with six of his pupils, gave an exhibition at Harrisburg before the members of the Legislature, and as a result an act incorporating the Institution was unanimously passed by both Houses, and received the approval of the Governor on February 8. At the same time an appropriation of $8000 was made to aid the school, and the State Treasurer was authorized to pay $160 for each deaf child educated therein, the total amount so paid, however, not to exceed $8000. The term of instruction was limited to three years.

DAVID G. SEIXAS,
First Principal of the Institution.

As a result of this generous assistance from the State the attendance rapidly increased, and before the end of the year the accommodations on West Market Street were found insufficient. A more commodious house, on the corner of Market and Eleventh streets, where the Bingham House now stands, was accordingly leased for a term of three years. In May, Charles Dillingham, a graduate of Williams College, was appointed a teacher, and in September his sister, Miss Abigail Dillingham, who had been a pupil at the Hartford school, also took charge of a class. In March, 1822, the corps of instructors was further increased by the addition of Abraham B. Hutton, who thus began a connection with the school which extended over a period of nearly fifty years, and terminated only with his death.

In October, 1821, Mr. Seixas retired from the principalship of the Institution. With some difficulty the directors of the American Asylum at Hartford were induced to release Laurent Clerc for a period of six months, and he was placed in charge of the school. During his brief stay Mr. Clerc introduced fully the methods practiced at Hartford and gave much valuable instruction to the teachers. His stay was extended to seven months, and upon his departure the school was the equal of any in the country.

HOUSE OF THE WIDOWS' SOCIETY ON MARKET STREET, Occupied by the Institution in 1821.

Lewis Weld, who held the position of first assistant at Hartford, was called to succeed Mr. Clerc. Mr. Weld was a graduate of Yale College, and had intended to enter the ministry, but was induced by Mr. Gallaudet to enter upon the work of teaching the deaf—a work to which he devoted his best energies to the day of his death.* At this time the number of pupils in the Pennsylvania Institution was fifty-one, forty of whom were State pupils. The State of New Jersey had made provisions (November 10, 1821) for the education of her indigent deaf children, and up to the time when she established an institution of her own, a considerable proportion were educated in the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb.

*His daughter, Miss Mary E. Weld, is now a valued member of the Ladies' Committee of the Institution.

Under Mr. Weld's able management the school prospered greatly. The number of pupils steadily increased and before the expiration of the lease it became evident that the accommodations at Eleventh and Market streets were inadequate and that more commodious quarters must be sought. In 1824 a site at the north-west corner of Broad and Pine streets was secured and here was erected the central portion of the buildings, which, with numerous additions and alterations, were to be the home of the Institution for nearly seventy years. The new building was occupied in December, 1825, and on December 30 following a reception was held, at which there was a large attendance of distinguished people. An eloquent address was made by the principal, Mr. Weld, and an exhibition was given of the attainments of the pupils.

THE INSTITUTION AT ELEVENTH AND MARKET STREETS, 1821-1824.

The new building afforded room for a much larger number of pupils than before, and in 1827, provisions having been made by the State Legislature, the Institution began to receive the indigent deaf children of Maryland. At a later period the State of Delaware made provisions for the education of its deaf children in this Institution.

In 1828 the Institution acquired the entire block bounded by Broad, Pine, Fifteenth and Asylum streets. In 1832 a school house was erected in the rear of the main building, thus considerably increasing the facilities of the Institution.

In October, 1830, the principal, Mr. Weld, was called to Hartford to take charge of the American Asylum, from the principalship of which Rev. T. H. Gallaudet had just retired, and A. B. Hutton was appointed to the vacancy thus created. Mr. Hutton filled the position most ably and acceptably until his death in 1870.

The long period intervening between 1830 and 1870 was marked by no startling events, but was characterized by steady growth and improvement. The efforts of the directors to give the blessing of education to the deaf of the State were liberally seconded by the Legislature, which in 1837 appropriated $20,000, and a few years later the further sum of $8000 to enable the Institution to enlarge its buildings to accommodate the increasing attendance. The two lateral wings were extended westward, and the chapel addition was built to the central portion of the building and this enlargement increased the capacity of the building to 150. The number of pupils at this time was 107. The State had sometime before extended the term of instruction to six years.

For several years the growth of the Institution was retarded by the smallness of the legislative appropriations, but in 1854 the State inaugurated a more liberal policy, and to accommodate the increased attendance the north and south wings were added to the central building. The capacity of the building was thus increased to 200.

In less than five years the building was crowded to its utmost capacity, and in 1859 the board of directors came to the conclusion that it would be advisable to sell the property at Broad and Pine streets and secure a site in the country, but within easy reach of the city. This step was all the more desirable because the property of the Institution, although originally on the outskirts of the city, was now rapidly being surrounded by new streets and dwellings. The civil war, however, with its disastrous effects upon the financial condition of the country, prevented the sale of the property on advantageous terms, and the design was abandoned for the time being. However, the desirability of a location in the country was not lost sight of and in subsequent years various plans for effecting a removal were brought forward. During the trying times of the war the demands for admission decreased somewhat, although still exceeding the ability of the Institution to grant, and this furnished an additional reason for deferring action in the matter, at that time at least. The State, however, voluntarily increased the per capita appropriation, in view of the increase in the cost of the necessities of life, and it was decided to slightly enlarge the buildings. In 1863, therefore, an additional story was added to the two wings in the rear.

On July 18, 1870, the Institution suffered the loss of its able and devoted principal, Abraham B. Hutton. Mr. Hutton died at Stuyvesant, N. Y., while on a visit to his sister. Joshua Foster, who had been a teacher in the Institution for upwards of thirty years was appointed to succeed him.

The fifteen years of Mr. Foster's principalship may be termed the transition period of the Institution. While not itself marked by any striking events or important changes, during this period were slowly shaped those forces which at a later day were destined to exert a marked influence upon the future of the Institution.

From the time of the establishment of the Institution the Board of Directors had been assisted in the management of the school, and especially in the direction of the affairs of the domestic department, by a committee of ladies. Through the exertions of this committee the inception was made in 1871 of a fund for the aid of destitute deaf-mutes, which steadily grew from year to year by donations and bequests. This fund was the means of assisting many worthy graduates to make a start in life. At a later date a portion of the income of this fund was devoted to assisting deserving graduates of the school to take a course at the

THE INSTITUTION AT BROAD AND PINE STREETS IN 1824.

National Deaf Mute College. At one time the ladies seriously considered the advisability of establishing a "nursery" at some suburban point for the training of young deaf children before they were of school age. However, the extension of the term of instruction allowed by the State, permitting the admission of children at a considerably earlier age, and the conviction founded upon experience and observation, that the proper place for a very young deaf child is at home with its mother, led the committee to defer action upon the matter.

On February 8, 1871, the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Institution was celebrated by a gathering of the graduates. The celebration began with religious exercises at St. Stephen's Church in the morning, and in the afternoon a meeting was held at Rev. Dr. Wylie's church on Broad Street, opposite the Institution. Addresses were delivered by Thomas Jefferson Trist, John Carlin, Joseph O. Pyatt and others. The exercises of the day concluded with a reception and banquet at the Institution in the evening. Some three hundred graduates were present on this interesting occasion, and as a result of the gathering a fine oil portrait of Lewis Weld, painted by John Carlin, one of the graduates, was presented to the Institution.

In spite of repeated enlargements, in 1875 it was found necessary to adopt some means to increase the capacity of the Institution, the number of pupils at that time being 225, and the number of applications for admission being far beyond the ability of the Institution to accept. Efforts had been made in vain to obtain a suitable site in the suburbs, and the city of Philadelphia had been appealed to without avail to donate a site, and the Board of Directors therefore concluded to enlarge the existing edifice. The fine brick structure occupying the whole western half of the Institution property and containing ample play-rooms and dormitories and numerous school-rooms, was accordingly erected. This improvement increased the capacity of the school to 350.

ABRAHAM B. HUTTON,
Principal, 1830-1870.

In July, 1876, the convention of the American Instructors of the Deaf and Dumb met at, and was entertained by, the Institution.

For a considerable period the Board of Directors had been considering the advisability of opening a day-school in connection with the Institution for the benefit of deaf children residing in the immediate neighborhood of the Institution. It was hoped that the establishment of a school of this kind, for which accommodations would be required only during school hours, would serve as an expedient for relieving the Institution from its crowded condition, while, at the same time, it would make it possible to extend the benefits of education to a much larger proportion of the deaf children of the city. In 1871 an inquiry was made to ascertain the number of children whose parents would be willing to send them to such a school. The number was so small, however, that the project was temporarily abandoned, though not lost sight of. In 1881 the day-school was finally opened at Seventeenth and Chestnut streets, under charge of Miss Emma Garrett, who had been in the employ of the Institution as teacher of articulation for some time. The method of instruction adopted was what is known as the "pure oral." The original intention had been to make room for the day-school at Broad and Pine streets, but on account of the difference of the methods pursued an entire separation of the two schools was deemed advisable.

The history of oral teaching in the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb is at once peculiar and interesting. The system of instruction originally adopted by the Institution was the manual or Sicard system, and for half a century the employment of no other was attempted. There are indeed vague hints of efforts to preserve and cultivate the speech of such semi-mutes as retained some power of articulation, but no systematic instruction, as we now understand it, was undertaken. In 1870, however, the Board of Directors, impressed by the reports of the success of speech teaching that reached them, sent a committee consisting of F. Mortimer Lewis, James J. Barclay, and the principal, Joshua Foster, to inspect the Clarke Institution at Northampton, Mass., and the articulation departments of the Hartford and New York Institutions. This committee was so favorably impressed that upon its return it recommended that arrangements be at once made for giving instruction in articulation to all semi-mute and semi-deaf children. Miss Rebecca Cropper was sent to New York for instruction under Professor Bernard Engelsmann, and upon her return was placed in charge of the articulation class. In 1876 Mr. Edward Crane, a pupil of Alexander Graham Bell, was placed at the head of the articulation department. The success attending this form of instruction was so marked that the Board was led to consider the advisability of introducing separate oral instruction for such pupils as retained a considerable command of speech, and, incidentally, as a means of testing the practicability of teaching speech to the congenitally deaf. When, therefore, the day-school was established it was decided to employ the oral method exclusively. Instruction in articulation at Broad and Pine streets was carried on without interruption.

The growth of the "day-school" was rapid. In 1883 the attendance was 70, and nine teachers were employed. Early in that year the accommodations at Seventeenth and Chestnut streets were found to be inadequate and the school was removed to a larger house at the corner of Eleventh and Clinton streets. The experiment of a day-school did not prove as satisfactory as had been anticipated, and in 1885 it became a boarding-school, and was known thereafter as the Branch for Oral Instruction.

At the main Institution an experimental class was formed in which the children were taught in the school-room by speech alone, but were permitted to mingle with the manually taught children out of school. A second class for this species of instruction was subsequently formed. Thus the Institution had experiments in three kinds of speech-teaching going forward at one and the same time and it was upon the practical results obtained, and not upon any mere theory, that subsequent action in regard to speech-teaching was based. In 1887 it was determined to discontinue the teaching of articulation to the pupils of manual classes, and at the present time the oral work of the school is carried on in a pure oral department, and a small oral class in connection with the manual department.

In July, 1884, the principal, Mr. Foster, resigned the position which he had so long and so honorably filled, and A. L. E. Crouter, who for a year preceding had acted as vice-principal, and who had been a teacher in the school since 1867, was appointed his successor.

The first year of Mr. Crouter's administration was marked by several important changes and improvements. The Oral Branch was enlarged so as to accommodate one hundred pupils, thus making it one of the largest oral schools in the country, the co-education of the sexes in the classes was begun and gradually extended to the entire school, and new industries were introduced in the industrial department.

In 1888 the educational work at the main Institution was divided into two departments, the primary, under F. W. Booth, as chief instructor, and the advanced, under the immediate charge of the principal.

In 1889 it became evident that a new site for the Institution must be sought at once. The accommodations both at the main Institution and at the "Oral Branch" were entirely inadequate, and it was felt that the wisest plan was to remove the Institution to a suburban point, where greater healthfulness could be secured and where there would be ample room for future growth. From the time of its organization the Institution had been the recipient of gifts and legacies from benevolent people, and during the year a bequest of two hundred thousand dollars from James and Mary Shields became available. These funds enabled the Institution to at length take the important step which it had so long had in contemplation. A tract of sixty-two acres in the northwestern portion of the city, in an elevated and healthful locality known as Mt. Airy, and situated between, and but a short distance from the suburban lines of the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia and Reading Railways, was secured, and the erection was begun shortly after of the magnificent group of buildings which now constitute the finest institution for the education of the deaf in the country.

The plan upon which the new Institution was built was the result of careful consideration of the advantages of the various styles of building adopted for large public institutions, and equally careful attention to the needs of the peculiar work carried on by the school. The general plan is a combination of the congregate and cottage style of building. At the outset it was evident that the prominence given to separate oral instruction demanded a general division of the pupils into two parts, the manually and the orally taught. It was also desirable that there should be such flexibility of plan that changes in the relative number in the two divisions might be readily made should circumstances so demand. The requirements to be met were, therefore, first, a general division of the two systems of teaching; secondly, a separation of the younger from the older pupils; thirdly, in each of these sections, a division by sex, and finally, in each of these resultant parts, a still further division into small groups and families to facilitate supervision.

It was, therefore, decided to erect four department buildings, to be known, for the present at least, as the advanced, intermediate, primary and oral departments, each complete in itself, with its own dining-rooms, dormitories, assembly rooms, play grounds, etc., and with its own school-house in the rear. The general plan of all these department buildings is the same. Each consists of a central portion, containing the dining-room, assembly-hall, office and reception room, parlor, kitchen, etc., and on opposite sides of this there are wings for the male and female pupils. In the wings there are provisions for separating the older pupils from the younger, thus dividing them into groups and greatly facilitating oversight by the officers. The assembly-room on the second floor of each department building is connected with the school-house in the rear by a covered bridge, and this latter is entirely given up to school purposes. Around these four department buildings are grouped an administration building, containing the general assembly-hall of the Institution, the general library, board-rooms and offices; a gymnasium; an industrial building, where under one roof all the varied industries taught by the school may be gathered, and finally, a boiler and dynamo house, connected with all the other buildings by tunnels, and supplying them with power, light and heat. The excellent view of the buildings and grounds of the Institution on the opposite page gives a better idea of their beauty and completeness than any written description.

On October 8, 1892, three of the four department buildings and the boiler and dynamo house were formally opened in the presence of a distinguished gathering of prominent people. Addresses appropriate to the occasion were made by George Gilpin, Rev. Dr. Joseph A. Seiss, Principal A. L. E. Crouter, President E. M. Gallaudet, Dr. A. G. Bell and Dr. Isaac L. Peet. On November 18, the school reopened in its new home. At the present writing the industrial building is rapidly approaching completion, and the Board of Directors only awaits a favorable opportunity to carry out the other details of the plan.

Thus very nearly upon the completion of three quarters of a century of faithful and successful work the Institution enters upon a new era with enlarged facilities and with a future brightened by the prospect of a constantly expanding field of usefulness and the promise of grander achievements in its noble and disinterested work. With the opening of this era this brief history appropriately ends.

A sketch of the Institution would be incomplete, however, without some reference to the nature of its educational work. We cannot enter into the details of the methods of teaching employed, but a brief outline will give an idea of the extent and thoroughness of this instruction.

The work of the school may be broadly divided into manual and oral. In the oral department the instruction is wholly by speech. Signs are entirely discarded, and as far as possible, prohibited, the aim being to make speech and speech-reading, supplemented by writing, the sole means of instruction and communication. In the manual department the instruction is by means of English, either spelled or written, the use of signs, although not forbidden to the pupils as a means of intercommunication, being reduced to a minimum, and every encouragement being given to the pupil to substitute for them either writing or spelling. In other respects the general methods of development in the two departments are similar, action writing, picture writing, and the interrogative method of testing and adding to information being largely relied upon for purposes of language teaching and mental development. The work in both departments is divided into primary and advanced stages, the former covering the first four and the latter the last six years of the term of instruction. In the former, attention is devoted principally to developing the faculties and imparting knowledge, and in the latter stage the elements of a common school education are imparted. The ultimate ends of oral and manual training are similar, the aim being to give a good English education and to prepare for college those who may desire to pursue a higher course of instruction.

The history of the Institution has been marked by the readiness displayed by the Board of Directors to adopt every improvement that gave reasonable promise of benefit to the pupils. This has been especially true in regard to methods of instruction, and while always conservative in its policy, the institution has kept fully abreast of contemporary progress. The method of instruction at first adopted was the manual or Sicard, and as no evidence was brought forward, in this country at least, to dispute its claim to superiority, it was conscientiously and zealously pursued. When, however, the success of methods of teaching the deaf speech and by speech was demonstrated, they were at once introduced into the Institution and subjected to a practical test under the eyes of the Board of Directors. Satisfactory as the results were, no undue haste was displayed to extend the scope of oral teaching until it was demonstrated beyond question that a much larger per centage of the deaf could profit by oral teaching than was generally supposed. Then, very gradually, oral teaching was extended, and at the present time the Institution is slowly and carefully advancing to that mean between systems and methods which shall assure to each and every pupil the greatest possible measure of benefit. I cannot better describe the aim of the Institution in this respect than by quoting from the able address of the principal, Mr. Crouter, on the occasion of the opening of the new buildings of the Institution at Mt. Airy :

"In the pursuit of its object this Institution recognizes all methods of acknowledged educational value; in the instruction of its pupils it employs that method that promises most benefit to the child. May it be taught to speak, it insists upon the use of pure oral methods. Should results not seem to justify the prolonged employment of such means they are discontinued and the instruction of the child is carried forward by manual methods—spelling, writing, picture-reading and signs. It is believed that in pursuing this course the great end and aim of the Institution may best be subserved, and the welfare of every pupil best be promoted. It is but right to mention in this connection that the work of the school is tending more and more toward oral methods, and that all pupils who come to us hereafter shall, by a decision of the Directors, have opportunity of profiting by that method.

As at present organized the intellectual work of the Institution is conducted in an oral department in which fully forty per cent of the attendance share in the benefits of oral methods, and in a manual department, subdivided into primary and advanced sections, wherein the instruction of the remainder is carried on by manual methods. Shall the oral department increase until it absorbs the whole or greater part of the manual department? Results alone must answer that important question. Certain it is that whatever method accomplishes most for the culture and well-being of our pupils the Board of Managers will not hesitate to adopt and carry forward with the utmost diligence and zeal.

FIRST GRADE.

- a. LANGUAGE, (oral and written).
- b. ARITHMETIC.
- c. PENMANSHIP.
- a. Articulation and Speech-reading. Nouns: objects in the classroom; articles of dress; articles of food; articles of furniture in daily use; parts of the body; names of most common animals and birds; names of classmates and teachers; divisions of time, as morning, noon, evening, day, night, days of the week, and months of the year. [The articles a, an and the are to be taught with these words; also the singular and plural forms.]

Adjectives: such as good, bad, young, old, sweet, sour, hard, soft, wise, stupid, weak, strong, pretty, homely, light, heavy, quick, slow, etc., etc.; color, as black, red, white, blue, green, yellow; numeral adjectives, as one, two, three, four, five, etc. Conjunction, and. Prepositions: in, into, out of, on, over, under, by, for, off. Pronouns: personal pronouns, I, you, he, she, it, in all cases and numbers. Verbs: to be (present and imperfect tenses,) and verbs that express simple actions, (see first two columns of verbs in the vocabulary). Simple Questions: who, what, where, do, have, can, and to be. The principal elements of a sentence are indicated and their relations to one another are shown by the use of figures.

b. Writing numbers to 20, and mental addition and subtraction. How many——?

c. Careful instruction with crayon and pencil, to be followed by pen and ink exercises in books.

SECOND GRADE.

a. LANGUAGE, (oral and written).

b. ARITHMETIC.

c. PENMANSHIP.

d. DRAWING.

a. A two months' review of First Grade work. Articulation and Speech-reading. Nouns: Names of the parts of the bodies of quadrupeds, birds and fishes; names of implements in common use about the house, barn, farm, etc. Adjectives: continued, as in First Grade, together with this, that, these, those, many, a few, several, some. Conjunctions: but and or. Pronouns: same as in First Grade, adding myself, himself, herself, and their plurals. Prepositions: from, at, through, of, before, behind, between, after, around. Verbs: second two columns of verbs in the vocabulary; present, past, future tenses, the infinitive mood; simple and compound actions; may and must. Adverbs: simple adverbs, as not, often, never, sometimes, now, soon, very, much, etc. Simple Questions: with whose, which, when, will, and may. The figures 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 are used to indicate the principal elements in a sentence, and to show their relations to one another.

b. Mental addition and subtraction in practical problems; dollars and cents; notation to 500.

c. Copy-book work.

d. On paper and board.

THIRD GRADE.

a. LANGUAGE, (oral and written).

b. ARITHMETIC.

c. PENMANSHIP.

d. DRAWING.

a. Articulation and Speech-reading. Nouns: The different classes of artisans; the articles made by each; their use, etc., the time of day; the seasons. Adjectives: their comparison—three degrees, including more, and most, each, and every, one, other, another. Conjunctions: if and because. Pronouns: the relatives who and which. Prepositions: without, among, along, near, above, below, within, etc. Verbs: present, past and future tenses continued; the infinitive and imperative moods; thorough drill on will and would, can and could. Adverbs: continued as in Second Grade. Colloquial and narrative forms. Elliptical exercises. Action and picture writing. Journal and simple stories. Figures are used to show the grammatical relations of the parts of a sentence.

b. Multiplication and division. Mental exercises in addition, subtraction, multiplication and division. Practical problems involving the four rules. Currency continued.

c. Copy-book exercises, twice a week.

d. Prang's Drawing Book, No. 1.

FOURTH GRADE.

a. LANGUAGE, (oral and written).

b. ARITHMETIC.

c. PENMANSHIP.

d. GEOGRAPHY.

e. DRAWING.

a. Articulation and Speech-reading. Nouns: continued miscellaneously; somebody, nobody and anybody. Adjectives: comparisons of, continued. Conjunctions: either—or, neither—nor, when, while, and since. Pronouns: personal and relative, continued. Prepositions: completed. Verbs: active and passive voices; exercises in the indicative, infinitive and imperative moods; have and had, may and might, shall and should. Adverbs: of time, place and manner. Elliptical exercises. Description of actions, pictures, persons, animals, and things. Historical sketches. Journals. Stories. Letter-writing. Figures are used to show the grammatical relations of the parts of a sentence.

b. Addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division. Mental and practical problems. Currency continued.

c. Copy-book exercises, twice a week.

d. Divisions of land and water. Map of the United States (outline).

e. Prang's Drawing Book, No. 2.

FIFTH GRADE.

a. LANGUAGE, (oral and written).

b. ARITHMETIC.

c. GEOGRAPHY.

d. PENMANSHIP.

e. DRAWING.

a. Articulation and Speech-reading. Nouns, pronouns, adjectives, adverbs, prepositions, and conjunctions, continued as in Fourth Grade. Special drill in the active and passive voices, and the use of auxiliary verbs; present and perfect participle. Action and picture writing. Historical sketches continued. Natural history. Journal. Stories.

- b.* Practical exercises involving addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division. U. S. Currency. Fractions begun. Mental exercises.
- c.* Divisions of land and water, reviewed, and descriptive lessons of principal countries of the earth. Outline maps.
- d.* Twice a week.
- e.* Prang's Drawing Book, No. 4.

The educational work of the school is not confined entirely to the class-rooms. Whatever is calculated to impart information and aid the mental development of the pupil is encouraged. The pupils, under proper supervision and direction, maintain senior and junior literary societies, which they manage themselves, and the exercises of the weekly meetings of which consists of lectures, debates and various other features of a literary character. The influence of these societies has been most beneficial. Frequent lectures on instructive and interesting topics are given by the teachers. Each department has a large library for the use of the pupils, supplied with a variety of the best literature suited to their years and advancement. The reading matter is further supplemented by the efforts of the pupils themselves, who have formed reading clubs and have subscribed for the best periodical literature of the day. Social reunions of the pupils of the various departments are held occasionally, when they are given an opportunity of mingling with the opposite sex. In every way an effort is made to reduce the isolation inseparable from the loss of hearing and the monotony of institution life to a minimum.

The industrial training afforded by the Institution constitutes an important part of its educational work. From the very establishment of the school instruction in various industries has been given. In the first report of the Institution (1823) it appears that provisions were made for teaching the pupils cabinet making, shoemaking, coopering and weaving. In subsequent years the trials and difficulties encountered rendered it impossible for the Institution to give this department of its work the attention that it deserved, but at no time was it entirely neglected. For the past ten years instruction in printing, tailoring, shoemaking, dress-making, shoe-fitting and knitting has been given, and the female pupils have been given instruction in housework and cooking under the direction of the matrons. In the new industrial building, now nearly completed, in addition to the ample facilities afforded for the above industries, arrangements are made for the teaching of plumbing, blacksmithing, weaving, baking, plastering and bricklaying, and photography. In the estimation of the Board of Directors industrial training is of no less importance than intellectual training, and no effort will be spared to return the children entrusted to the care of the Institution not only intelligent but independent and self-supporting citizens.

In connection with the classes in printing in the industrial department two papers are printed. The Silent World is published weekly, and is devoted to the dissemination, among the hearing, of information in regard to the deaf and their education, and to news items of interest to the deaf themselves. Its circulation is not confined to Pennsylvania, but extends to nearly every State in the Union. The Little World is published daily, during the school term, and is devoted to school items and other reading matter suited to the intelligence of the various grades of pupils, and is, in general, intended as an auxiliary to the work of the school-room. It does not circulate outside of the Institution.

The artistic education of the children is not neglected, and for half a century instruction in drawing has been given. In the new industrial building ample provisions will be made for art education and every opportunity will be afforded children with artistic tastes to develop and cultivate the faculty.

The domestic arrangements of the Institution are as complete as are those of instruction. The large household is under the general supervision of a competent steward. Each department building is under the care of a matron, who has general charge of its domestic affairs. Male and female supervisors and attendants have charge of the children outside of the school-room, and the children are constantly under a supervision sufficient to prevent any harm, either physical or moral, while in no way interfering with their rights or native self-respect. A wholesome and liberal diet is provided, and a well-appointed laundry supplies the pupil with two changes of linen a week. Comfortable clothing is provided winter and summer, the boys wearing a neat uniform of cadet cloth, and the girls dresses to suit as far as possible their individual taste. In case of sickness the children are placed under the care of a well-trained nurse, and are afforded the very best medical attendance. The consulting staff of physicians and surgeons of the Institution includes some of the most distinguished specialists in the city. The buildings are models as far as sanitation is concerned. In short, nothing that can conduce to the mental, moral or physical well-being of the pupils is neglected.

The Institution, having a large number of children committed to its care who from their condition are wholly without moral or religious instruction, endeavors to inculcate, without any sectarian bias, those broad moral and religious principles upon which Christianity is based. No attempt at theological discussion or sectarian instruction is made, and no principles are inculcated which will in any way interfere with their joining upon graduation such church as their parents may prefer, but the endeavor is to give them an adequate conception of a Heavenly Father, of a Saviour, of the distinction between good and evil, and of their duties to God, to one another, and to themselves. For this purpose a Sunday-School meets each Sunday afternoon, and on every Sunday morning and evening, lectures are given by teachers, calculated to reach their hearts and affections, to point out the principles of right living here and to prepare them for the life to come.

Throughout its long career the Institution has been particularly fortunate in possessing a Board of Directors which has been devoted to the interest of the school. These gentlemen, among whom are numbered some of the most distinguished citizens of Philadelphia, have given the Institution the most appreciative oversight and the most careful supervision. They have executed the duties of their position not in a merely nominal and perfunctory manner, but have taken an active share in the management of the Institution, have made the subject of deaf-mute education a personal study, and have been keenly alive to the needs of the Institution. The success of the Institution is as much owing to their disinterested efforts for its welfare as to any other single cause. Nor has their interest been confined to superintendence. Some of the most liberal benefactors of the school have been members of the Board of Directors. The opening of the new buildings on October 8, 1892, was made doubly impressive by the announcement that one of the most active members of the board, John T. Morris, had made a free gift of $50,000 towards the completion of the industrial building.

The Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb is a corporation chartered under the laws of the State of Pennsylvania.

MRS. MARY PAULLIN,
One of the original pupils of David G. Seixas, now living, aged 87.

Although possessing some means of its own, thanks to the gifts and bequests of benevolent people, its main support is derived from the annual appropriation of the Legislature. It is hoped that with the enlarged capacity of the school this appropriation will be increased so as to permit the admission of a larger number of pupils. The term of instruction is ten years, and applicants for admission must be over seven years of age and under twenty-one, unless there be good reasons for earlier admission. The school is free to all deaf children of the State of suitable age and of good physical and intellectual condition. The school term is from the fifteenth of September to the last Wednesday in June. All applications for information regarding admissions, etc., must be made to the principal. A payment of $30 gives a life membership in the corporation, and the annual subscription is $5. The value of the buildings and grounds is fully $1,000,000, and the annual expenditure for general support and ordinary repairs, etc., approximates $125,000.

The results of the seventy-five years of the Institution's labors are best observed in its graduates. During this period 3000 children have been under instruction, and the great majority of them have become intelligent, industrious and self-supporting citizens of the commonwealth, amply justifying the expenditure which the State has made on their account. A number of them have graduated from the National Deaf Mute College at Washington, and have taken high rank, both for scholarship and uprightness of character. Many of the graduates have become teachers of the deaf, and have lent their best efforts to the furtherance of the noble work to which they themselves are so deeply indebted. There has scarcely been a time in the Institution's history when there have not been several graduates on its staff of teachers. Among those who devoted long and useful lives to the service of the Institution may be named James C. Murtagh, Joseph O. Pyatt and Thomas Jefferson Trist.

Aside from these, and from those who have found honorable and useful fields of activity in the varied industries of our great State, the Institution can point with pride to graduates who have taken a high position in the artistic and technical pursuits, to ministers of the gospel, teachers, clerks, merchants, etc., etc. Among its graduates may be named Albert Newsam, admitted to have been the most skilful lithographer of heads of his day; and John Carlin, a portrait and landscape painter of great merit. To have raised such a great number of human beings from a condition of utter mental darkness and helplessness into useful and intelligent citizens is much; but to have enabled them to rise to positions of honorable distinction among their more fortunate fellow-beings is worthy of the highest praise and deepest admiration.

Below is given a list of the officers, instructors and staff on March 1, 1893:

APPENDIX.

List of Presidents, Vice-Presidents, and other Officers of the Institution, 1820-1893.

NOTE.—As reports of the Institution were issued at irregular intervals between 1820 and 1840, the dates of service before 1840 are in most instances merely approximations, being the years in which the names appear and disappear in the published reports. There are some discrepancies in later reports, also, but the list may be regarded as fairly accurate and as complete as the data at hand will admit.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE KENTUCKY SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

N the ninth of August, 1816, there landed from a vessel just arrived in New York harbor, two gentlemen whose coming was destined to open for the deaf and dumb of America a new and brighter era. One of those gentlemen could hear; the other was a deaf-mute. The first was Thomas H. Gallaudet; the second Laurent Clerc.

The story of how Gallaudet was first interested in the deaf and their education by his meeting, in her father's garden, with Alice Cogswell; of his departure for England and of the rebuffs he received at the English Institutions while endeavoring to obtain admission to them to study their methods of instruction; of his arrival at Paris and the cordial reception he met there from the Abbe Sicard; and finally his engaging Sicard's best pupil, Laurent Clerc, to accompany him to America and assist him in his work, has been so often told that we need not repeat it here in detail.

April 15th, 1817, the first school for deaf-mutes in the new world, the American Asylum, at Hartford, Conn., was opened for the reception of pupils. The number of deaf-mutes in the country was considered so small that it was expected one school would be sufficient for the whole country, hence the name of "American Asylum." But it was soon found that deaf-mutes were more numerous than had been supposed, and in 1818 the New York

Institution was incorporated. Two years later the Pennsylvania Institution, at Philadelphia, was founded, and in 1822 the Kentucky Institution, at Danville, fourth in the United States, was established.

The act incorporating the "Kentucky Asylum for the Tuition of the Deaf and Dumb" bears date December 7th, 1822. To whom belongs the honor of first suggesting the establishment in Kentucky of such an Institution is unknown but the act of incorporation was first drawn up by Judge Rowan and presented to the Legislature by General Elias Barbee, a member of the House of Representatives from Green county, and whose daughter, Lucy, became the first pupil. This act appoints the "Trustees of the Centre College of Kentucky," Trustees for the Institution, locates the Institution in the town of Danville, appropriates $3,000 to establish the school and $100 a year per pupil for board and tuition of State pupils whose number was limited to twenty-five and the time they were to be allowed to remain at school to three years.

Early in January, 1823, the trustees met and proceeded to set the Institution in operation. A frame building on the south-west corner of Main and Fourth streets was rented and fitted up for the reception of pupils (This building stood until April 15th, 1876, when it was destroyed with several others in the great fire of that night.) January 23rd, the Board engaged Rev. John R. Kerr and wife as Superintendent and Matron of the boarding department. By the system then inaugurated, and which prevailed until 1854, the boarding of the pupils was not done by the Institution but by the superintendent. He purchased all necessary supplies: the amount paid by the State for board of indigent pupils and the sums received from pay pupils went to him and any profit that might be made from the arrangement was the superintendent's emoluments, he receiving no salary.

The most perplexing question that engaged the attention of the Trustees at this period was how to obtain a principal for this school. The few in the country who were acquainted with signs and the methods of instructing the deaf and dumb were all engaged in eastern Institutions, and none of them could be obtained. Dr. Gallaudet had advised selecting a young man and sending him to Hartford to learn the system of teaching but this would take time and the Board were anxious to begin at once the work of instructing the deaf of Kentucky. At this juncture they were called upon by David C. Irvine who represented himself as an educated deaf-mute and applied for the position of Principal. He was accepted, but in a few weeks was discovered to be an impostor, and to quote from the first report "Circumstances occurred which made it the duty of the Board to discharge him."

April 27th, 1823, the first three pupils Lucy, Barbee, Eveline Sherrill, and Jabez Gaddie entered the Institution. There being no teacher yet engaged Mr. Kerr the Superintendent, was obliged to act in that capacity though totally unacquainted with the system. May 1st, an application for the principalship was received from Mr. DeWitt Clinton Mitchell, son of the president of the New York Institution. Mr. Mitchell was a young man who had had but one year's experience in the New York School but in default of any other the Board accepted him with a salary of five hundred dollars and board, with travelling expenses to Danville, and he came on direct to Danville, arriving here October 1st, 1823.

Pupils had been dropping in at intervals during the year and by February, 1824, there were twelve boys and seven girls, ten of whom were supported at the expense of the State, the rest being pay pupils. A few months trial convinced the Board that Mitchell was not qualified for the responsible position he held and they began to cast about for a substitute. There was at that time attending Centre College a young man of eighteen, John Adamson Jacobs, and upon him their choice was fixed. He was offered the position of assistant teacher and accepted. A few weeks's experience in the school-room convinced him that to be a successful teacher it was imperative that he should learn signs and the systems of instruction employed in the Eastern Institutions. With this object he set out for Hartford making the trip entirely on horseback and arriving there August 15th, 1824. He met with a cordial reception from Gallaudet and Clerc and had no difficulty in arranging to remain in the Institution to learn the system then employed. On his arrival Dr. Gallaudet had assured him that it would require at last three years for him to acquire the requisite knowledge of signs and systems to fit him for taking charge of the Kentucky school. The small funds at the command of the Institution made it out of the question for him to remain that length of time, so he determined to do the best he could in the time allotted to him. He received private lessons from Mr. Clerc at forty cents an hour, and all his time was passed in the school-room or in the company of the pupils. His meals were taken with the mutes whose fare he says in a communication to the Board "While substantial was by no means luxurious." He remained in Hartford thirteen months, returning to Danville in September, 1825, riding the same horse that had carried him East.

Mr. Jacobs on his return to the Institution found it in a demoralized condition, the pupils making no progress at all. He set about the task of instructing them with great zeal. The Board saw his worth, and in November, 1825, appointed him principal teacher. Mr. Mitchell, in high dudgeon at their action, tendered his resignation which was promptly accepted and he returned to New York.

On January 4th, 1824, the Legislature had increased the per capita for State pupils to one hundred and forty dollars per annum, and had authorized the admission of pay pupils from other States. They also appropriated three thousand dollars for the purchase of a house and land for the Institution.

January 28th, 1826, the Board purchased of John Tompkins, a house and ten-acre lot for $5,000, three thousand of which was paid at once, and the rest in six months. The house was a brick one of two stories, containing eight rooms with attic. To this house the officers and female pupils were removed. The boys occupied a one-story brick house that stood on Third street, near the old shop and which has long since been removed.

April 26th, 1826, the Congress of the United States granted the Institution a township of land. This the Board located in Jackson county, Florida. Large sales were made and the Institution realized handsomely from it, though not as much as might have been obtained by better management on the part of the agents instructed with making sales.

In 1831, Mr. Jacobs, accompanied by one of his pupils, visited Nashville, Tennessee, and gave an exhibition and address before the Legislature. The result of his visit was the sending of a number of Tennessee pupils to Danville for education. Pupils have been received from every Southern State, and several Northern ones. As showing the uncertain knowledge possessed by even those best informed in regard to the number of deaf-mutes in the State and the future increase of population, we find Mr. Jacobs sending a communication to the Board of Trustees, May, 1831, in which he expresses the opinion that the number of pupils present at any time will never exceed twenty five, and there will never be a necessity for more than two teachers. In 1833, when cholera was epidemic throughout the country, the Superintendent and Matron, Rev. and Mrs. John R.

Kerr were stricken down, dying within a few days of each other. Again, in 1849 the cholera appeared, and twenty-four persons died of it near the Institution. The school was closed, and pupils placed with farmers in the country. Fifteen were taken sick, but only one death occurred.

In 1851, the Institution subscribed ten dollars to the Washington Monument Fund.

In February, 1859, between four and five o'clock in the morning, a hurricane passed over the town, and carried away the roof of the lately completed girl's building. It was replaced at a cost of $700, during which operation it caught fire from the carelessness of a timer, and was damaged to the extent of $300. This is the only fire of consequence that has occurred in the buildings of the Institution since its establishment.

Under the able administration of Mr. Jacobs the Institution continued to prosper. The number of pupils steadily increased, and additions were made to the corps of teachers as necessary. At the end of the session of 1860-61, there were ninety two pupils and six teachers present. 1861 saw the beginning of the great Civil War, which, for a time, threatened to seriously cripple, if it did not close up the school. As it was, the work of the school was not interrupted at all, though this part of Kentucky was debated ground held for some time by Confederate troops, and occasionally visited by wandering bands of guerrillas, a fight at one time taking place in the streets of the town. The number of pupils fell to fifty two, and three of the teachers—Messrs. C. H. Talbot, J. W. Jacobs, and J. A. Jacobs, Jr., retired and entered the army, all on the Union side.

November 17th, 1869, the venerable Principal of the Institution died after having held the office for forty-four years, and seen the Institution grow from a little school with a dozen pupils up to the proportions it had attained at the time of his death. Seven members of Mr. Jacobs's family held positions in the Institution during his administration; his two wives and a daughter were matrons in succession; another daughter, a son, a son-in-law, and a nephew were teachers whose qualifications and devotion to the work proved a benefaction to the Institution.

After the close of the war, the Institution rapidly recovered the ground that it had lost, the roll of pupils increased until new buildings were absolutely necessary, and in 1880-2 the present handsome and commodious boys' building and chapel were erected.

Mr. Jacobs was succeeded by his nephew, John A. Jacobs, Jr., who continued in office until his death, December 27th, 1878. In the Spring of 1879, Mr. D. C. Dudley, of Raleigh, North Carolina, was elected Superintendent. Mr. Dudley's large experience as a teacher of the Deaf, his thorough devotion to their interests and his executive ability combined to make his administration one of development and progress, but unfortunately ill health soon caused him to give up his place and seek a field where the climatic conditions were better suited to his physical condition. He was soon after appointed Superintendent of the Colorado School for the Deaf, and is still connected with that Institution as head teacher.

Under the management of the present Superintendent the Institution bids fair to prosper in the future as it has in the past. Continued efforts are being made to induce the parents of all uneducated mutes in Kentucky to send their children to the Institution, that they may share the advantages of the State's bounty. The census returns over three thousand deaf mutes in Kentucky, of whom six hundred are of school age. Of these two hundred are or have been at school. It is greatly to be regretted that so many should voluntarily grow up in ignorance when education is offered to them free of all charges. That such a state of things exists is to be attributed to the lack of knowledge concerning the Institution and its objects which prevails in the thinly settled part of the state; to the selfishness of some parents, who keep their mute children at home to work for them, and to morbid affection in others who can not summon resolution to part from their children during the period of school life.

A more detailed account of the Institution will be found in the following chapters, each subject under its appropriate heading.

LANDS BELONGING TO THE INSTITUTION.

The purchases of land for the use of the Institution have been as follows: In 1826 the Board purchased of John Tompkins ten acres of land and a house for $5,000; three thousand down and the rest in six months. The land is encompassed in the present garden, and all of the yard lying south of a line drawn through the Boys' Building. Down to 1850 the garden lot was used as a pasture, and the garden was where the Girls' Building now stands. The next purchase of land was a lot of about three-fourths of an acre, on the corner of Third and Green streets, being the north-east corner of our present yard. It was used as a garden until 1882, when it was added to the yard. It was bought April 24th. 1854, of Joseph Weisiger for six hundred dollars. April 22, 1856, J. A. Jacobs sold to the Institution a lot of ground on Second (it was then called Market) street, seventy by six hundred and seventy-eight feet, for four hundred dollars. It is on this lot that the northern half of the Boys' Building now stands. February 17th. 1858, the Institution bought of John R. Ford, thirty-seven and one-half acres of land lying on the north east border of the town limits. It consisted of orchard and pasture; the price paid was $125 an acre, or $4,687.50. This was a valuable purchase enabling the Institution to turn the old pasture into our present garden. October 4th, 1858, the lot in which the old shop building stood, sixty-eight by two hundred and twenty-six feet was purchased of James Nichols, for five hundred dollars. No more land was bought until May, 1870, when the orchard lot of five and one-half acres immediately opposite the Institution and adjoining the garden was purchased from J. W. Proctor for $4,500. September 8th, 1879, the small house and lot belonging to Mrs. Herron, lying on Second street, between the lots bought of Weisiger and Jacobs, was purchased for $2,300. This gives the Institution all the square it stands on, except the northwest corner which is used and occupied by others. In January, 1881, the farm of thirty-seven and one-half acres bought of Ford, in 1858, was exchanged for twenty-five acres lying adjoining and east of the Institution garden, with Benjamin Bolling, he paying $1055.66 cash to compensate for the difference of eleven and one-half acres. The land consists of a pasture and woodland, and adjoining land already possessed by the Institution can be used to more advantage than that lying at a distance. June 12th, 1882, the Institution purchased of the Tompkins heirs a brick residence with six and one-half acres of ground lying a short distance down the pike for $3,750. It is on this land that the spring is located from which the Institution receives its water supply. In January, 1885, this property, exclusive of the spring and about two acres of land, was exchanged for the large building and grounds (13 acres) now used for the Colored Department, the Board giving $5,000 to boot in the trade. This was a most valuable addition to the State's property, being admirably located for the purpose for which it is used.

In 1881, a lot lying between the Institution grounds and the spring was purchased for $550 in order to give control of the right of way of the water-pipe which ran through it. July 26th, 1886, twenty acres of land lying south of the Institution garden and adjoining the cow pasture were bought for $3,301. This purchase was made to get more pasture for the cows, but more especially to get possession of the never failing spring, which offers an abundant supply of pure water for the stock. About a year after, the Yeiser property which lay immediately south of the girls' building, containing some four and a half acres was purchased for $4,750 in order to prevent its being sold off to undesirable parties, and in 1890, by securing a house and lot known as the Bate property for the sum of $2,350, all danger of being encroached upon by irresponsible neighbors was averted.

The total land owned by the Institution at present is about eighty acres, which cost, including the improvements, $36,582.84. Of this the State, by direct appropriation, paid but $19,550. There were buildings on the lots bought of Tompkins, in 1823; of Mrs. Heron, in 1879; of the Tompkins heirs, in 1882; of Mrs. Beatty, in 1884; of Yeiser, in 1887, and Bate, in 1890, which added materially to their cost.

BUILDINGS OF THE INSTITUTION.

From its establishment in April, 1823, to 1826, the Institution occupied the old Field house on the southwest corner of Fourth and Main streets. In January, 1826, by the purchase of the Tompkins property the Institution obtained a brick house of two stories with eight rooms and attic. This was occupied by the officers and female pupils, the boys sleeping in a small one-story house that stood in our present yard on Third street. In 1832, at a cost of $2,078.03, an addition was built to the girls' house. It consisted of an ell from the rear, of one story and attic, and a porch in front. This made a large room that was used as general dining-room down to November 18th, 1857 and from then until July, 1881, it was occupied by the boys as a study-room. The attic or half-story above was all the sitting-room the girls had. In 1836 a school house the cost of which was estimated at $5,000, was begun and completed in 1838. This was the present school-house, minus the porch and attic. In 1850 the school-house was improved at a cost of $2,500. by raising the roof so as to make a large attic, and by building a Doric porch. Part of this building was used as school-rooms, the wings and attic as a dormitory for the boys whose old dormitory on Third street was turned into servants quarters, and afterwards torn down. The next year the girls' house was further improved by raising the half story over the dining-room, so as to make a full story and attic. This alteration afforded a large and convenient sitting-room for the female pupils. The porch was also raised to a second story, and in after years it was inclosed by weather-boarding making one additional room. The cost of these improvements was $1,264.68. A year later, in the summer of 1852, the old chapel, one of the present school-houses was built at a cost of $3,155.99, half of which was by direct appropriation from the state, five hundred dollars was given by Mr. Jacobs, and the rest was from the Institution.

By 1854, the buildings in spite of enlargements were crowded to their utmost capacity, and more room was absolutely necessary. For this purpose the Board petitioned the Legislature for help. February 18th, 1854, seven thousand five hundred dollars was appropriated for the further enlargement of the old buildings. On consideration, however, it was deemed a waste of money to attempt further additions to the old buildings, and it was decided to begin the erection of a new edifice, one that would be properly arranged, and which would afford accommodations for many years to come. With this view the corner-stone (north-west) of the present girls' building was laid on the 16th day of April, 1855. The work of building was delayed in some degree by the failure of the original contractor, but a new one was secured, and the work progressed steadily until 1857 when, on November 17th, its completion was celebrated by the family taking dinner for the first time in the large new dining-hall (now the girls' study-room.) The total cost of this building was $39,650.44.

February 9th, 1856, the Legislature appropriated $10,000 to complete the work. This, with the original $7,500, was all the state gave, the rest coming from the permanent fund of the Institution.

The new house having been taken possession of by the officers and female pupils, their old quarters were occupied by the boys, who used them down to 1881. The rooms in the school-house that the boys had occupied were turned into the museum, library, and shops. In 1859 the old shop building was begun, but for lack of funds was not completed till 1863. Its cost was about $1,500. More room becoming imperative the Legislature appropriated, March 27th, 1880, $30,000. to begin new buildings, and March 6th, 1882, $29,916. to finish them but this being inadequate to complete them on the plans projected it was supplemented by $6,725.88 from the funds derived from the sale of Florida lands. In the summer of 1881, the old house that had been occupied first by the girls and then by the boys since 1826, was torn down and the present handsome and comfortable buildings were erected. The first brick of the new chapel was laid May 11th, 1881, and the building was completed and occupied for the first time in 1882. Work was begun on the boys' house during vacation, 1881, and it was occupied in October, 1882.

In June, 1882, the old frame house, purchased with the lot on which it stood, of Mrs. Herron, in 1879, was torn down, and a new frame house erected near by for the officers of the mechanical department. The enlargement of the mechanical department in 1886-7 made it necessary to secure more room, and the present commodious shop building was erected in 1888, at a cost of $3,800.39.

During the same year and the year following the gardener's cottage costing $350; the laundry building, $3,826.10; an addition to the school building $2,704.96; and a new chapel and dining-room &c. at the Colored Department costing $5,046.87 were built, the principal part of the wood-work being done by our own foreman and his boys. The total cost for buildings and additions not including repairs and improvements, such as out-buildings, cisterns &c., is $132,428.78, of which the State, by direct appropriation, contributed $93,747.45 and Mr. J. A. Jacobs, Sr., gave $1,541.88, the rest coming from the permanent fund of the Institution.

FLORIDA LAND GRANT.

The American Asylum received soon after its establishment the grant from the Congress of the United States of a township of land which was of material help in carrying out the objects of the Institution. It early occurred to the Trustees of the Kentucky Institution to endeavor to obtain a similar grant for the benefit of the Danville School. A petition was accordingly drawn up and presented to Congress by Hon. Thomas P. Moore, then member for the district in which the Institution was located. By an act approved April 5th, 1826, there was granted to the Institution "One township of land (excepting section sixteen for the use of schools there-

“on) to be located under the direction of the Secretary of the Treasury, which lands should be and forever remain to the use of said Asylum for the education of “indigent Deaf and Dumb persons, or if said asylum “shall sell said lands which it is authorized to do, the “money arising from such sale shall be and remain forever to said use, and it shall be the duty of said “incorporators to sell said lands within five years from “the passage of said act, and the same shall be located “in one of the Territories on lands to which the Indian “title has been extinguished.”

By various acts the time allotted for selling the lands was extended, the last extension terminating during the Civil War. Part of the land was located in the then Territory of Arkansas. On the 15th of April, 1826, Rev. Samuel K. Nelson was commissioned as agent and sent to Florida to locate the land under the grant. Most of the land he selected was in Jackson county. Different gentlemen acted as resident agents in Florida and Arkansas for the sale of land, and up to 1840 they reported the sale of 19,000 acres for $85,000. A large part of this however was in Florida post notes and other currency that had greatly depreciated in value. The Institution also lost considerable through the defalcation of one of its agents. He died suddenly from yellow fever and on examination of his accounts he was found to be indebted to the Institution for about $18,000, with little or no assets to meet it. The total cash receipts from the land grant, by the Institution, down to 1861 when the last payment was received, was to the amount of $56,549.42, a large part of which was appropriated to the erection of the present girls' building. Some land was sold and the payment to the amount of $3,160. collected therefor after the war had begun. The money, which was in Confederate Treasury notes, could not be forwarded, and was invested by the agent in Confederate bonds which of course proved worthless.

HEALTH.

Since it was first established the Institution has enjoyed almost entire immunity from epidemic diseases. Good health has been the rule among the pupils which is the more remarkable as most of them have been young children, many with constitutions shattered by the disease that caused loss of hearing. In 1849, when cholera was epidemic throughout the country, it appeared in Danville from July to September, and twenty-four people in the neighborhood of the Institution died. The school was closed up and the pupils placed with farmers in the country. Fifteen were taken sick but only one died. In the summer of 1876, dysentery appeared among the pupils, making necessary the closing of school ten days earlier than usual, and two deaths occurred. The total number of deaths among the pupils in the Institution in a period of seventy years, since 1823, is but twenty. From 1823 to 1854 there were only six deaths. Since then the following are recorded.

February, 9th, 185—, MILDRED A. YOUNG, aged fifteen, of erysipelas.

October 17th, 185—;—MARY BELLE SPARKS, aged thirteen, of putrid sore throat.

March 24th, 1863;—JAMES REED.

June 21, 1870;—JOHN W. PAXTON, aged thirteen, of effusion of brain.

June 29th, 1876;—JOHN W. CONGLETON, of dysentery.

July 7th, 1876;—MARY E. MULLEN, aged fifteen, of dysentery.

February 10th, 1877;—SARAH J. AUSTIN.

March 20th, 1880;—JAMES H. BARRETT, aged nineteen, of intussusception of bowels.

November 12th, 1881;—SAMUEL FENCE, aged nineteen, killed by cars.

February 18th, 1875;—EDDIE McCORMICK, aged fifteen, of rheumatism of the heart.

April 20th, 1889;—CARRIE BEAGLE, aged sixteen, of sarcoma of the brain.

March 5th, 1890;—ROSETTA ALLEN, aged thirteen, of spinal meningitis.

April 26th, 1891;—KIAH REED, aged thirteen, of spinal meningitis.

Among the officers nine deaths have occurred, as follows:

Summer of 1833;—MRS. FRANCES KERR, Matron, of cholera.

Summer of 1833;—REV. JOHN R. KERR, Superintendent, of cholera.

September 29th, 1849;—MRS. SUSAN P. JACOBS, Matron.

March 26th, 1865;—JOHN BLOUNT, Teacher.

May 3rd, 1865;—MRS. NANCY M. JACOBS, Matron.

May 10th, 1869;—REV. SAMUEL B. CHEEK, Teacher.

November 27th, 1869;—JOHN A. JACOBS, SR., Principal.

May 2nd, 1876;—JAMES G. GEORGE, Teacher.

December 27th, 1878;—JOHN A. JACOBS, JR., Principal.

TRADES.

The subject of teaching the male pupils trades, which they could follow for a support after leaving school, early engaged the attention of the Institution officers, but for many years the lack of funds, and of shop room, prevented the subject from receiving that consideration which its importance merits. For some years previous to the war an arrangement was in vogue by which some of the boys worked part of the day with mechanics in the town, and a number of pupils acquired a knowledge of trades in this way. The war broke up this arrangement, and it could not be renewed. A shop building was erected in 1862 and several attempts to establish trades made, but it was not till March, 1874, when under the Superintendence of one of the teachers, Mr. James G. George, a practical printer, a printing office was fitted up in the second story of the old chapel building. A book bindery was next established, in September, 1879. In 1883, by the employment of a practical carpenter, that trade was thrown open to the pupils, and in 1885 a shoe shop, with competent foreman, was added bringing this department up to its present status. Broom and mattress making have received some attention, but as there is little sale for their produce, they do not warrant a regular shop and instructor. Gardening has been steadily pursued since the Institution moved to its own land in 1825, and has given employment to a majority of the male pupils. Regular instruction has been given since the first to the female pupils in sewing and housework.

LITERARY SOCIETY.

Through the efforts of Mr. J. W. Jacobs the pupils established, in 1857, a literary society which is still in existence. The pupils, both male and female, compose its members and meetings are held every Saturday night for debate, delivery of addresses by speakers selected from among the pupils, and lectures delivered by officers of the Institution. Through the efforts of the Society and from funds raised among graduates and pupils, fine portraits were obtained of Laurent Clerc, J. A. Jacobs, Sr., Samuel B. Cheek, and J. W. Jacobs, which now hang on the walls of the Institution parlor.

TIME ALLOWED BY LAW FOR STATE PUPILS.

By the act of 1822 the State appropriated one hundred dollars per annum for the board and tuition of indigent pupils whose number was limited to twenty-five, and the period they were to remain to three years. By an act approved January 4, 1824, the per capita was increased to one hundred and fifty dollars, and by an act approved January 9, 1827, the time was extended to five years, and the per capita reduced to one hundred and twenty dollars. This was done at the instance of the Trustees who expected that the receipts from sales of Florida lands would more than balance the deficiency. They proved to be mistaken however, and in 1852 the per capita for state pupils was increased to one hundred and forty dollars at which figure it now stands.

The limit of twenty-five for state pupils was not reached until about 1840, when it was exceeded and an act was passed in 1846 extending the number to thirty. By an act approved February 29, 1836, the Trustees were allowed to select each year five of the state pupils who had shown special aptitude for acquiring knowledge and continue them two years longer or seven years in all. Finally by an act approved February 18, 1854, all limitations were removed by making applicable to the Institution for Deaf-Mutes an act passed in 1852 for the benefit of the Blind.

By this act the Trustees were authorized to receive all children of suitable age, character, and capacity without regard to their pecuniary circumstances. By the same act all children who might enter under the age of thirteen, were to be allowed to remain till twenty-one as beneficiaries of the State.

By an act approved June 3, 1865, parents were required to pay, as far as they were able, for the clothing and contingent expenses such as books, medical attendance, &c., of their children. The charge for contingent expenses was fixed at not to exceed twenty-five dollars per annum. March 27, 1880, in an act appropriating money for erection of new buildings a clause was introduced requiring parents, when able, to pay for the board and tuition of their children. This was repealed at the next session of the Legislature in an act approved March 6, 1882, which provides that "all children should be received and taught free of charge for board, tuition, and use of books and other apparatus used in teaching."

ATTENDANCE.

Since the establishment of the Institution one thousand and sixty-two (1062) pupils have entered, of whom 615 were boys, and 447 girls. The first class which entered in 1823 contained seventeen pupils, as follows:

Name	Age	Residence	Entered.
Lucy Barbee.....	24	Green county	April 10, 1823.

Of this class only one is known to be now alive, Miss Eveline Sherrill, living at Greensburg, Ky. Of the 1062 pupils who have passed through the Institution many have died and others removed to distant states. Many have married, and in a few cases their children and grand-children, being deaf, have come as pupils to the school where their parents were educated. The great majority of the graduates have led sober industrious lives, respecting themselves and respected by those around them.

ant editor KENTUCKY DEAF-MUTE 1879—1883. Now an orange grower at Glen Ethel, Orange Co. Fla.

GEORGE, JAMES GOODLOE. Born September 8th, 1825. in Garrard Co., Ky. Became partially deaf from scarlet fever in 1823, and totally so a year after at the age of seven. Entered the Institution as a pupil in 1839, and remained till 1843, when he went to Frankfort where he learned the printing business in the office of the Frankfort Commonwealth, where he remained till 1854, when he accepted the position of teacher in the Institution at Fulton, Missouri. In 1851 he married Miss Louisa Webster, a deaf mute educated at Danville, who died in 1856. Feeble health compelled him in 1860 to retire from the Missouri Institution and he returned to Kentucky and became editor and proprietor of the Richmond Messenger. On the breaking out of the war he espoused the cause of the Union and in 1862 his office was destroyed by Confederate troops, and he was obliged to leave Richmond. He retired to Louisville where he entered the office of the provost marshal, as chief clerk. At the close of the war, he obtained a position as book-keeper in a Louisville house and held it till 1858, when he purchased land near St. Joseph, Missouri, and tried farming for a while, but returned to Kentucky in 1869, and was appointed teacher in this Institution in 1871, remaining here till his death which occurred May 2nd, 1876. He established the KENTUCKY DEAF-MUTE in 1874, and was editor and foreman of the printing office, 1874-76.

IRVINE, DANIEL C., An imposter who was employed as the first teacher in 1823, but was discharged for misconduct after a few weeks service.

JACOBS, JOHN ADAMSON, SR., Born in Leesburg, Virginia, in 1806. Removed, while an infant, with his parents to Lexington, Kentucky, and afterwards to Lancaster, Garrard county, where his boyhood was passed. He was left an orphan at the age of thirteen. He entered a store as clerk but soon left and went to Madison county, where he obtained a school, (he being then but fourteen years old,) which he continued to teach till he was seventeen, when having saved enough for the purpose, he came to Danville and entered Centre College.

While a student, in 1824, he was offered and accepted the position of Principal of the recently established Institution for Deaf Mutes. Soon after, he went to Hartford, where he spent a year qualifying himself for the position. He returned to Danville and took charge of the Institution in 1825, he being then only nineteen years of age. He taught a class, in addition to his other duties, down to 1854.

In 1835, he took charge of the boarding department, then separate from the other parts of the Institution, and conducted it till 1854, when he voluntarily relinquished it to the Institution, receiving in lieu a salary of one thousand dollars as Principal. The saving of the Institution by this was from $1500 to $2500 per annum.

Mr. Jacobs contributed liberally from his private means, to assist in improving the old girls' building, to building the school house and old chapel, and to paying the salaries of Messrs. Cheek and Blount for several years. His total contributions for those objects was $2,380. He was twice married. Died at the Institution, November 27th, 1869, aged sixty-three, having held the position of Principal forty-four years.

JACOBS, J. A., Jr., (Nephew of J. A. Jacobs, Sr.) Born in Cass county, Michigan, November 6th, 1839. Moved with his parents to Missouri while a child. Grew up on a farm. In 1858, came to Kentucky and entered the Institution as a teacher, where he remained till 1861, when the outbreak of the war so reduced the number of pupils as to render his services unnecessary. He then returned to Missouri, and was then tendered a position as teacher in the Indiana Institution, but before the letter containing the offer arrived, he had enlisted in an Iowa regiment of cavalry, and was in active service till the close of the war. Then he was recalled to the Institution where he taught a class, and also performed most of the duties of principal for his uncle whose advanced age and feeble health rendered such aid necessary.

On the death of Mr. Jacobs, Sr., in 1869, he was elected Principal, and held the position till his death, December 27th, 1878, aged thirty-eight.

LONG, MRS. NANNIE R., (wife of M. T. Long) Superintendent of sewing-room 1880. Matron and housekeeper at colored department since 1884.

LUPTON, GEORGE F., Teacher at Romney, W. Va., Institution 1875. Teacher at the Danville Institution 1876-81.

LYLE, MISS NELLIE, Born in Boyle Co. Graduated at Caldwell College, 1890. Elected Assistant teacher, 1888.

McCLURE, GEORGE MORRIS, Born in Lawrence Co., Ky., in 1861. Lost hearing at nine years of age from typhoid fever. Entered Institution as a pupil in 1879, and took a special course of instruction under D. C. Dudley and W. K. Argo. Appointed a teacher in 1880 at the age of nineteen. Married Miss Carrie Jasper, of Jessamine county, Ky., in 1886.

One page omitted. See page 32.

MARIS, MISS MABEL, Born in Athens Ohio. Attended school at Westchester Pa. Normal. Appointed teacher at colored department, 1891.

MARLOWE, HIRAM B., Pupil 1870-77. Gardener 1884-85.

MILES, EDWARD B., Pupil five years from 1843. Teacher 1851-66. Married Mary Moorman, a deaf-mute, 1866. Living in Hardin County.

MITCHELL, DEWITT CLINTON, Teacher in the New York Institution 1822-23. On the establishment of the Kentucky Institution, he applied for and obtained the position of principal, and held it 1823-25. Being found entirely unqualified for the responsible office, he resigned in November, 1825.

MOSS, MISS M. E., Housekeeper since 1867.

MUNSELL, DR. LUKE, Superintendent of boarding department 1833-35.

MUNSELL, MRS., Matron 1833-35.

METHODS OF INSTRUCTION.

As has been stated, Mr. Jacobs, the first thoroughly qualified instructor in the Kentucky School, learned the art of teaching the deaf from Mr. Gallaudet, the founder of the first American School, at Hartford, Connecticut. To quote from Mr. Jacobs's report to the Legislature in 1856, "Mr. Gallaudet and the gentlemen who were associated with him at Hartford soon began to give shape to what may be called the American System of instruction. It was, in the main, like the French System of Sicard and De l'Epee, but in many respects it was original and distinct from all other systems. Perhaps its main feature, as it came fully to develop itself, was its free spirit. Freedom from adherence to mere system and method may be named as the peculiar merit of American instructors. There is no means which experience or sound reason recommends which cannot be readily incorporated into the American System. Like our social and political institutions, it freely receives what is good from all quarters, and by a plastic energy apparently peculiar to the new world gives a beautiful and homogenous form to the resulting whole."

We have seen no reason to depart from this system so ably championed by Mr. Jacobs nearly forty years ago. From the beginning care has been taken to preserve the speech of those who had acquired facility in its use before hearing was lost. Very little, however, was undertaken in the way of systematic instruction in lip reading and articulation until 1884 when one teacher was employed to give her entire time to that work. There are at present, in addition to the instruction in speech and speech reading, two others who devote their whole time to those who have acquired some proficiency in the art or who have sufficient hearing to give us hope that properly cultivated it may be of service to them in the battle of life.

OHIO INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB.

Description of the Buildings.

The building in the frontispiece, nominally one, really consists of eight, suitably connected, and was erected at a cost of $650,000. It is built of brick, and is elaborately trimmed with stone. The roofing is of slate, the cornice of galvanized iron, and the balconies, pillars, railing and floor, of iron. The number of bricks required was 8,000,000; the roof-cornice is 3,800 feet in length; the gas-pipes measure two miles; the interior walls and ceilings have a surface of twelve acres, and the floor a surface of four acres. The windows number 800. The front building, 270 feet in length, is surmounted by seven towers, the center one being 115 feet high, the two at its side 105 feet, and the four at the corners 97 feet. The center tower has been finished to the top, and from it, ascending by a spiral staircase, visitors have a magnificent view of the city. This front building is divided by a hall ten feet wide, running its entire length, upon every story, each story above the basement being fifteen feet high. The use of this building is for offices, library, hospitals, parlors, sewing and store-rooms, and chambers occupied by officers and employes. Attached to the front building are three wings, running north, all invisible in the picture. The central wing, 145 by 40 feet, is occupied by the kitchen and adjacent store-rooms, the dining-room and a chapel 23 feet in height. The two exterior wings extend north 115 feet, affording a hall the entire length, and adjacent rooms for baggage, clothing, washing, bathing and water-closets. Attached to these exterior wings, and extending at right angles to them, 110 feet east and west, are two wings 40 feet wide, called the boys' and girls' wings. These are the parts of the building visible at the sides of the picture. The first story is used as a play-room. The second is the sitting or study-room, and is used out of school and work hours. The two upper stories are dormitories. The very fine provision made for light and air is obvious to the eye. These side wings return by corridors to the central wing, which continues by the bakery and store-rooms in the basement, and by corridors in every story, to the school building in the rear. This building, 115 by 55 feet, is invisible in the cut. It is three stories high and contains twenty-five school-rooms. Still further to the rear is a building 100 feet square, from the corner of which rises the ventilating shaft, 115 feet high, and visible in the cut directly above the girls' wing. The building contains the boilers, engines and pumps for heating the main building and for supplying every part with water. A few yards west of this is a two-story brick building 55x25 feet, containing the machinery and appliances of the laundry. At the extreme right of the picture appears the barn. Between it and the boys' wing is seen the east end of the bindery, which is 130x35 feet. North of this is the industrial building and ice-house, 375x22 feet in size, containing the carpenter-shop, shoe-shop, tailor-shop, printing-office and fire department. On the left of the girls' wing is the conservatory, a beautiful structure, filled with flowers and rare plants.

THE OHIO INSTITUTION.

THE Ohio Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, the fifth in the order of foundation, was incorporated by an act of the Legislature, passed in 1827. It was the first established upon the idea that it is the primary duty of the State to place within the reach of every child the means of education, whereby to become capable of discharging the duties of citizenship. This grand idea of educated citizenship was distinctly declared in the ordinance of 1787, or, as its legal title reads, "An ordinance for the government of the territory of the United States northwest of the Ohio River," in the following words: "Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools, and the means of education, shall forever be encouraged."

When the State Constitution was adopted in 1802, it contained the following provision: "Religion, morality and knowledge being essentially necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, schools and the means of instruction shall forever be encouraged by legislative provision, not inconsistent with conscience." The opposition to State education by the "strict constructionists" was wide spread and aggressive, but the friends of the cause took firm hold of the idea, agitating it until it was developed and enacted into a law in 1825—the first law that authorized a general tax, to use the language of the law itself, "for the instruction of youth of every class and grade without distinction, in reading, writing, arithmetic and other necessary branches of a common education." The law provided for a tax of one-half of a mill to be levied by the County Commissioners upon the county duplicate for the use and maintenance of common schools.

As a result of the long and bitter agitation upon the subject of education, the way was prepared for the establishment of the Institution by the Legislature. To Rev. James Hoge, D. D., more than to any other man, belongs the credit for bringing about the consummation. He was a prominent Presbyterian minister of Columbus. A staunch friend of popular education, he was one of the seven commissioners appointed by Governor Trimble, in 1822, to take steps looking towards a school system for the State. His appointment on the commission led to his interest in deaf-mute education. A letter, bearing the date of Jan. 3, 1822, was received by Governor Trimble from the directors of the Pennsylvania Institution, established in 1820, describing the facilities possessed by the school and inviting Ohio to send pupils upon the same terms charged to citizens of their own State. Among other things the letter said: "Returns of the Deaf and Dumb have been made from the different counties of the State, and what was apprehended by some is now reduced to a painful certainty—their number being found much greater than had been generally supposed. This, we presume, will prove to be the case in our sister States, considering how much neglect such unfortunate persons too often suffer, and the motive to concealment which their friends and parents find in their personal feelings, when there is no prospect of giving them relief."

"Had you, Sir, seen our earliest pupils at the time of their admission, and could you now see them, and compare their past with their present condition, we venture to say that you would find abundant reason for exerting your individual and official influence, to obtain the means of affording to these unhappy objects of your own State the benefits of instruction. The translation, indeed, of one of the inferior species of creation, to the human species, would be only in a degree more wonderful than we have in several instances witnessed in our scholars: and we may add, as a great encouragement, that thirst for farther improvement, and rapidity of acquirement, after the delights of knowledge are once tasted, seem to be characteristic of the Deaf and Dumb. In these respects they appear rather to have the advantage of most children blessed with the possession of all their senses."

What wonder that these statements made a profound impression upon Dr. Hoge's mind, and awoke in his heart an interest that never allowed him to rest until he had helped bring about the establishment of a school for the deaf of his own State?

Although the Legislature did not accept the invitation to send pupils to Philadelphia, an act was passed at the next session, requiring "the listers of the several townships in each county of the State, at the time of taking the enumeration of white persons, to ascertain the number of the deaf and dumb, of all ages, and to return said lists to the clerk of common pleas of said county," with a statement of their pecuniary condition. The result of the enumeration was four hundred and twenty-eight deaf-mutes in the State, without Athens and Hamilton, the latter the most populous in the State, which made no returns. Seventy-two were reported as "in good circumstances," 66 as "in middling circumstances," 279 as "poor" and 11 were not reported. It was plain that there existed material enough for a school, and that but little dependence for its support could be placed upon tuition fees from parents and guardians. Dr. Hoge now saw his way clear, and brought the subject to the attention of Governor Morrow; and, at his suggestion, the Governor inserted a strong recommendation in his message to the Legislature at the opening of the session of 1826-7, urging "the establishing of an Asylum for the education of the deaf and dumb persons in this State." On the 8th of December, 1826, the subject was referred in the House of Representatives to a select committee of three. Dr. Hoge went before the committee with an elaborate memorial, prepared by himself and signed by a large number of prominent citizens. The memorial detailed, at length, the condition of the deaf previous to instruction, the efforts that had been made in foreign countries, and recently in our own, for their relief, and the change which education wrought in them. On the 27th, the Committee reported a bill for incorporating the Institution, and it passed without serious opposition on January 30, 1827.

Prior to the act of incorporation, two applications were made to the Legislature for pecuniary aid in behalf of the deaf. During the session of 1819-20, a citizen of Stark county applied for State aid in sending his son to the American Asylum. A bill was reported in his favor, but there appears to have been no final action taken upon it. In the spring of 1821, an association of citizens was formed in Cincinnati, "for establishing a school for the instruction of the Deaf and Dumb in this western part of the country." Rev. James Chute was selected and sent to the American Asylum in July to qualify himself for the work. He returned home in the following November, and the next month the Association made application to the Legislature for an act of incorporation, under the name of "The Western Asylum for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb," and for pecuniary aid. The application was rejected, on the ground that such an Institution should have a central location. Mr. Chute's connection with the enterprise ceased. He was afterward chaplain of the old Ohio Penitentiary. Before any organization was effected by the act of incorporation, a school for the deaf was started in May, 1827, in Tallmadge, now in Summit county, Ohio. In the village was a man, Bradley by name, who had three deaf daughters in his family. Their condition excited the sympathy of the neighbors, and inquiry brought out the fact that there were other mutes in neighboring townships. A meeting of citizens was held March 19, 1827, and a resolution was adopted "to make an attempt to establish a school or asylum for the deaf and dumb." A committee was chosen, with full powers to arrange for a school, which, in the language of the Committee, "if public sentiment and benevolence shall justify, is intended to become a permanent institution." Mr. Colonel Smith, a mute who received six years' instruction in the American Asylum and had taken up his residence in the village, was engaged for a school term of six months, tuition to be $6. The school was supported by private charity. The sum of $100 was voted by the Legislature, in 1828, for the salary of the teacher, and the same amount was granted for the next year, "should the school in Columbus not go into active operation." The latter money was not drawn from the treasury, the school having been closed. Eleven pupils were enrolled, most of whom afterward attended the Ohio Institution.

BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

The act of incorporation provided for the appointment of a Board of Trustees by the Governor who was to be ex-officio President. The Board was to exercise the usual corporate powers and to hold property, the annual income of which should not exceed $30,000. The first Board consisted of eight members, who met and organized in July, 1827. Governor Trimble was President ex-officio; *Rev. James Hoge, D. D., Secretary, and Gustavus Swan, Esq., Treasurer. The number of trustees was increased to twelve the next year. Until 1845 the number fluctuated between twelve and fourteen. In 1846, the Governor ceased to be ex-officio President, and the Board has since appointed one of their own number to discharge the duties of President. Then the number of trustees was reduced to seven, and remained so until 1852, when all the Benevolent Institutions were placed under one Board of nine Trustees. A committee of three had control of the Institutions during the interim of the stated meetings of the Board. In 1856, the Institutions were re-organized, being placed under separate Boards of three Trustees each, which number continued until 1878. The number has, since then, been five, the Superintendent of the Institution discharging the duties of Secretary.

LOCATION.

The Board, in its first report made to the Legislature in December 5, 1827, recommended that the Institution be located at Columbus for the following reasons:

“At this place it will be under the eye, and subject to the inspection of the Legislature, its immediate Patron, at all times.

And the facilities of intercourse and conveyance, which are collected at this point, render it more convenient to every part of this State, and the north-western States, generally, than any other place.”

In accordance with this recommendation, an act was passed by the Legislature, in 1829, appropriating $500 for the purchase of a suitable site in Columbus. Three outlots, containing about ten acres, then half a mile from the town, were bought for three hundred dollars—“a price considerably below the supposed value.” Dr. Hoge owned one of the lots. They are now in the heart of the city, and are worth over $300,000. The grounds were, at first, divided by interior fences and devoted mainly to the raising of crops; but, in 1868, they were rearranged by a skilful landscape artist, presenting a fine variety of surface, with beautiful lawns, drives and walks. About the year 1850 the removal of the Institution to a country site began to be a subject of talk among the members of the Legislature, but it was strenuously opposed by Superintendent after Superintendent down to 1864.

BUILDINGS.

The Board, in its first report, calculating upon dividing with the Kentucky Institution, founded in 1823, the patronage of the Mississippi Valley north and west of the Ohio River, counted upon an attendance of from fifty to seventy-five, and submitted plans for buildings which, it was hoped in view of “the low prices of materials and labor," could be purchased or erected for five thousand dollars. But the finances of the State were then greatly absorbed in the construction of canals, and the Board was compelled to rent buildings in Columbus until able to build. It was not until 1832 that an appropriation, part of the dues arising from public sales in Cincinnati, allowed the commencement of the first building which was completed for occupancy in the fall of 1834. The building was fifty feet by eighty and three stories high, costing, with a barn and out-buildings, $15,000. It was designed to accommodate from sixty to eighty pupils, and was thought to be sufficiently large to meet the wants of the Institution for many years to come. But in 1845, the attendance of over a hundred necessitated the addition of a wing to the south side, seventy feet by thirty and four stories high. The Institution had now accommodations for one hundred and fifty pupils; but before the lapse of another decade the want of more room was sorely felt, and from that time on the Board, in its annual reports, bombarded the Legislature upon the necessity of additional buildings.

In the spring of 1864, although the State was going through the throes of the Civil War, the Legislature, on account of the dilapidated condition of the original building which was described in public prints as "an uncomely relic of modern antiquity," passed unanimously a bill, providing for the erection of a new house, "to be of plain and substantial construction, having special adaptation and proper economy for the convenient and suitable accommodation of three hundred and fifty pupils and necessary officers and servants." The Governor, instead of the Board, was empowered to carry out the provisions of the act. The ground was broken on the 30th of June, 1864, in the rear of the old building, and the middle of the following autumn witnessed the laying of the corner-stone. In the spring of 1867, while the new house was still in process of construction, an epidemic, which proved to be typhoid fever, broke out, claiming for its victims five of the pupils. The school was immediately disbanded to arrest the advancing progress of the epidemic. To use the language of the Institution physician: "The probable cause of this epidemic—added to the prevalent bad influence of [the] season, [and] the interruption of the already defective ventilation of the old building by the construction of the new building and all its extensive excavations—was the temporary obstruction of the sewer in the rear of the building.”

The demolition of the old building was soon afterward begun, and by the fall of 1868 the new one was opened for the reception of pupils, the formal opening occurring on the 11th of February, 1869, when Gov. R. B. Hayes presided, and Rev. Collins Stone delivered an elaborate address upon the “History and Methods of Deaf-Mute Instruction.” The style of architecture of the building is called the “Franco-Italian,” because the campaniles or towers are of the form and appearance peculiar to the Italian order and their steep roofs and dormer windows are of the French style.

SUPPORT.

The subject of the support of the Institution was a matter of no small perplexity, as the first report of the Board shows. The trustees say :

“For the support of the youth who may be sent to the Asylum, it is supposed that eighty dollars for each will be sufficient to defray the expense of boarding, tuition, fuel, etc., during the year. And should Legislative bounty, or individual liberality, enable the Board to support the instructors and other persons employed in the Asylum, the expense of each individual would be diminished in proportion. Perhaps the best plan is that adopted by the Legislatures of the several States, which have established, or are engaged in sustaining similar Institutions. These States have made, by law, full provision for the support of such a number of deaf mutes as they deemed sufficient to meet the necessities of the poor, among whom by far the largest portion of them are found. It is respectfully suggested, as a subject of inquiry, whether there may not be an act passed authorizing the payment by the Treasurer of State of the necessary expense, not exceeding eighty dollars for each, of one pupil from each Senatorial District in the State, to be selected by the Senator or Representative of that District, for the time being, instead of one from each Judicial Circuit; with a provision that the Commissioners of any county, may partly or wholly defray the expense of supporting one for every ten thousand inhabitants, which the county may contain; allowing the support in like manner, of one, although the county should not contain that number of inhabitants. And further it appears, to be desirable that there should be express provision made that other States shall have the like privilege, on the same terms, and pupils shall be admitted at the same rate, whether supported by their own or their parents' means, by the aid of charitable individuals, or associations."

"The Board, in consideration of this subject, have not forgotten that the revenue of the State is engrossed in a great degree, by the noble enterprize of uniting the Ohio with Lake Erie by a navigable canal. They have, therefore, endeavored to find sources of income, from which such appropriations as are necessary may be made, which will not interfere with the financial arrangements of the State, or impose additional burdens on the people. And although they have not been as successful as they would have desired, they beg leave to suggest the following means of meeting the appropriations and expenditures proposed.

"1. That such parts of the avails of the Salt Lands granted by the United States to the State of Ohio, and also of the Literary Fund, as are not pledged, or designed to be given to other purposes, may be appropriated to this object. Here it may be remarked that it is much doubted by many respectable citizens, whether it is good and sound policy, to place any part of the proceeds of the Salt Lands in the Common School Fund; and although we would be among the last to deprive our seminaries of learning of any part of that aid which they may derive from this source, yet, it may be worthy of inquiry, whether the Asylum for Deaf-mutes may not share with them?"

"2. That an application be made to the Congress of the United States, for a donation of land, equal in quantity to a township, to be located in small tracts, at the several land offices in this State, or elsewhere, under the direction of this Board, or if this location be thought inexpedient, in an entire tract, where good land may be obtained. It is thought, however, that the former location will be most advantageous to the Asylum."

"3. That a subscription paper be opened at the office of the Clerk of the County Court in each county, under the direction of said Court, and made payable to the County Treasurer, in order to obtain subscriptions and donations for the erection of buildings, and for the establishment of a Permanent Fund."

The first appropriation of money made to the Institution by the Legislature in 1827-8 was drawn from the "Literary Fund."

This fund was originally designed to be a means of sustaining the Institution, but it was inadvertently turned into other channels, and all appropriations have since been drawn direct from the State treasury.

The Board, in speaking of this matter in the report for 1838, says: "Ohio may well pride herself in such exhibitions of her liberality; and it has been truly remarked that no other State in the Union, perhaps no government in the world has established such institutions as this, and the Institution for the Blind, and the Asylum for the Insane, solely by legislative authority, and by appropriations from the public treasury. Other States, older and more populous and wealthy, may have appropriated larger sums, or may have aided more Institutions designed for the relief of suffering humanity; but none, so far as we are informed, have adopted and carried out the principle which may be safely affirmed to be correct—that such establishments should be made by the State, and be her property, and be governed and sustained in this manner, without calling for individual bounty as a condition of public patronage."

In 1830, Governor McArthur, in his message to the Legislature, advised that a memorial be presented to Congress, praying for a township of land to endow the Institution. This was accordingly done, and a resolution was passed directing the members of Congress from the State to give the measure their cordial support and influence. A bill, granting a township, passed one house of Congress without opposition, but in the other it was not reached in the order of business before adjournment. That was the last of it, although the Superintendent, in his report for 1844, recommended that another effort be made, as A. P. Stone, Esq., who was a member of the Board of Trustees, was also a member of Congress.

During the session of 1829-30, an act was passed, authorizing the support of one indigent pupil from each of the nine judicial circuits of the State—the pupils "to be selected by the Board of Trustees, from persons recommended by the associate judges of the counties where they reside." In 1830-31, the number of indigent pupils was increased to eighteen; in 1832-3, to twenty-seven; in 1833-4, to thirty-six; in 1834-5, to forty-eight, and in 1835-6, to sixty. In 1844, the Board was empowered to admit all suitable applicants. The following provision was incorporated in the Constitution of 1851: "Institutions for the benefit of the insane, blind, and deaf and dumb shall always be fostered and supported by the State." In 1854, just sixteen years after the school law was so amended as to make the school tax a State, instead of a county levy, thereby making the common schools more than ever a State institution, the Legislature passed a law, extending free education to all deaf children, rich and poor, thus destroying all distinctions of aristocracy and caste.

DOMESTIC DEPARTMENT.

When the Institution opened in 1829, the boarding department was committed to the charge of, to use the words of the Board, "a lady of suitable character, to whose care the female pupils may be confided with safety when not under the immediate care of the teacher." In pursuance of an agreement, all the pupils were boarded by the lady at $1.25 each per week, the furniture, fuel and candles being furnished by the Board. This arrangement remained in force until 1834 when the lady retired. The Principal then took charge of the boarding establishment, in addition to his duties in the class room. The Board's report says: "He furnishes board and lodging at a fixed price, by contract, per week, to every pupil; and this has been somewhat varied, according to the price of provisions, etc.; and has always been kept as low as the Board, in the exercise of their best judgment, believed to be a reasonable compensation. In this contract (it ought to be stated) it is stipulated that he shall furnish bedding, fuel, light, etc., at his own expense; the institution is at no expense on this account." In 1843, the appointment of a Steward was made. The Board's report says: "The appointment seems to perfect the domestic arrangements, by releasing the Superintendent from the duties of providing for the family, which had become arduous, and enabling him to direct his attention to many of the general matters of the establishment on which its respectability and usefulness depend. The Steward manages the boarding department, has particular care of the grounds and attends to the repairs of the buildings." The Board recommended altering the plan for the better by giving the Steward a salary, which was accordingly done, with the requirement of filing a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties. In 1880, the Steward was allowed the services of a clerk in his office, and in 1884, the office of Storekeeper was created.

At the same time that the boarding department passed into the hands of the Principal, a Matron was appointed to "take charge of the female pupils out of school, for the purpose of forming their moral and economical habits while they are receiving mental improvement." The growth of the Institution necessitated the appointment of an Assistant Matron in 1846, and another one was added in 1864. In 1868, the positions of House-keeper and Nurse were established. Since 1875 two nurses, one for the boys and the girls respectively, have been in charge of the hospitals. In 1869, a dressmaker was appointed, to be under the direction of the Matron. In 1892, an act was passed by the Legislature, directing the dressmaker to give instruction in fitting and cutting.

In 1841, a Physician was placed upon the list of officers.

In 1851, a Visitors' Attendant was appointed "much to the relief of the matrons, who found the service not only a burdensome addition to their other labors, but they were often obliged to neglect their other important duties, especially the proper care and supervision of the female pupils and the preparation of their work." It was found necessary in 1868 to have a door-keeper to receive the visitors and wait upon them. This position was dropped in 1873 when an additional attendant was appointed. The two attendants take turns in conducting the visitors through the building and attending to the calls of the telephone.

In 1868, a Supervisor for the boys was appointed and the next year two boys' attendants were placed in charge of the dormitories. In the assignment of monitorial duties, the appointment of an additional attendant became necessary. Since 1880 a lady has attended to the personal cleanliness of the smaller boys. A night watch was appointed in 1869, and also the laundry was placed in charge of a man.

INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT.

The Board was early impressed with the importance of industrial training. The report for 1836 says: "Of the original plan of the Institution, however, one part, and that a very important part, yet remains to be acted upon in a way that will be adequate to the advantages which it proposes. This is the instruction of the pupils, the males especially, in those trades which may be suitable to their circumstances, and which will enable them to earn a livelihood when they leave the school. This has been a subject of investigation with the Board heretofore; but for want of adequate funds, and for other reasons which need not now be detailed, little has been done. The girls are, to some extent, taught common household business; and the boys have done something in horticulture, and have occasionally performed other labor on the premises. But it is deemed altogether necessary to adopt systematic measures for employing them regularly, a portion of every day, in some handicraft that will be profitable to them in after life. Two methods of accomplishing this object have been under consideration. The first is, that the Board should employ workmen to conduct the different trades that shall be introduced, apply sufficient funds to carry on the business advantageously, and dispose of the products for the benefit of the Institution. The second is, to contract with mechanics of proper character, to instruct the pupils, and manage the business chiefly, if not wholly, with their own capital, and for their own benefit, giving the labor of those whom they teach during a fixed number of hours every day, as their remuneration for time and expense. In either way it will be necessary that work shops shall be erected, implements furnished, and perhaps materials to some amount provided by the Asylum in advance; but in the former case, to a much larger extent than the latter. For this reason, and because it will probably secure other advantages, it is thought that the latter plan is to be preferred. If mechanical business is carried on by hiring workmen, and providing all materials, it will be, in all probability, a losing business every year. But if responsible mechanics will manage the whole arrangement for their own interest, the pupils will be trained, and no loss be incurred."

In 1838, the Board was enabled to erect a work shop, twenty feet by sixty and two stories high, and it was intended to begin several mechanical trades as soon as practicable. It was resolved by the Board that the most economical plan would be to "provide tools, and if necessary, make some advance for materials and contract with mechanics to instruct the pupils and manage the business at their own expense and for their own advantage, receiving the labor of the boys as their compensation." "A committee was appointed to carry this plan into effect."

According to the report for 1840, the above plan had not proved a success "on account of the difficulty of finding mechanics willing to engage in such business;" and although contracts had been made with several men, a beginning had only been made in shoemaking. A machine shop had commenced, but nothing came of it.

In 1841, the shoemaker's shop was still progressing favorably, though attempts to introduce other kinds of business had failed. The Trustees, however, were not discouraged, for they say: "The first opportunity of enlarging these operations in an advantageous manner, that may offer, will be immediately embraced."

In 1846, however, even shoemaking by the contract system was abandoned.

Ex-Superintendent G. O. Fay, in his address, entitled "The Semi-Centennial History of the Ohio Institution," says: "The foremen were interested in teaching the boys only so far as they could make their labor profitable to themselves. This they failed to do, and they were also annoyed by the thoughtless waste of material. The relations between foremen and boys were sometimes more violent than would have been necessary had the former been better able to communicate with their mute apprentices. Mutual dislike, changes, and a degree of unpopularity clouded the enterprise, and, as the room soon came to be greatly needed for other important uses, trades, as such, were reluctantly dropped."

It was not until 1863 that shoemaking was resumed, and the problem of trade teaching was satisfactorily solved by placing Mr. P. P. Pratt, a skilled deaf-mute, in charge of the shop and on a salary, "the State owning all the materials and disposing of all products." The shop is still under the management of the same foreman, who has a knack of making shoemakers out of his boys. Since 1890, with the introduction of the necessary machinery in the shop, the factory system has been successfully taught, in addition to bench work, and it enables the boys to obtain a ready entree into the factories in the cities.

In 1867, by an act of the Legislature, the arts of printing and book-binding were added to the industrial instruction of the Institution. These trades were placed under the management of the Supervisor of Public Printing with the concurrence of the Superintendent of the Institution in matters affecting the pupils. The appointment of the foreman of the printing office was vested in the Superintendent of the Institution in 1880, and the appointment of Mr. E. J. Scott, a skilled deaf printer, has since emphasized the wisdom of the action. The office has printed the Mute's Chronicle for a quarter of a century with signal success. Since 1887 the office has done the printing of the State Board of Agriculture and the State Weather Bureau.

Until 1882 the trades of shoemaking, printing, and book-binding were carried on in the building, one hundred and thirty by thirty-five, erected in 1856. The growth of work in the Bindery compelled the erection of a new building in 1882, and the transfer of the shoe shop and the printing office. In 1880, carpentry was placed upon the list of trades, and in 1888, tailoring was added to the list. These four trades are taught in what is called the Industrial Building.

THE SCHOOL DEPARTMENT.

The first opening of the school occurred on the 16th of October, 1829, with only one pupil, a little boy, Samuel W. Flenniken by name. He was in his twelfth year, looking bright and cute in a suit of home-spun, consisting of brown pantaloons and a gray jacket, buttoned up with two large brass buttons, and with a coarse, close-fitting fur cap. Within half an hour of his arrival, Governor Morrow made his appearance, and taking the little boy by the hand, gave him an approving pat on the head. Other pupils arrived at different periods during the year, and when the term closed on the last Friday in July, 1830, the number had increased to ten. The second year, 1830-31, had thirteen pupils more, and an assistant teacher was appointed in the person of Danforth E. Ball, a mute, who was educated at the American Asylum. The growth of the school has been steady, as the following figures will show. One hundred and fifty-three pupils were enrolled during the first decade from 1829 to 1839; 251, from 1839 to 1849; 291, from 1849 to 1859; 355, from 1859 to 1869; 670, from 1869 to 1879; 574, from 1879 to 1889; and 229, since 1889. Twenty-five hundred and twenty-three have received instruction in the school since its opening in 1829. The twenty-one hundred and forty-seven pupils who have been discharged within the past sixty-three years have, with very few exceptions, become useful, law-abiding and self-supporting citizens.

The roll of teachers bears one hundred and nineteen names, twenty-six being graduates of the school. It is a fact worthy of note that twenty more of its graduates have taught in other schools in the United States. Of the teachers, William Willard became Principal of the Indiana Institution; Thomas Officer, of the Illinois Institution; James S. Brown, of the Indiana Institution, afterward of the Louisiana Institution; John S. Officer, of the Wisconsin Institution; Louis H. Jenkins, of the Wisconsin Institution, afterward of the Kansas Institution; Roswell H. Kinney, of the Minnesota Institution, afterward of the Nebraska Institution, of the Colorado Institution and of the Texas Institution; John M. Francis, of the California Institution; George L. Weed, of the Ohio Institution, afterward of the Wisconsin Institution; Benjamin Talbot, of the Iowa Institution, afterward acting Superintendent of the Ohio Institution; Gilbert O. Fay, of the Ohio Institution; Edward C. Stone, of the Wisconsin Institution, afterward of the American Asylum; Charles W. Ely, of the Maryland Institution; Elmore P. Caruthers, of the Arkansas Institution; Charles S. Perry, of the Ohio Institution; Horace H. Hollister, of the West Virginia Institution; and Park Terrell, of the Florida Institution.

The term of instruction was, at first, three years. It was extended to four in 1833; to five in 1834; to seven in 1843; and to ten in 1866, which is still the legal limit.

In the report for 1838, the Principal broaches the question, "whether the time has not arrived, when other studies, peculiarly adapted to the condition of the mute, cannot be introduced to advantage? I allude particularly to portrait and landscape painting, designing, linear drawing, and engraving; not that they should all be taught, but whether a selection could not be made from them very advantageously." To quote from the report for 1844: "We had two courses of lessons given last year in drawing. It was thought a very creditable beginning, particularly taking into consideration the circumstances, under which they were given, the aggregate amount of time devoted to them, and the early hour of the morning which was thus occupied. I would respectfully recommend that these lessons be continued, at such times as would be convenient, and to such as manifest a talent in this way, not, however to interfere with any existing studies or employments in the Asylum." For the past fifty years no decided step has been taken in regard to instruction in art.

In 1844, a cabinet of minerals was begun for the purpose of "practical utility in illustrating instruction," and it received, from time to time, valuable additions in shells, rare coins and scientific apparatus. In 1868, a large room was devoted to its use with the expectation of enlarging its usefulness, but the room was diverted to other uses in 1881, and the specimens and apparatus became ornaments of the Library.

The Superintendent's report for 1851 says: "A beginning has been made in forming a Cabinet of Common Things, such as seeds, liquids, specimens of cloth, and small articles of every description, which may be preserved in phials, or boxes, or placed on shelves. These, properly labeled, can be shown to the younger pupils, and they can easily learn their names. Knowledge derived from the sight of an object is more perfect than it can be from a mere sign. Their taste will also be cultivated by examining these productions of nature and art, and a desire will be excited to enlarge their sphere of knowledge by acquiring the names of other things." The phial plan was revived in 1881, but it has never been carried on to a very satisfactory extent.

The report for 1851 also says: "An Institution Library has been commenced, embracing reading books adapted to the various capacities of the pupils, from the youngest to the most advanced. These are divided into Branch Libraries, and, for the present, are placed under the direction of the Teachers, in their school-rooms, for the use of their respective classes." The library continued to grow in size, and in 1868 a large room was set apart for its particular use. It reached the number of nearly three thousand volumes by 1879; but not much has been done in the way of increasing it since then. Since 1882 the juvenile books have been kept in the study-rooms within easy access of the pupils.

The report for 1851 also says: "A gymnasium, to attract the pupils to engage daily in healthful exercises, has been erected on the playground, and promises to be of especial benefit in the absence of workshops and other excitants to a healthy activity." This was supplemented by an excellent gymnasium in the building erected in 1856 for shops. It was kept up until 1863, when it had to give way to the shoeshop. In 1881, another effort for a gymnasium was made in the boys' play-room; but it was abandoned after a short trial for several reasons. In 1890, a gymnasium was revived in the advanced boys' study-room, but after a few months' trial, it was deemed desirable to restore the room to its original purpose. This year a lady of experience has been giving the children daily instruction in Physical Culture in the girls' play-room.

Until 1851 the Superintendent himself preached two sermons on Sundays in the chapel, one in the morning and the other in the afternoon. From 1852 to 1866 the Superintendent preached in the morning and the teachers took turns in conducting the afternoon lecture. From 1868 to 1879 the Superintendent preached a morning and an afternoon sermon. Since 1880 the Superintendent or the Principal and the teachers have rotated in conducting the morning service in the chapel. From 1829 to 1868 the pupils attended a church in the city after the morning service at the Institution. Since 1869 a Sunday School in the afternoon has been in operation.

In the year 1866 the lengthening of the term of pupilage to ten years justified the establishment of a "high class." In 1872, the school was reorganized, being divided by department lines, a primary, a grammar, a scientific, or academic, as it is now called, consisting of four, three and three years respectively. At present the primary department consists of five grades; the grammar department, of two, and the academic department, of two. At the time of the above reorganization, the salaries of the teachers were fixed according to departments. The Ohio School was thus the first to abolish the discrimination made between the hearing and the deaf teachers in regard to salaries.

Until 1867 the teachers took turns in supervising during the study hour in the evenings and mornings. With the advent of the shops the morning study hour was discontinued. In 1880, the teachers were relieved of study duty, it being assigned to two teachers on each side of the house with extra pay. This policy was abandoned in 1889, and now, as before, each teacher takes his turn at study duty. Candles gave place to oil in 1846, and oil, to gas in 1854. Since 1874 the Institution has been furnished with gas by the Penitentiary free of charge; but the quality has at times been so unsatisfactory for the purposes of evening study, that electric light is being agitated with a good prospect of success in the near future.

In 1868, in order to obviate the overcrowding of the shops in the industrial department at certain hours while they remained empty at certain other hours of the day, a system of rotation was devised. The school was divided into three divisions and the day into three sessions, as will be seen by the school calendar for the present school year here given :

By this system while two-thirds of the pupils are in school one-third of them are at work in the shops. The average daily time spent by each pupil in school is thus about four hours and a half and the time spent in manual labor is about two hours and a half. To avoid monotony, as will be seen by examining the calendar, the school and shop hours of all the classes change on the first day of each month.

The daily schedule, given below, will help to make clear the rotation system:

RISING:—Not later than 5:45 a. m.

BREAKFAST:— Week days—6:30 a. m.

Sundays and Holidays—7:00 a. m.

RECREATION:— Week days—7:00 to 7:30 a. m.

This system has proved very satisfactory, and has been adhered to ever since its adoption, with good results.

In the early days of the school, from the first, articulation was taught incidentally to those pupils whose speech enabled them to profit by it. In 1869, a systematic effort was made in oral work. The Superintendent's report for that year says: "The teaching of articulation to semi-mutes, of whom we have a class of thirty-one, has been pursued through the year, the method being to carry forward the regular exercises of the day by oral speech, where intelligible, having recourse to signs only when obliged to. The two teachers employed—one a lady—have labored patiently, faithfully and aptly." The next year this plan was given up for that of "giving instruction in articulation and lip-reading, by a teacher experienced and skillful, to semi-mutes and any others who may desire it, neither attempting nor desiring to limit them to oral and written speech in the acquisition of the several branches of general education." This latter plan has since been adhered to, and this year three teachers are employed in the work.

It seems that in the early days of the school there was no fixed rule observed respecting the age for the admission of pupils. The Superintendent's report for 1853, in touching on this subject, says; "The course of instruction which must be followed to impart to a deaf-mute a knowledge of language, requires considerable maturity of mind, as well as power of application on the part of the pupil. If the child is sent to this Institution before this maturity is attained, the first years of instruction are not only lost, but great labor and care is imposed on the teacher. The age of twelve is regarded by experienced instructors as the most favorable for commencing education, as by that time there is usually some maturity of mind, as well as of physical health, and the pupil is prepared to make the most rapid advancement. It is much better for the pupils and for the Institution to admit none under the age of ten and generally to discourage their admission until they reach the maturity of twelve. This course has accordingly been generally pursued." From 1854 to 1865, applicants were required to be "between the ages of twelve and twenty years;" from 1866 to 1872, "between ten and twenty years;" from 1873 to 1880, "between six and twenty-one years," and since 1881, "between eight and twenty one years."

Since 1891 a printed "Course of Study" has been in use in all the classes except the articulation classes.

Since 1868, graduating exercises have been held at the close of the school year in June. The exercises consist of recitations, essays, orations, the presentation of diplomas, and the planting of the class ivy; in consequence of the latter custom, the front walls of the Institution are almost covered with ivy. Diplomas are given to those who complete the full course of study; and certificates of honorable discharge, to those who reach the ten-year limit without completing the prescribed course of study, and to those whose advancement does not justify promotion to the grammar department. "Graduation Day" is always one of interest, and the chapel is yearly thronged with the parents and friends of the pupils, and others interested in our work.

In 1881, our chapel stage was remodeled. It has a working capacity of nearly 1,000 square feet. The front part, extending about twelve feet from the foot-lights, is enclosed in a chancel-box scene, sufficiently commodious for purposes of daily worship and evening lecture. The space between this and the stage background furnishes safe and convenient storage for our scenery and stage fittings, which are the work of a practical scenic artist.

Since 1881 the platform in the chapel has been decorated every Sunday morning with flowers or a floral design made by our florist. For this pleasure we are indebted to Matthew Russell, a wealthy gentleman, who left a legacy of $20,000 to the Institution. This sum was reduced by litigation and compromise to $10,866, which came into the possession of the Institution in 1879. It was decided by the Board of Trustees to erect a conservatory with a part of the money, and work was commenced in the spring of 1880. When completed it was christened the Russell Conservatory. The central structure is twenty-six feet square and thirty feet high. The wings on either side are each 26x22 feet. The following year an annex, 50x22 feet, was built in the rear of the main conservatory, with a dome, twenty-one feet square. Later a propagating house, 50x9 feet, was built, and a rose house, 66x20 feet. In 1886, after the conservatory was finished, the remainder of the Russell fund was used to construct a bronzed iron fountain in front of the main building; costing, with the foundation and the iron fence around it, $1,172.77.

The health of the school has been excellent in the past sixty-three years. Forty-two pupils died during attendance, three by drowning and two on the railroad. The majority brought with them the seeds of disease from their summer vacation, succumbing to them. The first death occurred in 1843, fourteen years after the opening of school in 1829.

SUPERINTENDENTS.

Horatio Nelson Hubbell, first Superintendent, 1827-1851, was born in Brookfield, Conn., September 9, 1779; was graduated at the Cornwall School in Conn., and licensed to preach in 1827; was appointed in the same year to take charge of this Institution, then in embryo; spent eighteen months at the American Asylum in preparing himself for his new duties, which he assumed in 1829; resigned his position in 1851; was appointed superintendent of the Wisconsin Institution in the same year, but resigned after a few months; returned to Columbus and spent his time in philanthropic and literary labors; died at his residence in this city on January 19th, 1857. In 1882, the Ohio Deaf Mute Alumni Association presented a fine portrait of him to the Institution.

Josiah Addison Cary, second Superintendent, 1851-1852, was born in West Brookfield, Mass., July 29, 1813; was graduated at Amherst College in 1832; was appointed shortly thereafter teacher in the New York (Fanwood) Institution; was licensed to preach in 1839 and ordained in 1840, preaching at various places as supply while teaching through the week until 1850, when he was installed as pastor of the Dutch Reformed Church of Hous-ton street, New York; resigned both as teacher and pastor in 1851; was appointed superintendent of this Institution the same year. The Alumni Association receiving a portrait of him from his children, had it retouched and reframed, and presented it to the Institution in 1885.

Collins Stone, third Superintendent, 1852-1863, was born in Guilford, Conn., September 7, 1812; was graduated at Yale College in 1832; was appointed teacher in the American Asylum in 1833; took a private course in theological study and was licensed to preach; was ordained soon after his removal to Columbus, preaching frequently in feeble parishes in the neighborhood and supplying an occasional vacancy in the churches in the city; resigned in 1863 to accept the Principalship of the American Asylum; died from a blow of a locomotive in Hartford, Conn., on December 24, 1870. A memorial portrait of him was presented by the Ohio Deaf Mute Alumni Association to the Institution in 1889.

George Ludington Weed, Jr., fourth Superintendent, 1863-1866, was born on the 9th of April, 1828, in Union county, Arkansas, then a territory, where his father was a missionary to the Indians; was graduated at Marietta College in 1849, and went to Andover Theological Seminary; was appointed teacher in this Institution in 1854, which position he resigned in 1861 on account of his health; resigning the position of superintendent in 1866, he subsequently became Superintendent of the Wisconsin Institution; since resigning this position he has been teaching in the Philadelphia Institution.

Gilbert Otis Fay, fifth Superintendent, 1866-1880, was born at Wadsworth, Medina Co., Ohio, November 30, 1834; went through Phillips Academy, Yale College and Andover Seminary successively, with honor; was appointed teacher in this Institution in 1862; received, in 1880, the honorary degree of Ph. D., from Adelbert College of Western Reserve University; resigned the position of Superintendent in 1880 to accept a position as teacher in the American Asylum, where he is still in service.

Charles Strong Perry, sixth Superintendent, 1880-1882, was born at Barlow, Washington county, O., in 1843; was graduated at Marietta College and became teacher in this Institution in 1865; resigned the position of Superintendent in the fall of 1882, leaving the Institution in the hands of Rev. Mr. Talbot as acting Superintendent; retired to Santa Barbara, California; is now teaching in the California Institution. Benjamin Talbot was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., May 22, 1827; was graduated at Yale College in 1849, and at its Divinity School in 1853; was teacher in Williston Seminary the next year; was appointed teacher in this Institution in 1854, resigning to become Principal of the Iowa Institution in 1863, which position he held until 1878; was ordained to the work of the ministry in 1864; returned to this Institution as head teacher in 1880.

Amasa Pratt, seventh Superintendent, 1883-1890, was born in Essex, Conn., November 23, 1842; entered Williams College in 1859, but left to enter the army; returned and graduated in 1865; taught one year in the Pennsylvania Institution when he went to the California Institution where he remained eight years; accepted the Presidency of the Oahu College at Honolulu, Hawaii, where he remained until 1883, when he was appointed to the position of Superintendent of this Institution upon the recommendation of the Hon. L. L. Rice, then residing in Honolulu, through whose efforts the trades of printing and binding were established at the Institution during the term of his office as Supervisor of Public Printing; resigned in 1890 and has since been engaged in business in this city.

James Wilson Knott, eighth Superintendent, 1890-1892, was born in Bedford, Coshocton Co., O., August 14, 1850; was graduated in 1879 at Wooster University, through which he made his own way by teaching; was Superintendent of the Public Schools of Tiffin, Ohio, for eleven years; has been a member of the State Board of School Examiners since 1889; was appointed Superintendent of this Institution, with Mr. Patterson as Principal of the School; resigned in 1892, and has since been Superintendent of the Public Schools of Wooster, O. Robert Patterson was born in Oakley, Fifeshire, Scotland, December 11, 1848. At the age of four, his parents emigrated to this country; was a pupil of this Institution from 1859 to 1865, when he left to enter the National Deaf-Mute College at Washington, D. C.; upon his graduation in 1870, he became a teacher in this Institution, which position he held continuously until appointed to his present position in 1890.

Stephen Russell Clark, the present Superintendent, was born at Meadville, Penn., September 13, 1836; attended the Alleghany College, of which his father was the President, and was a student at Mt. Union College when the civil war broken out; enlisted for three months in a college company which was assigned to the 86th O. V. I., being elected Second Lieutenant; re-enlisted for a six month's call in 1862, as First Lieutenant in the Fifth Battalion O. V. C.; re-enlisted for three years in the 13th O. V. C. as Captain, was promoted as Major, Lieutenant Colonel and Colonel; was assigned to the Third Brigade, Second Division, Cavalry Corps, Army of the Potomac, and participated with that command in all the engagements from the Wilderness to Appomattox Court House; was admitted to the Northern Ohio M. E. Conference in 1872, filling various pulpits for eighteen years; was appointed Chaplain of the State Girls' Industrial Home, near Delaware, Ohio, in 1889, which position he held when elected to his present position in 1892.

SOCIETIES.

The Clonian Society, having for its object improvement in "Sign Elocution, Composition and Debate," was organized in January, 1869, by the pupils in the upper classes, and has since been in continual existence. Since the year 1880, 215 members have been enrolled. The society has a private library of 283 volumes for the use of its members. The officers for this term are:

President, Clara Runck.

Vice President and Treasurer, Albertus Wornstaff.

Secretary, Georgiana E. Lamson.

Librarian, Carrie F. Lingle.

Assistant Librarian, Albert W. Ohlemacher.

Trustees, E. J. Scott, C. W. Charles and W. H. Zorn.

The Crandon Club, a literary society composed of the younger boys, was organized in October, 1890; has at present 39 names on its roll; its library has 162 volumes. The officers are:

President, Morse Albert.

Vice President, George V. Bath.

Secretary and Treasurer, George F. Flick.

Librarian, Walter Reynolds.

Assistant Librarian, Frank R. Jones.

Trustees, Ira Crandon and W. H. Zorn.

The Sarah Perry Club, a literary society composed of the younger girls, was organized in March, 1891. The Club is named in memory of Miss Sarah Perry; who was a teacher in the Institution, and dying in 1879 left a legacy of $100 for the express purpose of purchasing juvenile books for the use of the children with the income of the money. The sum of fifty dollars for a similar purpose, was also left by Miss Maria Wells who attended school in the early days of the American Asylum. The officers of the club are:

President, Georgiana E. Lamson.

Vice President, Carrie F. Lingle.

Secretary, Clara B. Winton.

Treasurer, Lizzie M. Hewitt.

Librarian, Lina Stathem.

Trustee, A. H. Schory.

The Young Ladies' Society of Christian Endeavor was organized in November, 1892; has at present 79 members, 16 of whom are honorary members, 31 active and 32 associate members.

The officers are:

President, Clara Runck.

Vice-President, Cosette Thompson.

Recording Secretary and Treasurer, Georgiana E. Lamson.

Prayer Meeting Committee, Cosette Thompson, Chairman, Anna Montgomery, Bessie B. McGregor, Sadie Oxley and Hannah Ranz.

Lookout Committee, Clara B. Winton, Chairman, Eva Spocker, Anna Hanks, Libbie Nooner and Ethel Zell.

The Young Men's Society of Christian Endeavor organized in the same month, has at present twenty members.

The officers are:

President, Albert W. Ohlemacher.

Vice President, B. E. Noble.

Secretary, George V. Bath.

Treasurer, William DeSilver.

Prayer Meeting Committee, Ernest Zell and B. Wornstaff.

Lookout Committee, Wm. DeSilver, B. E. Noble and Charles Wasserstrom.

The Ohio Deaf Mute Alumni Association, "a society to promote the general welfare of the mute community," was organized in August, 1870. The interest of the occasion was enhanced by the presence of Governor R. B. Hayes, General Kent Jarvis, President of the Board of Trustees, Rev. Collins Stone, Principal of the American Asylum, Dr. Harvey P. Peet, President of the New York Institution, Hon. L. J. Dudley, of Northampton, Mass., Rev. Dr. Brown, of Pittsburg, Pa., and Rev. Dr. Byers, Secretary of the State Board of Charities. It was through the earnest efforts of Dr. G. O. Fay that the Association was established upon a firm foundation. The Association holds its reunions triennially at the Institution by invitation of the Board of Trustees. They continue three days, the first two being devoted to business and the last one to religious services and a farewell meeting, at which the older members give reminiscences of their school days. One of the most interesting features of the reunions is an industrial exposition, at which all the articles exhibited are the products of the members. Premiums are awarded for the best articles exhibited. At the Eighth Reunion, held in September, 1892, the Association assumed the responsibility of gathering a fund for the proposed Home for the aged and infirm deaf of the State. The officers are:

President, A. H. Schory.

Vice President, C. W. Charles.

Recording Secretary, Ed. H. McIlvain.

Corresponding Secretary, Ed. J. Scott.

Treasurer, Ira Crandon.

Executive Committee, W. H. Zorn, Chairman, John S. Leib and Ed. I. Holyeross.

Board of Managers of the Home Fund, Robert Patterson, President; R. P. McGregor, Secretary; Jacob Showalter, Geo. Evans, John Barrick, Matt. Mullen, B. O. Sprague, and Thomas McGinness, Treasurer.

STATISTICS.

The whole number of pupils who have been registered in this Institution, from its opening in the fall of 1829 until the present time, is twenty-five hundred and twenty-three. The alleged causes of their deafness are as follows:

According to a recent table prepared by the Secretary of the State Board of Charities, the current expenses, including salaries, of our Institution for the past twenty years amount to $1,508,270.22. A table prepared by the State Auditor gives the cost of the buildings and betterments at $850,000, exclusive of the value of the grounds.

THE VIRGINIA INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB (AND OF THE BLIND).

The Virginia Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb (and of the Blind),

STAUNTON, VIRGINIA,

1839-1893.

By THOMAS S. DOYLE,

Principal of the Institution.

THE VIRGINIA INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB (AND OF THE BLIND).

THE first effort looking toward the education of any deaf person in Virginia was made in the year 1812, by Colonel William Bolling, of Goochland county. Two brothers and a sister of this Colonel Bolling, who were deaf, had been sent to Edinburgh, Scotland, for education in the school of Thomas Braidwood in the latter part of the last century. In a letter dated "Bolling Hall" (Goochland county, Va.), December 10, 1841, and addressed to the Rev. Jos. D. Tyler, then principal of the Virginia Institution, Colonel William Bolling (above mentioned) writes as follows:

It may be interesting to you to be informed of the education of my two brothers, John and Thomas, and that of my sister Mary, who were all born in that situation. John Bolling, the oldest, was sent by my father, in the year 1771, to Edinburgh, and placed under the care and tuition of Thomas Braidwood. Thomas and Mary Bolling followed him in 1775. They all remained at his school during the Revolutionary War, and all returned to "Cobbs," in Chesterfield county, Va., the residence of my father, Major Thomas Bolling, in July, 1783.

John died about three months after his return.

Thomas's acquirements were most extraordinary. He was a ready penman, of nice, discriminating judgment, of scrupulous integrity; in all of his transactions his intelligence and tact in communication such as to attract the attention, entertain and amuse every company in which he associated, with the manners of a most polished gentleman; his articulation so perfect that his family and friends and the servants understood him in conversation or in reading aloud.

My sister's acquirements were equal to his, though her voice was not so pleasant; yet she was cheerful, intelligent, entertaining, and industrious. She died in 1826; my brother Thomas in 1836, in the 70th year of his age.

In the year 1812 John Braidwood, a grandson of my brother's preceptor, arrived in the city of Washington. Governor Pleasants, of this county, then a member of the House of Representatives from this district, knowing the situation of my family, immediately informed me thereof. By my solicitation Braidwood visited me in the month of May in this year (1812). His plans were to rent a suitable house in Baltimore, hire servants and procure every necessary to board all his pupils. War having been declared by the United States against Great Britain, he was thereby, he said, cut off from receiving remittances from London (the fact was, he had no funds), and that several gentlemen in Philadelphia and Baltimore had engaged scholars to him (which was not the fact), and promised to advance him $600.00 (?) to enable him to establish his institution.

Upon this statement Col. Bolling accompanied Braidwood to Richmond and, upon his return, placed that sum in his hands, with the understanding that his institution would be open on the 1st of July following. Meanwhile, during his absence, Braidwood was to write to Col. Bolling "every week or ten days." The next heard of him by Col. Bolling was that he was in distress in New York and wanted funds to help him out of his trouble. Contrary to the advice of friends, Col. Bolling sent him the sum asked for—$600.

In November of the same year (1812) Braidwood returned to Virginia and took charge of the education of the deaf children of Col. Bolling and "was faithful and diligent, exhibiting unequalled evidence of his qualifications in his profession."

My son's progress was truly gratifying until the following summer (1813), when, being in command of the troop of cavalry of this county, I was ordered to Norfolk, where I remained six months in military service. From this time he began to relax, and on my return had almost abandoned his duties. * * * He suddenly abandoned the Institution and fled to the North, did nothing, and in 1818 returned to Richmond penniless, friendless, and scarcely decently clad.

He applied again to Col. Bolling, who set him up in Manchester, with Rev. Mr. Kirkpatrick, of that town, as a sort of trustee and general supervisor of the school.

I again sent my son to him, under the care of the Rev. Kirkpatrick. They had five other pupils. He conducted himself for about six months to the entire satisfaction of the Rev. Kirkpatrick; * * * but, before the third quarter ended, Mr. Kirkpatrick was obliged to dissolve all further connection with him. He died in the year 1819.

A most pitiful story of wasted talent and opportunity!

The following letter from the Rev. Jos. D. Tyler to the editor of the Southern Churchman (a journal which is still enjoying a flourishing existence) of Richmond, Virginia, dated March 4, 1842, enclosing a copy of the letter of Col. William Bolling, from which I have made such copious extracts, gives such sufficient reasons for dwelling at length upon the history of Braidwood's career as an instructor of the deaf in Virginia that I deem it but proper to insert it in full in this paper:

VIRGINIA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB,
STAUNTON, March 4, 1842.

To the Editor of the Southern Churchman.

DEAR SIR: It is generally, but erroneously, supposed that the first experiment in teaching the deaf and dumb was made in this country at Hartford, Connecticut.

The ensuing letter addressed to me at my solicitation by Colonel William Bolling, of Goochland county, shows that a vigorous attempt to accomplish that philanthropic object was made at an earlier date in Virginia. The attempt failed. It failed, not for the want of ample encouragement in the shape of money and pupils, but through the unfaithfulness of the teacher. It failed, therefore, not for reasons which detract at all from the enlightened and persevering benevolence which originated the enterprise. It failed not through causes derogating in the least from the honor thus acquired by a citizen of Virginia of first establishing on this western continent an institution for the deaf and dumb.

Here is inserted the letter of Colonel Bolling to Mr. Tyler, the letter so freely drawn upon above. Mr. Tyler concludes his letter to the Southern Churchman as follows :

The details given by Col. Bolling respecting his brothers and sister are interesting in themselves, and peculiarly so, as giving, so far as we know, the earliest instance of American deaf-mutes receiving an education.

JOS. D. TYLER.

From what I can learn, I am of the opinion that Braidwood's methods differed, in a good many respects, from those introduced into America a few years later by the Rev. Thomas H. Gallaudet. A member of the present (1893) corps of teachers in the Virginia Institution, Mr. Hartwell M. Chamberlayne, a former pupil of this Institution, and also of the New York Institution, informs me that he knew, many years ago, three of Braidwood's Manchester pupils, and that they did not seem to him to be nearly so well educated as others who had been taught in the American schools of later date. This may have been the result of the methods employed in their education, the pupils in question may not have been naturally intelligent, or, what is still more likely, their teacher may not have been at his best while they were under his instruction. Mr. Chamberlayne also knew one of the sons of Colonel Bolling, with whom he had many conversations. He was both brighter and seemed better educated than the pupils of the Manchester (sic) school. The signs used by all of these pupils of Braidwood differed in some respects, so Mr. Chamberlayne says, from those now in use among the deaf in America—the Hartford signs—but not so materially as to prevent his talking freely with those who used them.

Dr. Lewis Chamberlayne, of Richmond, Va., father of the gentleman mentioned above, had an older son—a deaf-mute—whom he sent to the American Asylum about the year 1833. In 1837, our Mr. Chamberlayne, the second deaf-mute child in the family of Dr. Lewis Chamberlayne, was born, and the father then, for the first time, seriously took into consideration the subject of getting a State school for the deaf established in Virginia. In pursuance of this idea, during the winter of 1837-'8, while the legislature for that year was in session, he induced Mr. Barnard (subsequently president of Columbia College), then a teacher in the New York Institution, to come to Richmond, bringing with him several pupils of the New York school.

Mr. Barnard made several exhibitions of these children—some in the State capitol, some in other suitable buildings in the city. At these exhibitions most, if not all, of the members of the legislature were present and evinced their approval of them by the substantial evidence of passing the act of March 31, 1838, which was the first actual step looking toward the establishment of the present Institution. It is an interesting fact in connection with the visit of these children to Richmond that one of them was Miss Elizabeth Budd, who afterwards became the wife of the Rev. Thomas Gallaudet, lately rector of St. Ann's Church in New York and the founder of the Church Mission to the Deaf.

The Hon. Alexander H. H. Stuart, of Staunton, was a member of this legislature, and was, with his colleague from Augusta county, Mr. D. W. Patterson, so active in support of the act of establishment that he was named a member of the first board of visitors.

An additional act, passed March 27, 1839, provided that the Institution should be located "in Staunton, or within three miles thereof," and the sum of twenty thousand dollars was appropriated for "procuring a site and for erecting suitable buildings thereon."

Ten thousand dollars of this appropriation was to be expended annually. In addition to this the same bill included an appropriation of ten thousand dollars per annum "for support." This last-named sum was placed to the credit of the president and directors of the "State Literary Fund," and none of it was to be paid out until the Institution was in "actual operation," and then only when "required by the wants of the Institution."

The following-named gentlemen were appointed members of the first board of visitors, viz: Hon. A. H. H. Stuart, James Points, Esq., Francis T. Stribling, M. D., and Nicholas

C. Kinney, Esq., of Staunton ; Hon. James McDowell (afterwards Governor of Virginia), of Rockbridge county ; Rev. Wm. S. Plummer, D. D., of Richmond, and Robert Gray, Esq., of Rockingham county. The first meeting of the board of visitors was held, at the call of the President of the Literary Fund, in Staunton, on Monday, May 6, 1839. Hon. A. H. H. Stuart was elected president of the board, and N. C. Kinney, Esq., secretary.

At a meeting of the board held July 4, 1839, an order was passed directing "the secretary to proceed East and procure suitable plans, drawings, &c.," for the erection of buildings. Five hundred dollars were appropriated to defray the expenses of the secretary and otherwise carry the order into effect.

At a meeting held two days before this the proposition of James Bell, Esq., offering a donation of five acres of land to the Institution, with the privilege of purchasing as much more as was desirable at the rate of forty dollars per acre, was received and accepted.

It was resolved at the same meeting that the building should be "of brick, with stone foundations and a fire-proof roof." A building committee was appointed and a building "to cost $20,000 ordered to be ready for occupancy by July 4, 1841."

On July 5, 1839, "Harvey P. Peet, of New York, was elected principal of the Deaf and Dumb Institution, at a salary of fifteen hundred dollars and board for self and family," and the sum of one thousand dollars was placed at the disposal of Dr. Peet "to purchase books and suitable apparatus for the use of the deaf and dumb."

Dr. Peet declined this appointment, and Rev. Jos. D. Tyler, "a teacher of experience in the Hartford Asylum," was elected principal, at a salary of "twelve hundred dollars and board for self and family." At this meeting (October 1, 1839) it was ordered that the "schools be opened for the reception of pupils on November 15, 1839, a building suitable for this purpose having been rented in the town."

The first pupil registered in the deaf-mute department was Elizabeth Baker, of Pendleton county, the date of registration being November 30, 1839. Two days later the second pupil was registered.

November 20, 1839, Mr. Tyler reported that a teacher was needed in the deaf-mute department, and "Job Turner, a pupil of the Hartford Asylum, was appointed " the first teacher of the deaf in the Virginia Institution. Mr. Turner, after a service in the Institution of nearly forty years' duration, retired from the profession and has since devoted his talents and energy to the work of a missionary to the deaf of the South, under the auspices of Saint Ann's Mission. In this work he is still (February 10, 1893) engaged, and the vigor of his appearance gives ground for the hope that he may long continue in it.

So the Virginia Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb and of the Blind (it has always been a dual Institution) was launched.

Since November 30, 1839, six hundred and eighty-three deaf-mute children have been received within its walls.

During the four years of the civil war its buildings were used by the Confederate States authorities as a military hospital, but the school was continued, making use of the buildings of the Virginia Female Institute in Staunton. Grass-grown furrows and ditches on the lawn in front of the main drive are still plainly to be seen, marking the site of the tents in which convalescent soldiers lived during those troublous times.

By reason of this double removal from and back to the buildings many of the archives of the school were lost, and it is impossible, almost, at this day to give a complete history of many interesting transactions. Since 1839 the Institution has received but one legacy, that of five hundred dollars from the late John J. Goodson, of Norfolk, Va., from the proceeds of which the Goodson Gazette (printed and published by the pupils of the Institution) takes its name. The five acres of land donated for a site by Mr. Bell was given in 1839.

By reference to the code of Virginia (ed. 1887) I find that special appropriations to the amount of one hundred and thirteen thousand nine hundred and twenty-one dollars and six cents ($113,921.06) have been made by the legislature for the use of the Institution. The most of this money was expended for buildings, for repairs, for heating and lighting, etc. None of it was expended upon "salaries" or "support."

In addition to the amount named above as specially appropriated, the regular annuities for purposes of support have amounted in the fifty-three years of the existence of the Institution to the gross sum of one million three hundred and thirty thousand dollars. A part—a comparatively very small part—of this amount (say $25,000) was expended for building purposes. The remainder went for annual support.

So we see that there has been appropriated in all, within a period of a little over fifty years, by Virginia to the education of her deaf children and her blind children the sum of one million four hundred and forty-three thousand nine hundred and twenty-one dollars and six cents ($1,443,921.06). Average for the fifty-three years, $28,878.43. As the Institution is dual, a large part of this went to the support of the School for the Blind. There is no way that I know of now of finding out exactly how much went to each class.

The present annual appropriation is $35,000. There are present this session ninety-two deaf children and fifty-two blind, making a total of one hundred and forty-four of both classes.

These are taught in seven classes, regularly graded. We have a teacher, of course, for each class. In addition there is a teacher of articulation and lip-reading, who has twenty-five pupils in her different classes. The pupils of the classes in articulation all attend the regular manual classes, and go at certain hours to the teacher of articulation.

There is one teacher of free-hand and crayon drawing, and one of painting in oil. All of the girls are taught plain needle-work. For the boys there are shops in which are taught the trades of the carpenter, the cabinet-maker, the house-painter, the shoemaker, the tailor, and the printer. There are two religious services for the children on every school-day. On Sunday there is the usual service in the morning, and immediately thereafter a Sunday-school, in which the children are taught by their regular teachers, the same distinction of classes being observed as prevails in the school of the week.

Sunday afternoon there is a lecture by one of the teachers (in turn).

There are two Christian associations among the deaf pupils, one for the boys and one for the girls. They hold separate meetings every Sunday night. Both of these meetings are conducted by members of the associations, and both have done and are doing much good in the school.

There are two literary societies in the Institution: one, "the De l'Épée," on the girls' side; the other, "the Goodson Literary," on the boys' side. Both hold weekly meetings.

The Institution, when first organized, had two principals, coequal in authority. Dr. Jos. D. Tyler had charge of the deaf-mute department, Dr. J. C. M. Merilatt of the blind department. This arrangement continued until the death of Dr. Tyler, in January, 1852, when Dr. Merilatt was chosen principal of both departments. This arrangement has been maintained to the present day.

The "Virginia Association of the Deaf" was organized in Richmond, Virginia, in the month of July, 1891, holding its initial meeting in the Hall of the House of Delegates.

The second annual meeting of this association was held in the Music Hall of the Institution in August, 1882. At this second meeting there was a largely-increased attendance upon the part of the deaf of the State and many names of new members were added to the roll. Of this association, Mr. Jno. W. Michaels is president and W. C. Ritter is secretary. Its objects are chiefly to promote the interests of the deaf of Virginia in every manner possible, and a good start has been made in this direction.

The next annual meeting will be held in July, 1893, in the city of Lynchburg.

The following is a list of the principals from the foundation of the school to the present day :

THE INSTITUTION FIFTY YEARS AGO.

A VIEW OF THE INSTITUTION DURING ITS FIRST YEAR. AS OUTLINED IN "THE FIRST ANNUAL REPORT, FOR THE YEAR 1844."

To the Honorable, the General Assembly of the State of Indiana:

The undersigned committee, appointed for the purpose, by the Board of Trustees of the Deaf and Dumb Asylum of said State, do, in behalf of said Board under the requirement of the 13th section of an act entitled "An Act to establish an Asylum for the Education of Deaf and Dumb persons in the State of Indiana," approved January 15, 1844, now report, that they have spared no pains in the discharge of the important duties assigned them by the last Legislature, and that their efforts to prepare the way for opening the Asylum have been attended with an encouraging degree of success.

They have rented, for the use of the Institution for one year, at an expense of $300, a large, commodious and pleasantly situated building, with pleasure grounds of sufficient extent to afford the pupils ample opportunity for exercise and recreation. Furniture, bedding and other requisite articles for the Asylum, have been purchased at a cost of about $1,000. The services of a Steward and Matron, every way qualified to superintend its domestic concerns, have also been procured. Mr. William Willard, a deaf-mute, educated in the American Asylum at Hartford, Conn., has been engaged to take charge of the department of instruction, at a salary of $800 per annum. Mr. Willard was formerly employed, for several years, as an instructor in the Ohio Deaf and Dumb Asylum; and he comes to us recommended by the Principal and Trustees of that Institution, as eminently fitted for the station he proposes to fill. He had charge of a small school of deaf-mutes in Indianapolis, during the winter of 1843-'4, and it is presumed no one who then witnessed the rapid improvement of the pupils under his instruction, will be disposed to doubt the extent or thoroughness of his qualifications as a teacher.

The requisite preparatory arrangement having been previously made, the Asylum went into operation on the first Monday of last October. Fourteen pupils were present at the commencement of the session. Two have since been added, making sixteen in all; which is the number now connected with the Institution.

Of these 1 is from Carroll county.

1 is from Fayette county.

1 is from Vermillion county.

1 is from Randolph county.

1 is from Clarke county.

1 is from Dearborn county.

- 1 is from Monroe county.
- 2 are from Henry county.
- 2 are from Marion county.
- 2 are from Bartholomew county—and
- 3 are from Tippecanoe county.

The Trustees are happy to be able to say, that they regard the Asylum as having opened with the most cheering prospects; and, that under the smiles of a kind Providence, nothing but the continued countenance and liberality of the Legislature will be necessary to insure its permanent success. An institution so benevolent in its design, certainly deserves to be regarded with the warmest interest and solicitude by all friends of humanity. No portion of the community has stronger claims on the sympathy, or stands more in need of the fostering care of the commonwealth than the deaf and dumb. Experience has abundantly shown that, though deprived of speech and hearing, their minds can be approached through other avenues by the lights of knowledge, and they can be thereby qualified for stations of usefulness and the highest rational enjoyments. Indeed, the difference between the uneducated and the educated mute is almost incredible. The former "wends his weary way" through life in ignorance and obscurity—often an object of charity, and almost a burden to himself; but the latter, gladdened by the genial ray of knowledge, and fitted for the discharge of duty, becomes a blessing to his friends and to society, acts well his part as a member of the great human family—enjoys the present, and looks forward to the future with cheerfulness and hope.

But it is unnecessary to urge upon your honorable body the claims of a cause, which former assemblies have espoused with a zeal that does honor to the State; and the importance of which we know you will not fail to appreciate.

We, therefore, close this report, by respectfully recommending that, with a view of promoting the more extensive usefulness of the Asylum, the present assessment for its benefit of two mills on the hundred dollars be raised to one cent on the hundred dollars. This would afford a sum sufficient to enable the Board of Trustees to admit, free of charge, all indigent pupils who might wish for the present to be received into the Institution—whereas, with the limited means now at the command of the Trustees, many such applications must be refused. Let it be borne in mind that the parents and friends of those deaf-mutes, who would wish to enjoy the advantages of the Asylum, are, with comparatively few exceptions, in indigent circumstances—and it seems hard that they should be shut out from the Institution for the want of means, when so slight an assessment as one cent on the hundred dollars would put them in possession of its privileges without expense.

We would further recommend that the house and lot which have been rented for the present use of the Asylum, be made its permanent property by purchase, provided they can be obtained on just and equitable terms.

It will be perceived from section 11 of the act above referred to, that it devolves upon the House of Representatives to choose, during their present session, five trustees in lieu of those appointed at the last General Assembly. All which is respectfully submitted.

By order of the Board of Trustees,

P. D. GURLEY,
R. MAYHEW,
Committee of the Board.

TREASURER'S STATEMENT.

The following is a statement of the expenses of said Institution incurred under the action and direction of the Trustees, to-wit:

For house and grounds for Asylum one year, from 1st of Sept., 1844, rented of Geo. W. Stipp.....	$300 00
Furniture purchased of Thomas Smith.....	853 75
One cooking stove $30, and two other stoves $38.40, purchased of Samuel Wainwright.....	68 40
Two bills of furniture, fixtures, and stationery for school rooms, furnished by William Willard, and allowed by Trustees.....	86 97
Two books for Secretary and Treasurer, of Day, Tyler & Co.	2 88
William Willard's salary as Teacher, per annum.....	800 00
William Campbell as Steward, and Mrs. Campbell as Matron, employed per annum at $75, for each pupil boarded at the Asylum per year, suppose 15 scholars.....	1,125 00
	<hr/> $3,237 00 <hr/>

The amount of receipts or moneys collected since the organization by the Trustees are:

Receipts on account pupils at the Asylum.....	$209 25

The above statement of expenditures and moneys collected made in accordance with the requisition of the 13th section of the act to establish said Asylum, has no reference to the amount paid to teacher for past services under joint resolution, nor to any receipts of funds from taxes assessed and collected for this object.

In the collection and payment of the revenue of last year into the State Treasury, no distinction was made, in the amount, so as to show what was collected on account of deaf and dumb. It is estimated that of the revenue thus paid, the proper proportion collected on this account, was about $2,122.75, which, after deducting the amount paid to William Willard, by authority of joint resolution, $1,168.75, would leave in the State Treasury of this fund about $954.

The Trustees in creating the expenses above mentioned, have anticipated this fund as well as that to be collected, with the revenue of the present year; and have had some advances from the State Treasury, (as appeared to be contemplated by the law organizing the Institution, and indispensably necessary to carry their plans into effect), leaving the principal portion of said expenses yet to be met, relying upon the present

General Assembly to make such appropriation as will meet all expenditures and obligations incurred by the Trustees.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

R. MAYHEW,
Treasurer of Board of Trustees of Asylum for Education of Deaf and Dumb.

RULES.

In taking charge of the general interest of the Asylum, and endeavoring to make provision for the improvement and comfort of its inmates, the Board of Trustees have adopted the following rules and regulations for its government and economy:

COMMENCEMENT AND LENGTH OF THE SESSION.

There shall be but one session per annum, commencing on the first Monday of October, and closing on the last day of July.

TIME OF ADMISSION.

The regular time for receiving pupils into the Asylum shall be the week immediately preceding the first Monday of October.

LENGTH OF THE WHOLE COURSE.

The ordinary course of instruction in the Asylum shall extend through a period of five years; and scholars having passed creditably through this course shall receive from the Principal certificates accordingly.

EXPENSES.

Pupils from this State shall be provided for by the Institution in all respects, clothing and traveling expenses excepted, at the rate of Seventy-five Dollars per annum; and pupils from other States at the rate of One hundred Dollars per annum. Payment shall be required semi-annually in advance. No deduction shall be made from the annual charge in consequence of absence on any account whatever, except sickness, nor for vacation. Pupils shall be at liberty to reside during the vacation in the Institution without extra charge; but in case of sickness, either during the session or in vacation, the necessary extra charge shall be made.

AGE OF APPLICANTS.

Applicants for admission into the Asylum shall be between the ages of ten and thirty years. The Institution will not hold itself bound to receive any not embraced within this rule, but may do so at discretion.

STATE PUPILS.

Application on behalf of indigent pupils for assistance from the State, shall be made to the Board of Trustees, through the Secretary of State; and such application shall be accompanied with a written declaration from the board of county commissioners of the county in which the applicant resides, certifying that the necessities of the case are such as to justify the Trustees in ordering the assistance desired.

FIFTY YEARS' PROGRESS.

"Memories feeble to retrace
Yesterday's immediate flow,
Find a dear, familiar face,
In each hour of long ago.

'Tis a long time ago, is 1830, and yet in that year amidst the streams and forests of the uncultivated State of Indiana were living persons not only deaf and therefore mute, but I presume also very dumb, for in this State at that time there were no schools wherein they could be educated—therefore they must have been deaf-mute and dumb. According to the census of that year there were in the State 144 deaf-mutes. In 1840, they had increased to 312, and still no provision had been made to educate them. Whether it seemed dark to the people at that time, it certainly does to us looking back through the vista of vanishing years—intellectual darkness and gloom surrounding the 312 deaf-mutes who were with the people and yet not of them.

But as 'tis darkest just before dawn, so in 1840. The dawn was soon to burst, the first golden rays of the light of education for the deaf were soon to tinge with humanity the hills and dales of our beloved State, causing happiness and perfecting citizenship from lake to river. It came in 1841, scintillated a few brief moments and then died away, leaving once more only the darkness.

From the very commencement of the State's organization, there were not wanting those who kindly remembered our deaf and dumb, and fondly desired to introduce into this, the advantages for education which were enjoyed by the more favored mutes of other American Commonwealths. Yet there were so many objects demanding attention in the infancy of political institutions, that no provision was made by the Legislature for the education of our mutes even in other State Asylums, where they would have been gladly received. Then came the excitement of speculation, which, for several years, entirely engrossed the public attention. And it was not till the time of the State's deepest adversity, that the cause of mute education received its first impetus. In the fall of 1841, Mr. William C. Bales, since deceased, then the sheriff of Vermillion county, placed his mute son in the Ohio Institution. The visit which he then paid that Asylum, interested him more deeply than before in the enterprise of educating the deaf and dumb. The next year he was elected to represent his county in the Legislature.

Some time during the year 1841, James McLean, a mute, and a reputed graduate of the New York Institution, commenced a school in Parke county. This school was continued for more than a year, but at no time contained more than six pupils, and three or four of these were taught gratis. Mr. Wm. Crumpton, of Attica, was one of his patrons; and from his representations Mr. Coffin, then the representative from Parke, became interested in the subject.

A joint resolution was subsequently passed which provided for Mr. McLean's compensation. As it is the first act of the Legislature in regard to the deaf and dumb on the statute books of Indiana, and as it freely and fully asserts the obligation of the State to educate them, it is here inserted entire:

"A Joint Resolution for the benefit of James McLean, of Parke county, Indiana, a deaf and dumb person. Approved, February 11, 1842.

"WHEREAS, It has been represented to this General Assembly that said James McLean is a deaf and dumb school teacher, and as such has been teaching deaf and dumb orphans and indigent children of Indiana for fifteen months past, without any adequate compensation: and, whereas, it has been farther represented to us, that said McLean is poor, and believing as we do, that due encouragement should be given to such laudable efforts to ameliorate as far as possible the condition of an unfortunate portion of our people, and that efforts of that kind on the part of a deaf and dumb citizen of Indiana should not be received as a gratuity by the State,

"Be it resolved by the General Assembly of Indiana, That the Treasurer of State be, and he is hereby authorized to pay to said James McLean the sum of two hundred dollars out of any moneys in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, as a compensation for services rendered as aforesaid."

At the meeting of the Legislature in 1842-3, the two members above referred to consulted together, and, as the result of their deliberations, Mr. Bales, on the 4th of February, presented a bill which, after some amendments, passed both branches. It reads as follows:

"An Act to provide means to support a Deaf and Dumb Asylum in the State of Indiana. Approved February 13, 1843.

"Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That, in addition to the sum of five cents levied on each one hundred dollars of property taxable in this State for the ordinary expenses of the State government, there shall be levied two mills additional on each one hundred dollars' worth of property in this State, for the purpose of supporting a deaf and dumb asylum, and the necessary expenses attendant thereon, in this State.

"Sec. 2. Said sum of two mills shall be collected in the same funds, and paid into the treasury, in the same manner as the State revenue, and shall be paid out by the Treasurer of State, for the education [and] maintenance of deaf and dumb persons of Indiana, pursuant to existing provisions of law.

"Sec. 3. This act to be in force from and after its passage and publication in the Journal and Sentinel."

This was passed by the unanimous consent of all parties. Indeed, to enumerate its friends would be to mention the names of the whole Legislature; and one as much as another, probably, deserves the credit of its enactment. It was a noble act, and the first instance on record where a people were taxed for such a purpose!

WILLIAM WILLARD.

WILLIAM WILLARD.

At this point a familiar figure appears on the scene. William Willard, a deaf-mute, a graduate of the American Asylum at Hartford, and a teacher in the Ohio Institution, came to Indianapolis for the purpose of establishing a private school for the deaf. Consultation with leading citizens followed and a meeting was called, the friends of the project coming from all parts of the State. The sense of the meeting was evidence by the following resolution:

"Resolved, That the successful example of Ohio and other sister States, in providing for the instruction of the deaf and dumb within their bounds, is in the highest degree creditable and worthy of our prompt imitation, and that, as citizens of Indiana, we are gratified with the interest taken in it by the last General Assembly in the enactments contemplating provision for an asylum for deaf-mutes in this State, of which there are, according to the last census, three hundred and twelve.

"Resolved, That the testimonials submitted by William Willard from his Excellency, Governor Shannon; H. N. Hubbell, Esq., superintendent of the Ohio Deaf and Dumb Asylum; Rev. Dr. Hoge and other distinguished gentlemen of Ohio, showing that William Willard has been for many years an instructor of deaf-mutes in that State, and has justly gained for himself a high reputation as a teacher—that he is a gentleman of good moral character, of the first respectability and every way worthy of the most favorable consideration in reference to the instruction of deaf-mutes, are highly satisfactory: and we are gratified with the visit of a gentleman, himself deaf and dumb, so highly recommended by those who have been connected with an institution of such distinguished repute as the one at Columbus, Ohio.

"Resolved, That we approve of Mr. Willard's proposed visit to different parts of the State for the purpose of communicating with deaf-mutes and their friends in relation to their instruction in this State: and that we recommend that he should, after such a visit, commence a school for deaf-mutes on a small scale at Indianapolis preparatory to such further action of the Legislature and other encouragement as may be given for the establishment of an asylum: and that in such visit we cordially recommend Mr. Willard to the kind attention and hospitality of the citizens of Indiana."

This was in May, 1843, on the 30th. During the following summer Mr. Willard traveled here, there, everywhere, urging and entreating, not donations but pupils. He bore his own expenses. Easy in manner and of affable address, he succeeded admirably, and in October following he opened his school with twelve scholars, who, while paying for boarding, paid nothing for instruction.

"Gardener bright from Eden's bower,
Tend with care that lily flower;
To its leaves and root infuse Heaven's sunshine, Heaven's dews.
'Tis a type, and 'tis a pledge,
Of a crowning privilege."

The General Assembly convening in the following December, its members reflecting the awakened interest of the people, still further enhanced by the glorious work already commenced, felt itself in duty bound to take charge of and defray the expenses on behalf of the State of the private school now under way. A board of incorporating trustees consisting of nine members, was appointed January 15, 1844, and at once proceeded to organize the "Indiana Asylum for Deaf and Dumb." Mr. Willard, who had performed such mighty work, was naturally and justly the chief officer with title of principal, and under the new arrangement the first session was commenced October 1st, 1844, in rented quarters, "a large and commodious building with pleasure grounds of sufficient extent to afford the pupils ample opportunity for exercise and recreation," the same having been obtained at a rental of $300 per year. The number of pupils starting in was sixteen, coming from the following counties: Bartholomew, 2; Henry, 1; Carroll, 1; Marion, 2; Clarke, 2; Monroe, 1; Dearborn, 1; Randolph, 1; Fayette, 1; Tippecanoe, 3; Vermillion, 1.

The members of the incorporating Board of Trustees were His Excellency James Whitcomb, Royal Mayhew, Esq., Hon. John H. Thompson, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Rev. Phineas D. Gurley, Rev. Love Jameson, Livingston Dunlop, M. D., Hon. James Morrison and Rev. Pres. Matthew Simpson. The question of a permanent location was left open, and the Governor was authorized to receive propositions on the subject. Mr. Willard was allowed a compensation from the commencement of his school.

It has been usual to date the origin of the Institution from October 1, 1844, because it was then formally taken under the control of the State. It had really been in successful operation for a year previously, and its history really dates from October, 1843.

It had been contemplated from the first, to ultimately appoint a Principal who could hear, and speak. This intention was carried out, in June, 1846, by the appointment of James S. Brown, his duties to commence on the 1st of August following. The highly valued services of Mr. Willard were continued in the capacity of an assistant.

The school remained in its first quarters until October 1st, 1846, when the number of pupils pressing for admission became so great steps were taken to procure larger and more commodious quarters. On October 1st, 1846, the school was opened in a large three-story building of imposing appearance and for which a rental of $500 per year was paid. A permanent location not having been agreed upon, a warm contest now sprang up between various parts of the State as to who should have the location, the rivalry principally being between Bloomington and Indianapolis. The citizens of the former place made an offer of a donation in land and cash amounting to nearly $1,000 and the commissioners of the county agreed to appropriate as revenue to the Institution one cent on each one hundred dollars' worth of real and personal property within the county. The superintendent at the time, Mr. James Brown, entered into quite an extensive correspondence with the heads of other similar institutions in the United States, concerning the location, and laid the same before the Committee of Education to which the question had been referred. They finally decided not to accept the liberal offer of Bloomington.

ton, and thereupon located the Institution at Indianapolis because of its being the capital, a railroad center accessible from all parts of the State, and for other good and sufficient reasons.

At this same session of the General Assembly steps were taken for the purchase of a site, and the board of trustees, after diligent and careful search, selected the present location, eighty-four acres being purchased at first and subsequently thirty-eight additional, the whole costing $6,000. This land is now all held by the Institution, save eighteen acres that were transferred to the Indiana Female Reformatory in 1869, and one-quarter of an acre transferred to the C., St. L. & P. R. R. in 1883. The balance of the land originally acquired is now valued at $276,000. The wisdom of the selection could not have been greater, for a more desirable location, all things considered, could not have been made in or around Indianapolis.

After securing the ground, the trustees turned their attention to building, and secured an increase of the rate of taxation. Previously, at the session of the General Assembly of 1844-5, the assessment was raised from two to five mills on each hundred dollars' worth of property in the State. It was now raised from five to fifteen mills. This was to provide for the erection of the permanent buildings. Money sufficient was obtained and buildings with a capacity of 160 to 175 were at once erected and were ready for occupancy October 2nd, 1850. During the school year previous the number of pupils in attendance was 125, but during the first year in the new building the number increased to 141.

Thus fairly started, the school thrived and grew. Divine Providence seemed to smile upon it and its yearly course was constantly in advance. The deaf seeking admission grew in numbers as the State's population increased, and repairs, alterations and new buildings were added from time to time until now, in the spring of 1893, the school boasts of accommodations for 350 pupils; of twenty-one teachers in the intellectual and four in the industrial departments; of 104 acres of land, valued at $276,000; of buildings valued at $240,000; one of them being a large, fine, new school-house containing twenty-four school-rooms and library, lecture and art rooms.

When the school was first opened, it was maintained upon the proceeds of a tax of two mills upon each one hundred dollars' worth of property, which was voted by the General Assembly, and which was increased from time to time until, in 1852, it yielded an income of nearly $40,000 per year. When the State constitution was adopted in 1851, the tax was discontinued, and the support of the Institution made a direct charge upon the State Treasury, where it remains to-day. The amount appropriated by the General Assembly for maintenance and repairs has varied from time to time, but now amounts to $65,000 annually.

In the beginning pupils were charged for board and tuition, except they filed a certificate setting out the fact of their poverty. This was degrading and shameful and was so considered, and in a very short time the law was changed and everything made free to all those too deaf to be educated in the common schools. And in this liberality Indiana has the proud distinction of having been the first State in the Union to throw open her educational doors to the deaf, absolutely without cost to them. And so it is to-day, everything is free, the State making no charge, only requiring that pupils shall pay their transportation to and fro, and furnish their own clothing and even where this cannot be done, the State provides and charges it to the county from whence the pupil comes.

Mr. Willard served as principal two years, being succeeded by James S. Brown, with the title of superintendent, a man of most sterling qualities, faithfulness of purpose and love for the work. Mr. Willard continued his connection with the school, however, as a most valued instructor, for twenty years. In 1852, Mr. Brown resigning, the Reverend Thomas MacIntire was appointed superintendent and continued assuch for twenty-seven years. Under him the Institution made its name and fame. He loved the school and the school loved him. Together they kept pace, marching steadily onward and upward, placing the banner of the Institution in lofty position, there being emblazoned on its folds three stars, one for faithful and loving care, one for thoroughness of educational work and one for purity. Following him came William Glenn and Eli P. Baker, each serving five years as superintendent, the latter resigning in July, 1889, at which time the present superintendent was appointed.

The history of the Indiana Institution is a grand history—a history of men and women of pure and lofty ideas and deeds; a history of a most generous State; a history of eighteen hundred and seventy-five boys and girls who have entered its portals seeking light intellectually, spiritually, industrially; a history of mothers and fathers who with heart-ache and sob have delivered their little ones into strange hands that they might be taught the way to eternal life through enlightened intellect; a history that makes us wish for success and happiness in future well-doing. Many of the men and women who have watched the progress with eager eyes, many of the boys and girls, have passed beyond the dark river, and we feel 'tis well with them because of the instruction here given and received.

“Long live the good school! giving out year by year
Recruits to true manhood and womanhood dear:
Brave boys, modest maidens, in beauty sent forth,
The living epistles and proof of its worth!

“In and out let the young life as steadily flow
As in broad Narragansett, the tides come and go;
And its sons and its daughters in prairie and town
Remember its honor and guard its renown!”

The causes of deafness and ages at which it occurred in these new pupils will be shown by the following table, as will also the degree of deafness, the number to whom instruction was given previous to admission, and what power of articulation is possessed by them. The power of hearing in many of those marked partially deaf is very feeble indeed, as is also the power of articulation in many of these marked as speaking a few words plainly, and need hardly be taken account of in the majority of cases.

NON-ATTENDANCE.

The matter of non-attendance is a serious evil; and one that should be remedied in some prompt, efficient manner. The non-attendants are of two classes: Those who enter the school but do not remain as long as they might and should, and those who do not enter at all. So far as the former class is concerned, the records of the Institution show that since November 1, 1884, 127 pupils have entered, remained a year or two, or more, and then dropped out without discharge, when they were entitled to longer continuance. A small per cent. of this number can be accounted for by deaths and removals from State, but fully 85 per cent. of it must be charged up to the foolish whims of the child, or to neglect or cupidity of the parent. The following table will show this part of the evil at a glance:

Showing "drop outs" to be.....	127

The census of 1890, an account of which is given elsewhere, showed a total of 1,780 deaf-mutes in the State. Of this number, 69 were between one and six years of age, or under school age (8 to 21) at this time, and 726 were between six and twenty-one years of age. Of the 726, there were in the school at the time, or had been previously, 298, and since 1890 115 more have been admitted, thus leaving 313 deaf-mutes in Indiana who have never been in this school at all. If we allow 20 per cent. for errors and for those who have attended other schools for the deaf, 250 still remain, who have never received the benefits of school training, and I regard this estimate as very low. Adding to this number the 127 "drop outs," we have 377, which represents the non-attendance.

COMPULSORY EDUCATION.

The State supports an institution for the proper training of the deaf at great expense, not only for the good of the deaf themselves, but for the welfare and prosperity of itself. If parents and guardians do not avail themselves of advantages offered, it should certainly be the duty of the State to step in and compel the attendance of their children, as a matter of self-protection. The welfare of the child must be considered more sacred than the right of the parent to control it.

THE SCHOOL WORK.

At the beginning of the school year in 1890 a new course of study was arranged; the school period was re-arranged into five primary, two intermediate and three academic grades, each grade taking one year. The manner of grading was changed, as was also the manner of teaching. The upper four grades were provided with four teachers, each on special subjects, the classes rotating from one teacher to another. Out of 270 pupils who were in school the preceding June and who were entitled to return, 144 were denied advancement because of not meriting it. In short, a complete revolution in school work took place, and we anxiously looked forward for results. We have not been disappointed. Close and faithful attention was given to the work by teachers, who had much to do because of the change. Text-books during the first three years being done away with, original work had to be provided by them. History and geography took the form of evolution, and began in original work by the teachers, who, taking the Institution as a starting place, worked outward until the text-book was reached. Our course of study was termed by competent critics as "rather high" for our classes, but the pupils in the main mastered it, as is shown by their better averages than under the old system. Everybody hewed to the line as closely as circumstances would permit, and the result has been most gratifying to all concerned.

One of the greatest helps in the school-room work was The School-room Aid, a sixteen-page magazine which we publish fortnightly. As its name implies, it was designed and especially arranged for class-work in the school-rooms, either taking the place of or supplementing the ordinary text-book, and devoted almost wholly to language.

Six teachers' institutes have been held during the year. At each meeting specially prepared papers have been read, which were followed by critical discussion. Everything pertaining to school-room work has been considered, and the good resulting therefrom has been great.

One year ago attention was called to the fact that seventeen classes were being taught by fourteen teachers, this being accomplished by having three classes taught in the afternoon for two and a half hours by regular morning teachers, who served without extra compensation. As this was all the instruction these classes received, the arrangement was very unsatisfactory, fair to neither pupil nor teacher. To remedy this matter, three new teachers have been employed.

ORAL-AURAL CLASS.

In my last annual report I wrote as follows: "I am still of opinion that a purely oral department should be started, separate and distinct from the rest of the school. While I believe that of any given number of deaf-mutes taken at random, only a minority, and, perhaps, only a small minority can be successfully educated by the purely oral method, which excludes signs, still, it is that minority which I wish to provide for, and I think we have it at the present time in our school."

It has been found impossible under existing conditions to start an oral department, "separate and distinct" from the rest of the school, but the next best thing has been done in the establishment of an oral-aural class. A young lady of New York, who possesses a good knowledge of the work, has been called to take charge of the class, and is making a good beginning. I believe the end of the year will demonstrate the wisdom of the "innovation." Every pupil entering school should be educated by this method and taught to speak, if it is possible to do so—it is his right; it is our duty. But as stated above, I believe this is impracticable with the greater number—it remains then for us to ascertain who can and who cannot, be successfully educated by it. To do this each new pupil should be given a fair chance for speech and education by speech, first; afterward, education by other methods, if failure results. We must bear in mind that there are deaf and semi-deaf; mute and semi-mute—that a method beneficial to one may not be to another and vice versa. To accomplish the greatest good for the greatest number, the very broadest latitude must be allowed, and a school to be successful must not be bound down to any one, or any two methods. In order to attain this success, this Institution bases its work on the following

SYSTEM OF INSTRUCTION.

The general system of instruction under which this school works is known as the "Combined System," wherein the Manual Method and Oral Method are both used. Articulation and speech-reading are regarded as very important, but mental development and the acquisition of language are regarded as still more important. It is believed that in many cases mental development and the acquisition of language can be better attained by some other method than the Oral, and, so far as circumstances permit, such method is chosen for each pupil as seems best adapted to his individual case. Articulation and speech-reading are taught where the measure of success seems likely to justify the labor expended.

SCHOOL BUILDING.

Erected 1890.

The general instruction of the pupils is carried on chiefly by the Manual Method (sign language, the manual alphabet and writing). Part of them receive special training in articulation and lip-reading. Some of the teachers also use articulation and speech-reading, in addition to the manual alphabet and writing, as a means of instruction with part of their pupils. A few of the pupils are taught wholly by the Oral Method, but are allowed to mingle freely with pupils from the sign classes at all times outside of the class-room. Attention is also given to auricular training. In short, our rule is: "Any method for good results."

ARTICULATION AND LIP-READING.

Articulation and lip-reading are taught to forty-seven pupils taken from the regular classes taught by the manual method. Their teacher shows untiring patience in the discharge of her duty (as must any one who teaches the deaf) but cannot show such results as she might, were her classes smaller and more time given her. Such pupils as cannot be taught by the oral method, but who, at the same time, show some capacity for articulation and lip-reading, should certainly be drilled therein by special teachers. I believe we have here at the present time seventy-five or more such pupils. To give them the proper instruction would require three teachers. We have now but the one, and I recommend that two additional should be employed.

SPECIAL STUDIES.

Under this head are grouped drawing, painting, wood-carving, clay-modeling, designing and physical culture. For these studies we have two special teachers. Special work in penmanship has been discontinued, each teacher looking after his own class in this matter.

Drawing is taught to the entire primary department and to one grade of the intermediate, and painting (under which is included charcoal sketching, pastel work, and the work in oil and water colors) to the girls of the academic department. Splendid progress has been made in both. Physical culture is taught to the same classes as drawing, and has proved quite a success.

Thus, we have in the intellectual department seventeen regular class teachers, one teacher of articulation and lip-reading, one teacher for the oral-aural class, one teacher for drawing, painting, wood-carving, etc., and one teacher of physical culture, making twenty-one in all.

THE INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENT.

I am glad to be able to state that this department is at last in most excellent condition. The improvement began in 1891, when the Legislature made it possible for us to abandon that "foreign growth" for an industrial school—the "lease system"—by making a special appropriation of $8,000.00, with which we were to fit up the shops and pay regularly employed instructors. The first payment from this fund was made in August, 1891. Since then, new machinery and other shop appliances have been added from time to time, in printing office, shoe shop and cabinet-shop, until now they are in first-class condition.

The matter of teaching trades to the deaf is one of very great importance, and takes rank, in my estimation, with intellectual training. A cultivated mind and hand can go further and do more than a cultivated mind alone. Manual training schools for hearing-speaking youth are now being demanded everywhere, but they are not of such vital importance to them as they are to the deaf. In such schools for the former, the sole aim is to teach underlying principles of many trades, and not thoroughly any individual trade, while for the deaf at this Institution our aim is to not only teach the underlying principles, but to go a step further, and teach thoroughly individual trades. Instead of being called industrial schools, or schools for manual training, we should rather call ours "trade schools," which more nearly gives the correct idea. Most manual training school authorities hold that the more the shop becomes a factory, the less it is a school. With our object of individual trades in view, our shops must necessarily become, more or less, factories, and yet are, in the highest degree, schools. The factories, however, exist as an incident of the school, and not the cause of it.

It is not hoped to make any of the shops self-sustaining. They are operated simply as a means of education. Instructions have been given to the foremen to teach the trade—to have a ten-cent article made properly if it takes a dollar's worth of material—to do otherwise will be to lose sight of the end for which the shop was established.

The cabinet-shop as now arranged is in reality a "school of joinery," wherein the underlying principles of carpentry and cabinet-making are taught together, to the end that a boy, on leaving, may have a fair knowledge of not only one trade, but of several. Regular lessons will be given on the characteristics of the various woods; methods of "laying out" work; the care and use of tools; methods of mortising, sawing, planing; the making of all kinds of joints, single and in combination; fastening by glue, pins, nails, etc.; the cleaning and polishing of woods; painting, staining, varnishing, etc. This "school of joinery" has been strengthened by the establishment of a fully equipped "wood-turning shop." The lathe-room contains ten latest improved turning lathes of various sizes, one large scroll saw, one combination graduated steel top sawing table with rip and cut-off saws, one planer, one cross-cut saw and one wood moulding machine.

In the printing office stands a Campbell printing press and a Nonpareil job press, both of which are operated by electricity, the power being furnished by the electric lighting station belonging to the Institution. The Campbell press has a capacity of 1,800 impressions per hour. The paraphernalia of the office is complete in every way. In this industry is given instruction in book and news composition, press-work and binding. As a means toward the end a five-column folio weekly newspaper is published, and is called The Silent Hoosier.

The shoe-shop is designed as a "school in leather work." At the present time instruction is given mostly in boot and shoe-making. The pupils are taught to measure, cut and fit, as well as the mere making. To this will be added some time in the future a series of lessons in leather work and other trades.

Instruction is given to the girls in all kinds of house-work, in cooking, in plain and fancy needle-work, and in dress-making, cutting, fitting and draping. The girls in the academic department are also instructed in drawing, painting, modelling, designing and wood-carving. Boys may also be admitted to these classes.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE ADMISSION OF NEW PUPILS.

I. This Institution is open to all the deaf of the State, free of charge, provided they are of suitable age and capacity for receiving instruction, and are too deaf to be educated in the common schools.

II. Pupils will be considered of proper age between the years of 8 and 21. No applicant who is idiotic, feeble-minded, afflicted with a contagious or offensive disease, or who is an invalid so confirmed as to prevent study, will be received. No case of sore eyes will be received.

III. This Institution is in no sense an asylum, neither is it a hospital. It is strictly an educational institution.

IV. Applications for the admission of pupils must be made on regular blanks of the Institution, which will be furnished the applicant by the Superintendent thereof. All questions on these blanks must be fully answered, and the requirement of the certificate of a Justice of the Peace on the back thereof (that the person seeking admission as a pupil is a legal resident of the State and county named), must be complied with. [See Sec. 2762, R. S. 1881.]

V. Pupils will be admitted on the following conditions: (1) The pupil, provided with clothes, must be brought to the Institution punctually at the commencement of each session, unless detained at home by sickness. (2) The pupil is to remain in school until the second Wednesday in June in each year. (3) No parent or guardian will be allowed to take a pupil out of the school during the session without some urgent reason. Pupils will not be allowed to go home during the holidays.

VI. The annual sessions of the school commence on Wednesday of the week during which the State Fair is held (usually September 20 to 24), and close on the second Wednesday in June. Pupils must come promptly on or before the first day of the session, and remain until the last day of same. The only exceptions allowed are in cases of sickness.

VII. No pupil, unless under extraordinary circumstances, can be received at any time other than at the commencement of the session.

VIII. This Institution will provide for each pupil, regularly admitted, boarding, lodging, washing, superintendence of conduct, manners and physical needs, instruction, school-books, slates, and all incidental expenses of the school-room, without charge, but will not pay the traveling expenses of pupils in coming to or going from the Institution, nor supply them with clothing.

IX. All traveling expenses of pupils to and from the Institution must be defrayed by their parents or guardians. They are also required to furnish annually to each pupil sent by them, a sufficient quantity of suitable clothing to last until the close of the term. [See Sec. 2763, R. S. 1881.] A good stout trunk must also be supplied. The name of the pupil should be written with indelible ink upon all articles of clothing, as they are liable to be lost when not marked.

X. The applicant must deposit with the Superintendent, when admitted, a sum not less than five dollars to defray incidental expenses, repairs of shoes, etc., any part of which remaining unexpended at the close of the session will be returned if desired.

XI. When it is established that a pupil is in indigent circumstances and the parents or guardians are either unable or neglect to furnish the necessary clothing, it will be supplied by the superintendent in pursuance of the following legislative enactment:

"Sec. 2764, R. S. 1881. In all cases where suitable clothing and means for defraying traveling expenses are not otherwise supplied to the pupils, the same shall be provided by the superintendent, who shall make out and file with the Treasurer of State accounts therefor, separate in each case, against the respective counties from which such pupils are sent, in an amount not exceeding forty dollars per annum for every such pupil, which accounts shall be severally signed by the superintendent and attested by the seal of the Institution under his charge; and the Treasurer of State shall charge each account thus certified to the county from which the pupil named therein was sent.

"Sec. 2765, R. S. The Treasurer of State shall forward each account so filed with him to the treasurer of the proper county, who shall cause it to be paid out of the county treasury to the Treasurer of State; and such county treasurer shall, in the name of the county, and by suit, if necessary, collect the amount of such account from the parents or estate of such pupil, as the case may be, where there is ability to pay."

XII. The course of study in the Institution is so arranged as to cover ten years and is divided into primary, intermediate and academic courses. The primary and intermediate courses embrace spelling, reading, writing, arithmetic, geography, history and grammar. The two courses are divided into seven grades, five primary and two intermediate, and the time required to complete them is seven years. All pupils who wish it, and who will avail themselves of it, are allowed the benefit of these courses of study. The academic course comprises a three years' course of advanced primary and intermediate work, and a study of the sciences. Only pupils who complete the primary and intermediate courses in the time allotted, and with honor to themselves, will be allowed to pass into the academic course with the privilege of three years' longer connection with the Institution.

XIII. The superintendent shall have the power to at any time discharge a pupil from the Institution for inability to receive an education, for failure to make the necessary progress, and for violation of the rules of the Institution. He may also, when he thinks the facts warrant it, extend the period for instruction in individual cases.

XIV. It is the intention of the Trustees to render the pupils self-supporting, so far as practicable, so that every pupil, on leaving the Institution, shall be proficient in some useful occupation or trade, so as to be able to maintain himself without reliance on the charity of others. In accordance with this design, all the scholars will be required to labor a portion of each day, the girls performing the lighter kinds of house-work and various kinds of needle-work, as plain sewing or ornamental work and dress-making; and the boys at various trades, printing, cabinet-making, tailoring, carpentry, shoe-making, chair-caning, farming, floriculture and baking.

XV. Those persons bringing pupils to or taking them away from the Institution cannot be furnished with board or lodging.

XVI. The pupils will be sent home to spend the vacation, which begins the second Wednesday in June.

XVII. All business letters or letters of inquiry in regard to pupils in the Institution, or those whom it may be designed to place there, must be addressed to the Superintendent.

MARKING.

It shall be the duty of teachers to make and record, monthly, a careful estimate of the work of each of their pupils in all branches of study. This estimate shall be based upon the fidelity and success with which the pupils have done assigned work, and also upon their success in oral and written tests which have been employed as an element of teaching and the answers to which have not been valued numerically. It shall not be based upon daily marking of recitations, nor upon deportment, nor upon stated examinations. But the teacher may keep such memoranda of pupils' work as are deemed necessary.

These recorded monthly estimates, teachers must average twice a year—February 1 and June 1. The monthly estimates and the two averages must be certified to the superintendent.

These estimates of the monthly success and progress of pupils are to be made on a scale of 30 to 100, as follows: 100, perfect; 90, excellent; 80, very good; 70, good; 60, tolerable; 50, poor; 40, very poor; 30 and below, failure.

The "5 mark" may be used to indicate in some degree the relative standing of pupils in their class, but under no circumstances must any estimate be given which is not recorded in figures a multiple of 5. It is suggested that the standard of pupils be primarily estimated as excellent, good or poor, and then modified, provided the higher and lower estimates can be readily made.

It shall also be the duty of the principal to examine, and when necessary, revise the teachers' monthly estimates of their pupils' proficiency, and to approve the same when averaged in February and June. He shall give teachers such instruction and other assistance in estimating the proficiency and progress of their pupils as will secure requisite uniformity.

TERMS AND GRADE DAYS.

A graded system, to be what it should be, must possess flexibility, in order to secure needed uniformity of attainment in the several classes, without unduly holding back the more capable pupils, or unduly urging forward the less capable. In order to increase this flexibility, the regular annual session of this school is divided into three terms, to-wit:

First Term—Opening of school to January 1.

Second Term—January 1 to March 15.

Third Term—March 15 to close of school.

GRADE DAYS.

January 1 and March 15 shall be known as Grade Days. At these times such pupils as it would benefit may be transferred to the next lower or to the next higher grade, as the case may be, to remain therein for one term or longer, as the exigencies of the case require.

To illustrate: A pupil may fail to pass his grade in June, and yet be so proficient as to make it a hardship to compel him to spend another entire year in the same grade, when one term may remedy the deficiency. Again, it frequently happens that a pupil may be very proficient in one or more studies, and very deficient in another; by transferring him to the next lower grade he has the opportunity of overcoming the deficiency and does not lose much in missing the regular instruction in the studies in which he is proficient, the length of the term being short.

It is believed that short terms and grade days will excite pupils to greater effort. They will know that on January 1 and March 15 they will be "weighed" and will not wish to be "found wanting."

Nothing herein contained shall curtail the power granted the principal by the superintendent to make changes in extraordinary cases at any time.

PROMOTION.

At the close of the annual session there shall be held a written examination for all grades excepting Primary Grades 1 and 2, and the Academic Grades, to be conducted by special examiners as may be arranged for by the superintendent. Pupils' examination papers shall be marked by the examiner in figures the multiple of five, and certified to the principal.

Promotion from Primary Grades 1 and 2 shall be upon the average of the two required averages of monthly estimates when approved by the superintendent.

Promotions and graduations from the Academic Grades shall be upon the judgment of the teachers of those grades when approved by the superintendent. The teachers of said grades shall sit as a Board of Promotion for the purpose named.

Promotions from all other grades shall be upon the average of the two required averages of monthly estimates combined with the estimates of the written examinations in such proportion as the superintendent may direct.

No pupil in Primary Grades 1, 2, 3, 4, whose average in language is below 65 shall be promoted. No pupil in Primary Grades 5, or in Intermediate Grades B and A whose average is below 70 in language, or below 65 in arithmetic, geography or history, shall be promoted.

STATISTICS OF THE DEAF IN INDIANA AND THE UNITED STATES.

The first enumeration of deaf-mutes by the general government was made in 1830. The rate of increase in population and in deaf-mutes in both Indiana and the United States since 1830 will be shown by the following tables:

INDIANA.			UNITED STATES.
Population.		Deaf-Mutes.	Population.		Deaf-Mutes.
1830 to 1840—99.4	per cent...	116.7 per cent.	1830 to 1840—32.7	per cent...	25.5 per cent.
1840 to 1850—44.1	per cent...	72.1 per cent.	1840 to 1850—35.9	per cent...	27.9 per cent.
1850 to 1860—36.6	per cent...	29.0 per cent.	1850 to 1860—35.6	per cent...	30.8 per cent.
1860 to 1870—24.4	per cent...	45.3 per cent.	1860 to 1870—22.6	per cent...	26.4 per cent.
1870 to 1880—17.17	per cent...	102.3 per cent.	1870 to 1880—30.1	per cent...	109.0 per cent.
1880 to 1890—10.82	per cent...	.9 per cent.	1880 to 1890—24.8	per cent...	22.0 per cent.

The proportion of deaf-mutes to the general population in Indiana and the United States has varied from time to time, and will be shown by the following tables:

INDIANA.		UNITED STATES.
1830 ..	144, or 1 to 2,433	1830 ..	5,363, or 1 to 1,964
1840 ..	312, or 1 to 2,309	1840 ..	6,682, or 1 to 2,123
1850 ..	537, or 1 to 1,846	1850 ..	9,803, or 1 to 2,365
1860 ..	691, or 1 to 1,954	1860 ..	12,821, or 1 to 2,452
1870 ..	872, or 1 to 1,928	1870 ..	16,205, or 1 to 2,379
1880 ..	1,764, or 1 to 1,122	1880 ..	33,878, or 1 to 1,480
1890 ..	1,780, or 1 to 1,231	1890 ..	41,283, or 1 to 1,516

The great increase in 1880, however, was more apparant than real—the inaccuracy of previous enumerations was simply “caught up” in the accuracy of the 1880 census, which was probably the most perfect enumeration ever taken. The proportion in 1880 was one in every 1,480, which seemed to have been the proportion in Europe for many long years. During all this time the true proportion in the United States had been simply obscured by uncertain figures—the truth had been eclipsed by error.

Presuming the same conditions to exist in Indiana and the United States, the rate of increase and proportion should be nearly uniform. But the conditions in the State and the United States, or in one decade compared with another, are not necessarily the same. Excessive increase in population; excessive mortality, from accidents or ordinary causes; the absence of epidemics; geographical position; race characteristics; better medical skill and care of sick children because of "better times," etc., etc., exert a positive influence, in given territories or periods, which must show results. The difference is all the more marked when inexact enumerations are made, as seems to have been the case prior to 1880.

PRESENT AGES—1890.

Of the 1,780 deaf-mutes in Indiana, 69 were between one and six years old; 726 between six and twenty-one; 703 between twenty-one and forty-five; 136 between forty-five and fifty-five; 123 above fifty-five; and 22 had no age given.

Of the 41,283 deaf-mutes in the United States in 1890, there were in infancy 938; childhood, 4,481; youth, 11,429; adult life, 18,029; old age, 5,914; unknown, 492.

THE LAW GOVERNING THE INSTITUTION.

Acts and sections of acts expressly repealed, or, beyond question, repealed by implication, have been omitted, as have also all acts and sections of acts governing some particular matter, such as special building, improvements, etc., etc. The appropriation bill of each General Assembly usually contains one or more provisions concerning the finances of the Institution. It is believed that the following is a complete abstract of existing general law.

THE OBLIGATION OF THE STATE AS SET OUT BY THE CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE, 1852.

Sec. 190. Benevolent Institutions. It shall be the duty of the General Assembly to provide, by law, for the support of the institutions for the education of the deaf and dumb, and of the blind, and, also, for the treatment of the insane.

MAINTENANCE.

Sec. 2805 R. S. Appropriations. The General Assembly shall, at each regular session, appropriate a sum necessary to meet the current expenses of the institution until the next regular session thereof. (Act 1853.)

Sec. 2758 R. S. Continuing Appropriation. Whenever there shall be a failure, at any regular biennial session of the General Assembly, to pass an appropriation bill or bills making appropriations for the objects and purposes hereinafter mentioned, it shall be lawful for the Governor, Secretary, and Treasurer of State, until appropriations shall be made by the Legislature, to direct the Auditor of State to draw his warrants on the State Treasury for such sums as they may, from time to time, decide to be necessary for such purposes respectively, not however exceeding the amounts appropriated for the same objects respectively by the last preceding appropriations which shall have been made by the General Assembly; and to pay such warrants as may, from time to time, be drawn and presented, a sufficient sum of money is hereby appropriated. (Act 1869.)

Sec. 2759 R. S. Application of Money. The objects or purposes for which such warrants may be drawn shall be the following, viz.: For the necessary current expenses of the Hospital for the Insane, for the like expenses of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, for the like expenses of the Institution for the Blind, for the like expenses for the Soldiers' Home, and for the like expenses of the House of Refuge. (Act 1869.)

Sec. 2760 R. S. Warrants on General Fund. The warrants so to be drawn shall be drawn on the general fund and not otherwise, and shall not include any sum or sums for enlarging said institutions, or any or either of them, but shall be confined strictly to the necessary current expenses of said institutions respectively; and said allowances shall be made, monthly, upon the certificate of the president of the proper board of trustees of the said institutions respectively, showing in detail the necessity for the amount demanded, and that it has been approved by such board; which certificate shall be countersigned by the superintendent of the particular institution for which the expense was incurred. (Act 1869.)

Sec. 2761 R. S. Limit of Allowance. In making said monthly allowances, it shall be the duty of officers, as aforesaid authorized to make the same, not to exceed in any month one-twelfth of the amount appropriated for the current expenses of the same institution for the last preceding year for which an appropriation shall have been made by the General Assembly. (Act 1869.)

WHO SHALL BE PUPILS.

(Act 1853—3 Secs.)

Sec. 2808 R. S. Non-resident Pupils. Pupils from without the State may be admitted to the privileges of the institution, on the payment of such sum as the Board may consider sufficient to defray expenses.

Sec. 2809 R. S. Education Free to Residents. All mutes of the State shall be entitled to education in the institution free of charge, under such regulations as to age, capacity, character, and punctual attendance as the board of trustees shall adopt.

Sec. 2810 R. S. Expulsion of Pupils. The trustees shall expel from the institution any pupil whose longer continuance in the same would be injurious thereto.

SUPPORT OF PUPILS.

(Act 1865—6 Secs.)

Sec. 2762 R. S. Application for Admission. Whenever application is made for the admission of any blind or deaf-mute person into the State Institution for the Education of the Blind, or that for the Deaf and Dumb, or the Hospital for the Insane, as a beneficiary of the privileges thereof, such application shall be accompanied by the certificate of a Justice of the Peace, that such person is a legal resident of the county of the State of Indiana in which it is claimed that he or she resides.

Sec. 2763 R. S. Clothing and Traveling Expenses. When such person shall, upon proper application, be admitted as a pupil of either of the institutions named, it shall be the duty of his parents, guardians, or other friends to suitably provide him with clothing at the time of his entrance into the school and during his continuance therein; also to defray his traveling expenses to and from the institution, not only at the time of his first entrance and final departure, but at any other time when it shall become necessary for him to leave or return to the school.

Sec. 2764 R. S. When State Provides. In all cases where suitable clothing, and means for defraying traveling expenses, are not otherwise supplied to the pupils of said institutions, the same shall be provided by the respective superintendents thereof, who shall make out and file with the Treasurer of State accounts therefor, separate in each case, against the respective counties from which such pupils are sent, in an amount not exceeding forty dollars per annum for every such pupil; which accounts shall be severally signed by the proper superintendent, and attested by the seal of the Institution under his charge; and the Treasurer of State shall charge each account, thus certified, to the county from which the pupil named therein was sent.

Sec. 2765 R. S. Re-imbursement by County. The Treasurer of State shall forward each account, so filed with him, to the Treasurer of the proper county, who shall cause it to be paid out of the county treasury to the Treasurer of State; and such County Treasurer shall in the name of the county, and by suit if necessary, collect the amount of such account from the parents or estate of such pupil, as the case may be, where there is ability to pay: Provided, That at least three hundred dollars of the property of such parents shall be exempt from the payment of such account.

Sec. 2766 R. S. Funeral Expenses. In case of the death of any pupil at either of the Institutions aforesaid, whose funeral expenses are not otherwise provided for, an account therefor shall be made out, attested, and collected in like manner as provided in the preceding sections.

Sec. 2767 R. S. Removal and Expense. Whenever it shall be deemed necessary by the proper officers of either of said institutions, in accordance with the by-laws and regulations thereof, to have any pupil removed, either temporarily, on account of ill-health or the vacation of the school, or permanently on account of having completed his course of instruction or been found disqualified from any cause for a longer continuance in the school, the parents or guardians of such pupil, if he have any, shall promptly remove him upon the requirement of said officers; and in case he shall not be thus provided for, it shall be the duty of the superintendent of such institution to cause him to be so removed and delivered to the Trustee of the township where he resided before coming to said institution; and the expense of such removal shall be refunded to each institution, in the same manner as provided in sections three and four (sections 2764 and 2765); and the County Treasurer shall charge the same to the proper township, and collect it in the manner as provided in aforesaid sections.

TRUSTEES.

Acts 1889. Sec. 1. Number—Organization—Bond. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That the government and management of the Indiana Hospital for the Insane, of the Institution for the Education of the Blind, and of the Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, shall be and hereby is vested in three several Boards, consisting of three Trustees for each of said Institutions, whose terms of office shall be four years. The said Boards shall each on their organization, and every two years thereafter, elect one of their number President, and also elect one of their number Secretary, and one Treasurer. Two Trustees of each Board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; each of said Trustees shall within thirty days from the time of their election execute to the State of Indiana a bond in the sum of ten thousand dollars, with sureties to be approved by the Governor, conditioned for their faithful discharge of their duties. And the Treasurer of said Board shall also within thirty days from the time of his election execute his bond to the State of Indiana in the sum of fifty thousand dollars with sureties to be approved by the Governor conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties as such Treasurer.

Sec. 2. Time to Serve. The General Assembly shall select, (see below) on the taking effect of this act, three Trustees for each of said Institutions, two members of each Board to serve four years, and one member of each board to serve two years, and their successors shall be elected by the General Assembly.

Acts 1893. Sec. 1. How Appointed. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That the governor be, and is hereby authorized and empowered to appoint all officers (trustees) for all benevolent, educational, penal, reformatory and other institutions of the State, whose election or appointment is now vested in the General Assembly by law: (Institution for the deaf and others).

Sec. 2. Terms—Vacancies. Such appointments shall be made by the Governor at the times and for the terms provided by law for the election or appointment of such officers. And the Governor shall have the power to fill all vacancies that may occur from any cause whatsoever, in any of the offices aforesaid in like manner as provided in this act for the original appointment of such officers.

Sec. 3. Removals. The Governor shall have power to remove any officer by him appointed, or any officer now holding office, the appointment to which office is embraced in, or governed by the provisions of this act for incompetency, malfeasance in office, or for any other cause that to him may seem just, furnishing to the officer complained of, at the time of such removal, a statement of the cause or causes of removal.

Sec. 2770 R. S. Oath. The said Trustees shall, each, before entering upon the duties of office, take an oath to faithfully discharge their several duties as such officers. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2772 R. S. By-laws—Meetings—Bills. The trustees of each of said institutions shall be and constitute a board for the management of the business and affairs thereof, with power to make all proper rules, regulations, and by-laws for its government. They shall have a regular meeting at or about the close of each month; and shall meet at least one other time during each month, for the purpose of informal consultation or the transaction of current or incidental business. They shall keep a record of their proceedings and acts, and of moneys received or paid out, and of all orders drawn or paid. No moneys shall be paid out or expended, except upon an itemized bill first presented and allowed by the board. Such bill shall be signed and sworn to by the claimant, and such payment shall be made by an order signed by the president drawn upon the treasurer of the institution, payable ten days from the drawing thereof; and no bill shall be allowed for more than the lowest cost value of the articles purchased or services or materials paid for; and all contracts made for articles, materials, or services, shall be subject to allowance by said board. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2773 R. S. Statement of Unpaid Orders. The treasurer shall from time to time, before such orders become due, present to the Auditor of State a statement of all orders drawn and unpaid, giving the date and number and amount of each order, and the person to whom payable, which shall be signed and sworn to by the treasurer and certified to by the president of the board; and the Auditor of State shall thereupon draw an order for the amount, in favor of such treasurer, upon the Treasurer of State, who shall pay the amount out of any money in his hands subject to such payment. The Auditor of State shall open and keep an account with the treasurer of each of said institutions, and shall charge him with the orders so drawn upon the State Treasury. The treasurer of said institutions shall, at the close of each month, return to the Auditor of State an itemized statement of the orders paid by him and the amounts thereof, signed and sworn to as being correct, and, with such statement, shall return to the Auditor the orders so paid; the Auditor of State shall thereupon credit the said treasurer with the amount so paid out by him, and shall carefully preserve all such orders and statements. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2776 R. S. Expenses—Report—Nepotism Forbidden. The board of trustees shall have power to make allowances for the payment of any money required or authorized by law to be paid, or for the improvement, preservation, and care of their several institutions, and the grounds and property connected therewith, and the expenses thereof, the payment of employes and other expenses; but such allowances shall only be made upon an itemized statement of the superintendent, showing the cause and necessity therefor, and all payments shall be made only by orders drawn on the treasurer of such institution in the manner herein provided. They shall severally make a report to the Governor, at the close of each fiscal year, giving a full statement of their receipts, disbursements, and operations during the year preceding; the number of inmates received, discharged, and then in the institution; the cost per capita for the year; the estimated cost of the succeeding year; and all things necessary to show the condition and management of the same, together with any recommendations or suggestions they may deem proper for the better and more efficient government or welfare thereof; which reports the Governor shall transmit to the General Assembly, with his message, at each regular session thereof. In such reports they shall show what amount has been expended for repairs upon the buildings and for permanent improvements, in a separate account from the ordinary expenses of the institution. They shall not appoint, nor allow to be appointed, any relative of their own, or of either of them, either by blood or marriage; and they shall not allow any of the relatives or members of the family, except the wife and children of such officers, whose regular home has been and is with him, of any superintendent or other subordinate or employe to be kept, maintained, or supported in the institution, without charging to such persons the full value of such maintenance and support, unless such relative or member of the family be regularly employed and paid as one of the subordinates or employes thereof. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2778 R. S. Salaries. The trustees of the Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb shall be paid salaries, payable quarterly, at the rate of four hundred dollars, each, per annum (out of regular maintenance fund for institution.) (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2781 R. S. Borrowing Forbidden. It shall be unlawful for the board of trustees of any benevolent, scientific, reformatory, or educational institution of the State to borrow money upon the credit of the State, or to contract any indebtedness on the credit of the State, or to make expenditures for improvements for said institutions in any way, unless the said loans or expenditure of money are first authorized by an Act of the General Assembly for such purposes. (Act 1875.)

Sec. 2782 R. S. Penalty. Any trustee or trustees of any such institution who shall violate the provisions of the foregoing section, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be fined in any sum not less than five hundred dollars, and shall forfeit his office upon conviction; which forfeiture shall be part of the judgment of the Court. (Act 1875.)

SUPERINTENDENT.

Sec. 2774 R. S. Superintendent and Subordinates. The board of each of said institutions shall appoint a superintendent thereof, who may reside in the institution; and the superintendents, with the approval of the board, may appoint such subordinate officers, secretaries, assistants, physicians, teachers, attendants, and employes as may be necessary; but the board shall prescribe the number to be employed, and provide rules, for their government and control, and fix the amount of compensation for their services, including the superintendent, who shall not be paid more than two thousand dollars per annum. Such superintendent shall be skilled and qualified, by education and practice, to take charge of the institution for which he is appointed, and shall give a bond for the faithful performance of his duties and for the payment of all damages arising from their non-performance. Such bond shall be payable to the State of Indiana, in such sum as required by the board and to their approval; and suit may be brought thereon by the State, or by the State on the relation of any person injured. The superintendents shall take personal charge and supervision of their respective institutions and of the inmates therein and of the subordinate officers, teachers, attendants, and employes connected therewith, subject to the rules and regulations prescribed and to the orders and general control of the board of trustees. He may, for good cause, discharge any of such subordinates and employes, and appoint other competent persons in their places; which appointment shall continue only until the next meeting of the board, at which time the superintendent shall report all such changes, and the causes therefor; and the board may confirm such appointments; and, if not confirmed he shall make other suitable appointments, subject to the confirmation of said board. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2771 R. S. Annual Inventory—Report. Such superintendents or managers shall, within thirty days after the taking effect of this Act, each make out and deliver to the proper board of trustees of each of said institutions a complete itemized inventory and statement, subscribed and sworn to by him, setting forth in detail all the property, both real and personal, belonging to said institutions, or belonging to the State and connected therewith, or in use in and about the same. Such statement shall give the quality and condition of such property and the value thereof, where it is and for what purpose or in what way it is used, and shall also give a detailed and itemized account of all productions raised and consumed, and of each parcel of property, including hides, tallow, flowers, farm products, goods, or merchandise, and all other articles, sold or otherwise disposed of during the year last past, by such superintendent or managers or by the trustees or subordinates of said institution; to whom the same was sold, and for what price; who received the money and for what purpose it was used. Said statement shall contain a detailed itemized statement of all expenditures, during the past year, for repairs upon buildings or grounds, and for furniture and other articles purchased for the use of said institutions, or in and about the same; and a detailed and itemized statement of all articles of wearing apparel, goods, merchandise, or property received during the past year with or for any of the inmates; what became of such property; whether any, if so, what, amounts are on hand yet; what amount of like goods or wearing apparel has been during said time, purchased for each of the inmates, and what amount of moneys have been received therefor and from what counties so received, who received such moneys, and for what purpose they have been used.

It shall also give a general account of the affairs of the institution, the number of inmates received, and from what counties they came, the number discharged and the cause thereof, and the condition of the inmates, and the wants and requirements of the institution. A like report, inventory, and statement shall be annually made, on the thirty-first day of October in each year, to each of the said boards of trustees who may prescribe additional and other matter to be included therein. Such reports, after the examination and action thereon by the boards, shall be delivered to the Governor, who shall transmit them to the General Assembly, at each regular session thereof. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2775 R. S. Purchase of Supplies—Monthly Report. The superintendent shall at or about the close of each month, make out, for the information of the board, an itemized statement and estimate of the amount and kind of purchases required for the next succeeding month; and it shall be the duty of the board of trustees to solicit competition among dealers for the sale of such articles and goods as may be required, by publication or otherwise; and to this end they shall keep such statement and estimate open to public inspection, and shall give personal attention to the bids for and the purchase of such articles and goods, and use their best endeavors to obtain them at the lowest public prices. The superintendents shall also make out and file with the board, at each regular meeting, an itemized statement of all moneys paid out or expense incurred for each of the inmates since the last report, showing the counties to which the inmates belong, and the total amount chargeable to each county. Such statements shall be filed with the Treasurer of State, who shall charge the same to the proper county and collect the amount due from such county at each settlement with the Treasurer thereof; and such moneys shall be covered into the general fund of the State Treasury. The superintendent shall also, at each regular meeting, make out and file with the board a complete and itemized statement of all money received, since his last report, from the sale of hides, tallow, farm or garden products, or flowers, and from any and all other sources whatever, stating the date and transaction, and from whom the money was received. Such money shall be, by him, at that time, paid over to the treasurer of the institution, who shall give his receipt therefor, and shall immediately pay the same over to the Treasurer of State, who shall give his receipt therefor, and cover and transfer the amount into the general fund of the treasury; and all moneys payable, by law, to or for the benefit of either of said institutions, except the appropriation made therefor, shall in all cases be paid over to the State Treasurer, who shall cover and transfer the same into the general fund of the treasury. (Act 1879). (Partly changed by Industrial act 1891 so far as receipts from shops are concerned; see forward.)

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

WHEREAS, The instruction of their pupils in some industrial art, whereby they may be enabled to earn their own support, is recognized to be an important work of the Indiana Institutions for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, the Blind and the Feeble-Minded; and,

WHEREAS, At the present time the industrial education, or certain parts thereof, of the pupils in some of the said institutions is being conducted by contractors who give instruction in return for the labor of the pupils; and,

WHEREAS, Such instruction has been in the past, and now is, unsatisfactory, insufficient, incomplete and partial; and,

WHEREAS, It is manifestly against good public policy that the labor of the inmates of the benevolent institutions of the State should be made a matter of private gain; and,

WHEREAS, The present usual maintenance funds of the said benevolent institutions under existing laws are not sufficient to enable the Trustees to carry on the industrial education in a proper manner; therefore,

Sec. 1. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That the hiring out of the labor of the pupils of the benevolent institutions of the State under any form of contract be, and the same is hereby absolutely forbidden.

Sec. 2. The superintendents of the aforesaid benevolent institutions, namely, the Indiana Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, the Indiana Institution for the Education of the Blind, the Indiana School for Feeble-Mind Youth, acting under the control and supervision of the respective boards of trustees of said institutions are hereby authorized and required to provide for appropriate industrial education of their pupils under similar rules and methods to those of scholastic instruction, namely, by means of teachers hired by Superintendents as other teachers are hired and subject on all points to the same control as all other teachers, officers, and employees of the said institutions.

Sec. 3. The industrial education of the said pupils in the aforesaid institutions and school shall, as far as possible, be conducted in such manner as to make said pupils fit and able to earn their own support when they shall have been graduated or otherwise discharged from said institutions or school, and not chiefly or mainly, so as to make any profit or revenue.

Sec. 4. The necessary cost of materials, machinery, if any, and instruction for the industrial education in the aforesaid institutions and school shall be a charge upon and defrayed out of the regular maintenance funds of the same except as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 5. The superintendents of the institutions and school aforesaid shall be authorized to dispose by sale of any material used in the industrial education of the pupils in the same manner as now provided by law for the sale of waste or surplus material: Provided, That no material so used by the pupils shall be disposed of at a lower price than the current market price for similar articles at the time when they are sold: And, further provided, That if the material to be disposed of be available for the use of any other of the institutions of the State the same shall be purchased by them, and paid for in the same manner that they pay for any material or supplies that they may purchase.

Sec. 6. The superintendent of each of the institutions and the school aforesaid shall pay to the Treasurer of State the gross proceeds of the sale of any material as provided for in the previous section, as now required by law, whereupon the Treasurer of State shall give the said superintendent a receipt for the amount, which receipt shall specify that the amount is the produce of the sale of material used in the industrial education of the pupils. The superintendent shall thereupon deposit the said receipt with the Auditor of State, who shall give him a quietus for the amount, and shall place the amount of the same to the credit of the maintenance fund of the institution or school, and not, as heretofore provided by law, to the credit of General fund of the State.

MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS.

Sec. 2777 R. S. Unexpended Balances. The Treasurer of State shall, biennially, cover and transfer into the general fund of the treasury all moneys appropriated and unexpended at the close of the fiscal year, immediately preceding each regular session of the General Assembly. (Act 1879.)

Sec. 2779 R. S. Restrictions on Officers. It shall be unlawful for any person connected with said institution as president, trustees or superintendent, subordinates or employes, to be pecuniarily interested in any contract for or purchase of supplies or materials, or to make or receive any profits, per centages, or deductions, or any reward or benefit whatever out of the management or operation, or business of the said institutions, other than the fees and compensation for his services established and allowed by law. Sec. 2. Penalty. Any person guilty of the violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a felony, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be imprisoned in the State's Prison, not less than two or more than fourteen years, and shall be disfranchised and rendered incapable of holding any office of trust or profit for any determined period.

Sec. 2806 R. S. Sectarianism. No sectarian tenets of religion shall be taught in the institution to any pupil thereof. (Act 1853.)

Sec. 3916 R. S. '81. Railroads. * * * No railroad shall be located upon or across the grounds of the State occupied by the Institutions for the Insane, the Blind, or the Deaf and Dumb. (Act 1853.)

Acts 1889. Concerning Railroads. Be it enacted by the General Assembly of the State of Indiana, That the Board of Trustees of any Asylum in this State may and are hereby given the power to make and enter into a contract permitting any railroad company to lay their line of railroad along, over and across the lands so occupied by such asylum, and so belonging to the State; provided, Such contract shall be in writing, signed by the parties thereto, and the same shall be in effect from and after the time such contract shall be filed in the office of the Secretary of State: provided, That no railroad shall be located upon or across the ground occupied by such asylums unless such line shall run and operate upon its line dummy cars and engines, or unless it be a horse, cable or electric street railway.

Sec. 6337 R. S. Lists of Deaf and Dumb. It shall be the duty of assessors at time of assessing personal property, to ascertain and set down in tables prepared for that purpose a list of all persons in their respective townships who are deaf and dumb * * * setting forth the name, age, and sex of each, also the names of the father, mother or guardian and post office address; * * * which lists they shall return to the county auditors. * * * The said county auditors shall report the same to the chief of the Bureau of Statistics * * * and said chief shall lay before the Superintendents of the institution for * * * the Deaf and Dumb copies of the lists so made. (Act 1881.)

Acts 1889. Board of State Charities. Sec. 2. They * * * shall investigate the whole system of public charities and correctional institutions of the State, examine into the condition and management thereof * * *: and the officers in charge of all such institutions shall furnish to the Board, on their request such information and statistics as they may require; and, to secure accuracy, uniformity and completeness in such statistics the Board may prescribe such forms of report and registration as they may deem essential. * * * The Board in its discretion, may at any time, make an investigation, by the whole Board or by a committee of its members, of the management of any penal, reformatory, or charitable institution of the State: and said Board or committee, in making any such investigation, shall have power to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths and affirmations: and the report of such investigation, with the testimony shall be made to the Governor, and shall be submitted by him, with his suggestions, to the General Assembly.

CHARLES E. HAUGH.
Treasurer Board of Trustees.

RULES OF TRUSTEES AND OF SUPERINTENDENT.

The Institution is governed by a Board of Trustees, three in number, who are appointed by the Governor of the State, and who hold office for the term of four years. This Board elects the Superintendent, who in turn makes all other appointments, subject, however, to confirmation by the Board. The following extract from "Rules and Regulations" will explain these matters.

AN ORDER OF THE BOARD.

(Passed September 4, 1890.)

MEETINGS.

I. Two regular meetings of the Board shall be held each month; one at the Institution on the Thursday following the first Monday, at 10 A. M., for the auditing of accounts and all general business of the Institution, excepting purchase of supplies; one at the State House on the last Friday of each month, at 10 A. M., for the purchase of supplies for the succeeding month, and such other business as may need immediate attention.

II. Special meetings of the Board may be called by any two members thereof signing a call.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

III. The Superintendent of the Institution shall be elected at the first regular meeting in July, and hold his office for such a term as may be fixed by the Board, dating from September 1st following, and until his successor is elected and qualified. The appointments of the Superintendent shall be reported to the Board from time to time as they are made. Should any of them be for a year, they shall be reported at the first regular meeting in August, same to take effect September 1st following.

THE SUPERINTENDENT.

IV. The Superintendent shall be the executive head of the Institution and the organ of communication with subordinate departments.

V. Into the hands of the Superintendent is committed the management of the Institution in all its departments; and the subordinate officers, teachers and others, are to adhere to the plans of operation which he may mark out, and promptly and cheerfully comply with all his directions, not only in the performance of the duties as may be by him specified in "Rules of the Superintendent," but also in such others as it may be deemed just and proper to assign them.

VI. No subordinate officer, teacher or employe, shall contravene or interfere with the directions given at any time by the Superintendent to the pupils, or to the persons by him employed; and shall report to him any neglect or act of disobedience.

VII. By statutory enactment he has powers concerning operatives, as follows: (1) He shall appoint all officers, teachers, secretaries, assistants, physicians, attendants and employes as may be necessary, but this Board shall prescribe the number thereof, confirm or reject the appointments and fix the amount of compensation. (2) He shall take personal charge and supervision of the Institution and of the inmates therein, and have the direction of all persons connected therewith, subject to the order and control of the Board of Trustees. (3) He may, for good cause, discharge any of said persons and appoint other competent persons in their places. He shall report such changes, and the causes therefor, to the Board at the next meeting thereof; and also the appointments made because of such change for confirmation or rejection. If rejected, he shall make other suitable appointments.

VIII. In his management of the finances he shall practice the most rigid economy, consistent with the comfort of the pupils and the prosperity of the Institution.

IX. He shall, from time to time, communicate to the Trustees such information as he may think necessary, or as they may require, in regard to the operations of the Institution, and the manner in which the various officers, teachers and employes, perform their duties.

X. He shall frequently inspect all parts of the establishment, and take the most efficient, or even stringent, measure for enforcing neatness, order and regularity in all departments. And it shall be his duty immediately to discharge any person employed who shall appear inefficient, neglect allotted duties, or manifest a spirit of insubordination.

XI. It shall be his duty to attend all meetings of the Board of Trustees, and he may speak upon any matter under discussion.

XII. He shall keep a list of all the regular employes not officers of the Institution, and at the monthly meetings of the Board he shall exhibit such list, with the duties and compensation of each person affixed thereto; and the Board shall thereupon proceed to allow to such persons the compensation to which they may be entitled.

XIII. At any time, when he shall deem it necessary to make any repairs of the Institution, or purchase any supplies for the same (except in cases of immediate necessity), he shall make out a statement of the repairs to be made, or supplies to be purchased, and lay the same before the Board, who, if they deem such repairs or purchases necessary, shall order the same made under his direction.

XIV. He shall receive all moneys which may be due the Institution, and report the amount thereof, and the sources from whence derived, at each regular meeting of the Board.

XV. He shall teach the pupils to act from principle, and not from fear. He shall inculcate respect and govern them, as much as possible, by the influence of moral suasion.

XVI. He shall superintend and direct their physical, intellectual, industrial and moral instruction.

XVII. He shall pay special attention to their health and comfort. And when the boys are engaged in labor, he shall intrust them to some reponsible person connected with the Institution.

XVIII. No officer, teacher or employe under him shall be absent from his or her duties without his permission.

XIX. In his temporary absence he shall designate some competent officer to perform his duties.

XX. He shall, from time to time, give such directions and prescribe such rules for the government of the officers, teachers and employes, and the conduct and deportment of the pupils, as he may deem necessary.

XXI. In thus taking general control he must pay especial attention to, and perform all duties prescribed by, legislative laws governing the Institution.

XXII. This shall stand as authoritative on the subject matter until repealed, and in lieu of all previous orders and by-laws.

RULES OF THE SUPERINTENDENT.

GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

It must be understood that this code of rules for the regulation of the Institution is based upon the following principles:

I. That the Institution is established solely for the benefit of the pupils; to promote their highest physical, intellectual, industrial and moral improvement. Anything that will tend to bring about this improvement shall be considered as duty by all connected with the Institution.

II. That the State pays officers, teachers and employes for their time and services, and consequently expects of them a fulfillment of their duties in a diligent, painstaking and conscientious manner, a departure from which will indicate a lack of interest in their work, and, in consequence thereof, an unfitness for the position occupied.

III. That the Superintendent is directly and solely responsible to the Trustees for the correct and efficient management of the Institution in all its departments.

TENURE OF OFFICE.

I. The employment of officers and teachers will be for one year; of all others, for no definite period.

II. In the employment and continuance of officers special consideration will be given to their qualifications as to moral character, practical skill in management and competency in their particular work.

III. In the employment and continuance of teachers special consideration will be given to their qualifications as to moral character, literary and practical skill in instruction and management.

IV. In the employment and continuance of all others special consideration will be given to their qualifications as to moral character and general competency in their work.

V. Willful violation of rules, unfitness, or incompetence shall be cause for dismissal.

THE PRINCIPAL.

I. The Principal shall visit all the school-rooms as often as practicable, paying particular attention to the classification of the pupils and to the apportionment among the classes of the prescribed studies.

II. It shall be his duty to instruct classes, examine and grade pupils, and to supervise the instruction and discipline of teachers within their respective rooms.

III. He is authorized at any time during the year to promote pupils to a grade higher than the one to which they belong, or send them to the grade next below, as the best interests of the pupil and the school require. Such changes must be reported at once to the Superintendent.

IV. In passing daily from room to room, he shall endeavor to transfer improvements and remedy defects.

V. He shall see that the teachers are promptly notified and duly advised as to all rules and regulations pertaining to the government and classification of the school, and shall report to the Superintendent any refusal, after due and proper admonition, on the part of a teacher to comply with same.

VI. He shall make report to the Superintendent from time to time of the success of each one of the teachers, with suggestions of change or improvement in the course of study or discipline, or on other topics of general interest as may be thought worthy of consideration.

VII. In the performance of his duties he shall be entitled to the respect and deference of the teachers.

VIII. During the temporary absence of the Superintendent he shall exercise the functions of that office so far as the school is concerned.

TEACHERS.

I. Teachers are to regard their duty to the Institution as of the first importance, and shall not allow other engagements or business to interfere with the duties of the same.

II. They are expected to enter upon the opening service of their respective school-rooms at the precise minute appointed. They must be present in their class-rooms in time for the arrival of their pupils and see that they march in in an orderly manner. They must attend Sabbath school exercises in both class-room and chapel.

III. Whenever any teacher shall be temporarily absent from school because of sickness or accident, it shall be the duty of said teacher to send a statement to the Principal, to be by him transmitted to the Superintendent, giving the reason and probable time of such absence. In case permission be given by the Superintendent to teachers to absent themselves said teachers shall report such fact to the Principal before leaving.

IV. All teachers shall devote themselves exclusively to the duties of their classes during school hours, and shall use every available means for their improvement in the work of instruction and discipline.

V. They shall confine themselves to the prescribed course of study as closely as circumstances will permit.

VI. They shall make a faithful record upon the daily register of all required therein: at the end of the week they shall make an accurate weekly report in accordance with instructions on weekly report blanks, and present same to the Principal on Monday morning. They shall keep such other records and make such other reports as the Superintendent may require. All work, except the daily record, must be done outside of school hours.

VII. Teachers shall have charge of such classes as may be assigned them by the Superintendent. They shall be subject to his direction, and that of the Principal as mentioned above, and shall co-operate with them not only during school hours, but before and after.

VIII. They shall carefully guard against the introduction of questions of a sectarian or partisan character in the class-room, or elsewhere so far as pupils are concerned.

IX. They shall be held responsible for the order and discipline of their respective rooms (and study halls and chapel, when in charge of same), practicing such discipline as would be exercised by a kind, firm and judicious parent in his family.

X. They shall avoid corporal punishment except in the most aggravated cases. In case such punishment is inflicted, a full and complete statement specifying the name and age of the pupil punished, the offense charged and the kind and degree of punishment inflicted, must be made out and given to the Principal to be by him presented to the Superintendent.

XI. Whenever pupils are detained in the school-room at recess as a punishment they shall be allowed to pass out after the recess is closed. Pupils should be required to pass out of the school-room at recess unless it would occasion an exposure of health: but they shall never be required to remain out when the exposure would be injurious to health.

XII. It shall be the duty of teachers to give vigilant attention to the ventilation and temperature of the school-rooms and to make themselves familiar with the means by which their respective rooms may be properly ventilated. A regular system of ventilation shall be practiced at all times by which the air in all their school-rooms shall be effectually changed at recess, and at such other times as may be necessary to prevent the breathing of impure air. Children shall in no case be allowed to sit in a draught of air.

XIII. On no account shall they dismiss their pupils earlier than the appointed time, nor for any day or part of a day, without permission from the Superintendent. If he be absent from the Institution, such permission must be obtained of the Principal.

XIV. They shall, in turn, have charge of the pupils during such periods outside of the school-rooms as may from time to time be assigned by the Superintendent. The gentlemen shall in regular order conduct the morning devotional exercises.

XV. They shall, at all times, give their support to the officers of the Institution, by inculcating in the minds of their respective classes proper principles of good order and obedience; and they shall never intimate to them matters to the discredit of any officer of the Institution.

XVI. They shall carefully abstain from all interference with the duties of the officers.

XVII. Teachers shall not be allowed to employ their time outside of school hours in any manner which will interfere with their efficiency or usefulness as teachers in the Institution.

XVIII. Attendance upon teachers' meetings will not be made obligatory, but attendance will naturally indicate interest in their work; non-attendance, lack of interest.

XIX. To obtain school-room supplies, etc., teachers shall prepare lists of what is needed, upon the proper supply blanks, and send same to Superintendent, who will have all necessary supplies issued.

XX. It will be the duty of each teacher to read to the pupils, from time to time, such rules as apply to them, that they may have a clear understanding of the rules by which they are governed.

[Here follow rules outlining duties of book and store-keeper; matron; house-keeper; physicians; librarian; dining-room superior; ushers; supervisors; nurse; industrial instructors; overseer of farm and garden; engineer; watchman; watchwoman; chief of fire patrol, and carpenter. Also miscellaneous rules; rules governing library, and rules governing pupils.]

NOTICE.

I. All persons whose duties are above specified shall consider these rules as only a general outline of their duties, and must expect and be willing to perform such other duties as may, from time to time, be required of them by the Superintendent.

II. The plan of all books and papers to be kept, the scope and nature of all rules to be established, the plan and nature of all reports to be made, the character of all supervision granted and the performance of all duties generally, must be by, and with full consent and approval of, the Superintendent.

III. All necessary arrangements for interchange of duties, so as to give officers, teachers and employes relief from duty at certain times, will be made by the Superintendent. In order to justly accomplish this, persons will be called upon at times to perform duties not in the line of their employment.

TENNESSEE DEAF AND DUMB SCHOOL.

Tennessee Deaf and Dumb School,

LOCATED AT KNOXVILLE, TENN.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

1844 - 1893.

The Tennessee Deaf and Dumb School.

The first legislation looking to the establishment of a school for the deaf and dumb children of Tennessee was proposed and persistently advocated by the late General John Cocke, of Grainger county, when a member of the Senatorial branch of the General Assembly of the State; and the friends of deaf-mute education in Tennessee have ever held General Cocke in grateful remembrance as the one, above all others, to whose benevolent impulses and wise action the institution owes its existence.

On the 20th of December, 1843, General Cocke secured, as an amendment to a bill then pending for the establishment of a State school for the blind at Nashville, the insertion of an appropriation of one thousand dollars for putting in operation a school for the deaf and dumb at Knoxville. This bill passed the Senate on December 21, 1843, and was finally passed in the House on January 29, 1844.

Governor James C. Jones appointed Messrs. R. B. McMullen, Joseph Estabrook and D. R. McAnally to constitute the first Board of Trustees. These gentlemen met in the counting-room of Cowan & Dickinson, at Knoxville, on July 27, 1844, and organized by the election of Rev. R. B. McMullen, President, and Rev. D. R. McAnally, Secretary.

The President was requested to address letters to the American Asylum at Hartford, to the New York Institution, and to other schools, then in operation asking for information to aid the trustees in the proper organization of the school, and he was also requested to address a circular letter to the people of Tennessee asking for information in regard to the deaf and dumb of school age throughout the State.

After considerable correspondence the Board of Trustees secured the services of Rev. Thomas MacIntire, then a teacher in the Ohio Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, to take charge of the Tennessee school, as principal and instructor. Mr. MacIntire entered upon his duties April 1st, 1845, and served the institution faithfully and satisfactorily for five years when he resigned and returned to his home in Ohio.

The school was begun in rented premises in what was known as the Churchwell House, an old residence, in East Knoxville. Upon assuming his duties Mr. MacIntire set to work at once to procure needed furniture, &c., and advertised the opening of the school on April 14th. Pupils arrived slowly, but on the first Monday of June, 1845, Mr. MacIntire began the work of instruction with a class of six pupils. The number in attendance soon increased to nine pupils with which the first session of the school closed on the first Monday of the following September.

The sum of one thousand dollars realized from the original appropriation was supplemented by private subscriptions to the amount of about four hundred dollars, so that the money available for the expenses of the first session of the school was about fourteen hundred dollars.

The succeeding legislature was urged by the Board of Trustees to make an appropriation for buildings but failed to do so. In response to the appeal of the Trustees, who had with great zeal undertaken the work of establishing the school upon a permanent basis, the people of East Tennessee subscribed about five thousand dollars for the erection of a building and the continuance of the school. This money was mostly contributed in small sums and was secured by the efforts of Messrs. W. G. McAdoo and J. M. Davis, agents appointed by the Trustees to canvass Knox and adjoining counties in the interest of the institution.

The money thus raised was used mainly in the erection of a three-story brick building twenty-five feet wide by eighty feet in length, now constituting the east wing of the main building according to the original design. Except for these special efforts on the part of the Trustees and the generous response of the public the school would probably have been closed indefinitely in 1846, as the building then occupied could be retained no longer and no means were available to procure other quarters without securing special private contributions.

On June 8th, 1846, Calvin Morgan, Esq., of Knoxville, generously donated to the school two acres of land situated immediately west of the limits of the town at that time, but now in the heart of the city.

Six years later, June 25, 1852, the Trustees purchased from the estate of Mr. Morgan, for two thousand dollars, three and a half acres of land adjoining the original lot on the north and east, and on May 21, 1858, two and a half acres additional were purchased on the west for five thousand eight hundred dollars making the present premises contain eight acres, the total cost of which has been seven thousand eight hundred dollars. The grounds of the institution front toward the south on Asylum street, being bounded on the north by Vine street and lying between Locust street on the east and Broad street on the west. The premises are kept in good order, with flower gardens, walks, and shaded lawns on the east, south and west, with boys' play ground and out-buildings on the north.

The main building is fifty by one hundred feet having three stories and an attic. It was erected in 1848, the corner stone having been laid with interesting public ceremonies on the 13th of May of that year. Among other publications lately received from the family of the first principal, Mr. MacIntire, was a pamphlet, printed by James C. and John L. Moses, at the office of the Knoxville Register, giving an account of the proceedings at the laying of this corner-stone with the address of Rev. Thomas W. Humes on that occasion. As evidencing the public interest in the school at that time it may not be inappropriate to give here a part of the account of the exercises.

"The corner-stone of the main edifice of the Tennessee Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, at Knoxville, was laid on Saturday, May 13th, 1848, by Mt. Libanus Lodge, No. 59, of Free Masons."

A procession was formed in the following order:

Mt. Libanus Lodge of Free Masons.

Clergy.

Trustees of the Deaf and Dumb Institution.

Teachers.

Pupils.

East Tennessee Division of the Sons of Temperance.

University Division.

Trustees of East Tennessee University.

President and Faculty.

Students.

Young Men's Literary Society.

Mayor and Aldermen of Knoxville.

Citizens.

A fervent prayer was offered by Rev. W. E. G. Cunningham, Chaplain of the Lodge. The ceremonies of laying the corner-stone were conducted by B. R. Strong, W. M.; James W. Campbell, S. W., and Joseph L. King, J. W. The exercises closed with the singing of an ode by the Lodge after a most appropriate and eloquent address by Rev. Thomas W. Humes.

This main building has a wide cornice with high corinthian columns, and though not of the present style of architecture is quite a handsome and imposing structure, it being, to many minds, more attractive than the more recent additions of modern style. Probably the first considerable use, for outside work, of white Tennessee marble, which has lately become so famous as a building stone and for monumental purposes, was in the construction of the marble stairs at the front of the main building erected forty-five years ago. There was of this marble work about one thousand cubic feet, and it was thought by some persons at that time to be an extravagant expenditure of money, but with scarcely any repairs or care the work stands to-day as good as when first constructed, thus demonstrating the real economy of the original large outlay. In 1852 the western wing corresponding to the one on the east—twenty-five by eighty feet and three stories high was constructed according to the original plan. Later additions have been made of a two-story chapel building forty by sixty feet, a two-story building for industrial purposes thirty by fifty feet, two school-room buildings thirty-five by sixty feet each and three stories high, a two-story building twenty-five by thirty feet for laundry purposes, and an eight-room frame house for principal's residence.

The total first cost of buildings and grounds has been about one hundred thousand dollars.

The last building erected one of the school buildings mentioned above—was built in 1891, at a cost of ten thousand dollars. An appropriation for such a building had been long needed and its necessity recognized by the members of the General Assembly, but, in answer to the appeal therefor, they had plead the straitened financial condition of the State and had put off the matter from session to session.

The Trustees renewed the application to the Forty-seventh General Assembly which convened in Nashville on the first Monday in January, 1891, and the matter was put in the hands of Hon. W. L. Ledgerwood, Representative from Knox county. The growth of the school had made an additional building a necessity, but the committees having recommended that no special appropriations be made for any purpose of the kind and other efforts having been already killed in the Legislature, it seemed as though there was little hope of securing what at least nine-tenths of the members had decided could not be then granted; but on the last day of the session Mr. Ledgerwood left a sick-bed and went to the House and, in committee of the whole on the appropriation bill, he secured an amendment giving the institution ten thousand dollars for this building by an earnest and eloquent appeal which entitles Mr. Ledgerwood to be held with General Cocke, the author of the legislation establishing the school, as one of its truest friends and chief benefactors.

Organization and Government.

The original act of the General Assembly of 1844, under which the school was established, was superseded by an act passed January 31, 1846, by which it was enacted, "That the Institution for the instruction of the Deaf and Dumb now in existence and operation in the town of Knoxville be and is hereby incorporated under the name and style of the Tennessee Deaf and Dumb School under the control and management of a Board of Trustees composed of the following six gentlemen: viz., Rev. R. B. McMullen, Rev. D. R. McAnally, Joseph Estabrook, Rev. T. Sullins, James H. Cowan and Campbell Wallace, and their successors in office." The three original trustees were retained by this act and three others added. Subsequently the membership of the Board of Trustees was increased, the number now being fourteen including the State Superintendent of Public Instruction who is ex-officio a member of the Board.

The charter of the school or act of incorporation of 1846 was signed in behalf of the Senate, as Speaker by H. M. Waterson and by Brookins Campbell as Speaker of the House. This charter placed the entire control of the institution in the hands of the Board of Trustees who were thereby required to report to each General Assembly of the State.

The following gentlemen have served the school as Trustees since the organization of the Board in 1844:

R. B. McMullen, Joseph Estabrook, D. R. McAnally, T. Sullins, James H. Cowan, Campbell Wallace, Thomas W. Humes, M. D. Bearden, James Park, Joseph Jackson, Joseph H. Walker, James C. Moses, J. D. Gibson, John H. Crozier, Daniel McCallum, W. J. Baker, S. B. Boyd, O. W. Morris, Abner G. Jackson, Matthew Hillsman, O. P. Temple, R. D. Jourlmon, Henry Ault, S. R. Rogers, M. A. Williams, W. D. Carnes, John Baxter, W. B. Shapard, Samuel B. Boyd, John L. Moses, William K. Eckle, George H. Smith, C. W. Jones, Alfred Caldwell, J. M. Thornburgh, Richard C. Jackson, Joseph Jaques, J. F. Deaderick, L. C. Shepard, John S. Van Gilder, John M. Boyd, Samuel T. Atkin, W. W. Woodruff, Samuel B. Ault, R. S. Payne, J. W. Caldwell, John McCoy, Frank A. Moses, John M. Allen, H. T. Ault, J. Y. Johnston, and State Superintendent of Public Instruction, Frank M. Smith. The fourteen last named gentlemen constitute the present Board of Trustees.

The State and the School have been fortunate in the character, ability and zeal of the men who have constituted the Board. They have been, from the beginning of the institution, uniformly, representatives of the best element of the business and professional men of the community. They have served without any compensation whatever and without cost to the State in the way of expenses. This service has been rendered cheerfully, and with a fidelity and punctuality seldom known in any body of men so constituted. The members of this Board have esteemed it a high privilege to thus serve humanity and God and they have done conscientious, efficient work in behalf of the State and the deaf and dumb children of Tennessee. Speaking for himself and his associate Trustees, the President of the Board said a few weeks since. "We want the fact of our being Trustees of this school engraven upon our tomb-stones." "We regard a well managed institution of this character as the proudest monument we could have."

Maintenance.

The institution has no endowment fund and is supported wholly by the State of Tennessee. After the appropriation of one thousand dollars to found the school and maintain it the first year, the Legislature appropriated twenty-five hundred dollars per annum for the next two years for support, and five thousand dollars annually thereafter for several years, special appropriation being made from time to time for buildings and improvements.

The Legislature of 1857 passed an act appropriating two hundred dollars annually for each "pauper mute" in the State attending the school. This law required a certificate to the effect that the parents of children seeking admission as state pupils were paupers, and this humiliating requirement kept many children at home who should have entered the school.

In 1860 this provision was modified so that the Trustees could admit children as State, or free, pupils when satisfied of the inability of parents to pay for their maintenance at school.

In 1877 all requirements as to payment were stricken out of the laws governing the admission of pupils, and the school was made free to all deaf children in the State regardless of the financial ability of parents, or their poverty.

This was but a recognition of the principle of common justice that all the children of the State were entitled to an education, and ought not to be debarred therefrom by deafness or poverty. The change has proven greatly to the advantage of the deaf and dumb of the State. It has worked well in the management of the school by abolishing the spirit of caste which will grow up in any school composed in part of pay pupils, and it has added but little to the cost of the institution to the State.

In 1866 the General Assembly passed a law giving to the school five thousand dollars annually, in addition to the per capita allowance, and the institution was supported under these laws for many years; but under the present laws in Tennessee as to appropriations, specified sums are appropriated biennially for the maintenance of the school upon estimates of the Trustees. The estimate for current expenses, for the next two years, is twenty-eight thousand five hundred dollars per annum.

Colored Department.

In October, 1881, a separate school for colored deaf and dumb children was begun in East Knoxville in rented premises very near the spot where the school for white children had been organized thirty-six years before.

The department for colored children is under the same general management as the department for white children.

In 1885, upon application of the Board of Trustees, the Legislature appropriated five thousand, five hundred dollars to purchase grounds and buildings for the colored department then offered at that price. These premises were situated two miles east of Knoxville and contained twenty-seven acres of land, well adapted to the purposes of the school, with commodious and comfortable brick buildings formerly occupied as a country home and costing originally largely more than the price at which the entire premises were secured.

An additional outlay of thirty-five hundred dollars has provided sufficient accommodations for the present needs of this department in which there are now twenty-six pupils.

Attendance.

The total enrollment of both departments of the institution for the present session is one hundred and seventy—the largest in its history. Since the organization of the school, seven hundred and seventy-six pupils have been under instruction.

Five sessions were lost on account of the suspension during the civil war.

There were sixteen sessions previous to the suspension with the following attendance by terms:

9, 10, 15, 22, 22, 26, 21, 31, 44, 64, 59, 60, 70, 58, 57, 55.

Since the reorganization there have been twenty-seven sessions with an attendance as follows:

39, 58, 74, 78, 102, 115, 162, 128, 132, 133, 110, 103, 107, 108, 113, 119, 115, 116, 128, 136, 129, 129, 130, 154, 158, 164, 170.

The age of admission is eight years and the term of instruction is eight years. The average term of attendance has been about five years.

Methods of Instruction.

The sign or manual method of instruction in use at Hartford and in the other American Schools in 1845 was adopted by Mr. MacIntire at the beginning of the work in the Tennessee School, and this system was followed exclusively for many years.

Under the management of Mr. Ijams, semi-mutes and others who seemed most capable of receiving such instruction were taught orally by the principal and by hearing teachers in connection with their manual work. In 1880 a regular teacher of articulation was employed, and since that time oral work has been systematically pursued, it being the purpose to conform, as nearly as practicable, to the approved methods of the combined system as defined by the Convention of American Instructors of the Deaf.

At present about one hundred pupils are taught in part by the manual method and in part orally, the remainder being instructed by the manual method exclusively.

Industrial Training.

Early in the history of the school instruction in shoe-making and cabinet-making was begun and continued satisfactorily until the suspension of the school in 1861.

After the reorganization, printing was substituted for cabinet-making and now the trades taught are printing and shoe-making.

A semi-monthly paper, "The Silent Observer," now in its seventeenth volume, is issued from the printing office.

In the shoe-shop the mending of shoes for all the pupils is done, indigent children are furnished with shoes, and the surplus product is generally sold in exchange for coal.

Many ex-pupils throughout the State who learned these trades in the school are earning comfortable support as shoe-makers and printers.

Efforts are now being made by the Trustees to secure means to enlarge the industrial department and to increase the number of trades taught.

Joseph H. Ijams, the sixth principal of the school, was called to take charge of the institution at a critical period of its history. He proved to be fully equal to the emergency; and to his intelligent and untiring labors is largely due the prosperity of the school since its reorganization in 1866.

In June, 1861, the sixteenth session of the school was closed about two weeks earlier than had been contemplated on account of the excitement then existing because of the civil war which had begun some two months before. The question of reopening the school in the following fall was held in abeyance by the Board of Trustees until August 3, 1861, when the school was suspended indefinitely and the services of all teachers and officers dispensed with.

From this time until September, 1865, the premises were in the hands of the contending armies. They were first occupied by the Confederate soldiers for about two years, and then by the Federal army for about the same length of time. The buildings were used for hospital purposes and the grounds as a camp. All books, papers, furniture, &c., were appropriated or destroyed, and only such things remained as were too heavy to be carried away and so strong as not to be easily broken, and these were in a terrible state of dilapidation and filth.

Of a fine forest only four oaks, a hickory, and a cherry were left standing. General Burnside's northern line of the fortifications of the city had extended through the grounds from Locust street to Broad street, and the entire premises afforded a striking object lesson of the desolations of war.

In May, 1866, the work of restoring the buildings and grounds was begun by the Trustees and steps taken by them looking to the reorganization of the school. This work was pursued diligently during the summer of 1866, and in October of that year Mr. Ijams was called to the principalship of the institution. He accepted the position and the following month entered with enthusiasm upon the arduous task of reorganizing and rebuilding the institution. His success was marked and rapid. The school was reopened December 3, 1866. Thirty-nine pupils were enrolled the first session with an increased attendance each succeeding term for ten years, more than one hundred pupils being received the fifth session. After sixteen years of most faithful and honored service Mr. Ijams died, on December 24th, 1882, universally loved and lamented. The present principal, Thomas L. Moses, who had taught in the school under Mr. Ijams for ten years preceding 1880, when he had retired to engage in business, was called to take charge of the school January 1st, 1883. He accepted the position and has served the institution as principal since that time.

Soon after the opening of the school in 1845, Mr. MacIntire found the services of a school-room assistant necessary, and Mr. Charles W. Myers, of Ohio, an educated deaf-mute, was chosen to be the first assistant teacher of the institution.

Mr. Myers proved to be a most acceptable and successful teacher, but his labors were soon ended. He passed away November 10th, 1849, greatly regretted and kindly remembered by all connected with the school, and his remains now rest in the institution burial plat, in Gray Cemetery this city.

Officers of the Institution.

The administrative officers of the school are—Principal teachers, physician, matrons, steward and house-keepers.

Officers of the Board.

The officers of the Board of Trustees are—President, treasurer, secretary and executive committee. The executive power of the Board is vested in this committee of three members who exercise general supervision as to the carrying out of the rules of the Board and audit monthly all accounts. The executive committee was organized January 8th, 1869, superseding all other committees of the Board.

The following is a list of those who have been officially connected with the institution:

PRESIDENTS OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

R. B. McMullen, W. D. Carnes, John H. Crozier, James C. Moses, John L. Moses, John M. Boyd.

TREASURERS.

D. R. McAnally, James H. Cowan, Joseph H. Walker, Henry Ault, Abner G. Jackson, Samuel B. Boyd, John S. Van Gilder.

SECRETARIES.

D. R. McAnally, J. P. N. Craighead, James Park, R. D. Journoimon, Joseph H. Ijams, Thomas L. Moses.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

John S. Van Gilder, Samuel B. Boyd, William K. Eckle, Samuel B. Ault, John McCoy.

PRINCIPALS OF THE SCHOOL.

Thomas MacIntire, 1845-1850; O. W. Morris, 1851-1853; H. S. Gillet, 1853-1856; A. G. Scott, 1856-1859; James Park, 1859-1861.

Joseph H. Ijams, 1866-1882; Thomas L. Moses, 1883-1893.

TEACHERS.

C. W. Myers, Charles Brown, G. E. Branson, H. S. Gillet, A. G. Scott, H. A. Goodrick, Laura S. Richardson, C. H. Bliss, James Fisher, D. C. Hommel, W. B. Sanders, J. A. Russell, L. Brasher, Georgiana Sanford, Margaret Bickford, Eliza Ijams, T. J. Barrier, W. O. Branum, James A. Lyons, Thomas L. Moses, Louis A. Houghton, William F. Pope, Jesse B. Pope, Bettie Davis, Kate R. Ogden (oral teacher), Lizzie Hill, Mary E. Branner, Mary H. Ijams, Helen A. Ferguson (oral teacher), Iva M. Boyd, Rilla L. Parker (oral teacher), Matt. R. Mann (teacher colored department).

PHYSICIANS.

Washington H. Lyon, W. J. Baker, J. P. Garvin, Frank A. Ramsey, C. W. Crozier, R. O. Currey, John M. Boyd.

MATRONS

M. E. MacIntire, Julia A. Comstock, S. Morris, A. J. Brooks, M. J. Corley, Anna Jones, E. L. Henderson, Bettie Davis, Sallie L. Jackson, Rhoda H. Mason (matron colored department).

STEWARDS.

J. P. N. Craighead, J. W. Gaut, G. Morehouse, E. C. Jones, Calvin A. Gurley.

HOUSE-KEEPERS.

P. C. Park, Anna Jones, Lizzie Gurley; Rhoda H. Mason (house-keeper colored department).

Societies.

On April 6th, 1890, the pupils of the school and the deaf-mutes living in Knoxville and vicinity, with some of the teachers and officers of the institution, organized a society which they called The Tennessee Deaf-Mute Helpers. The primary object of the organization was to raise money to aid Mrs. Mills in the establishment of schools for the deaf in China, and it has been maintained for the purpose of extending help wherever a field for such work should be presented. The practical application of the missionary idea was to many of the members of the society a new revelation. The thinking on the things of others, of the blessings which they themselves enjoy and of which thousand of others know nothing, seems to have given a new pleasure and to have made them realize in its fullness the truth, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

In some of the voluntary contributions and work of the members of the society, have been manifested some touching and beautiful instances of loving self-sacrifice. The effect of this society upon pupils and others has been most salutary, being helpful to the members of the society and to the institution as well.

The society holds monthly meetings in the chapel of the institution on the second Sabbath of each month, when a lecture is given and a collection taken.

In connection with this society, a sewing-circle has been organized called The Samuel Boyd Workers, in memory of an honored member of the Board of Trustees for thirty years and a life-long friend of the deaf.

This auxiliary society meets every Tuesday. Many articles of fancy work have been made and sold by the members for the benefit of the society. Two fairs have been held yielding more than one hundred dollars each. Mrs. Mamie Hahn is the president of this organization and the instructor in needle-work, and to her is chiefly due the credit of its success.

OFFICERS OF TENNESSEE DEAF-MUTE HELPERS.

President—W. O. Branum.

Vice-President—M. R. Mann.

Secretary—D. C. Watson.

Treasurer—C. F. Jackson.

OFFICERS OF THE SAMUEL BOYD WORKERS.

President—Mrs. Mamie Hahn.

Vice President—Mrs. Fannie Mann.

Treasurer—Mrs. Lizzie Gurley.

Secretary—Mrs. Hattie Houghton.

LITERARY AND SOCIAL SOCIETY.

The deaf-mutes in the vicinity of the school, with the older pupils, have organized a society for mutual improvement and social intercourse. This organization meets the first Saturday night of each month and has debates and addresses. The officers are :

President—D. C. Watson.

Vice President—J. W. Kennedy.

Secretary—Matt. R. Mann.

Treasurer—W. O. Branum.

The North Carolina Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind.

RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA,

1845-1893.

By E. McK. GOODWIN,
Advisory Superintendent of the North Carolina School.

NORTH CAROLINA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB AND THE BLIND.

IN 1843 the question of establishing a school for educating the deaf and dumb was agitated. Mr. W. D. Cooke, of Virginia, came to the State the same year and went into several counties giving exhibitions of the manner of teaching the deaf and dumb.

Governor Morehead urged the establishment by the State of such an institution. On January 12, 1845, a bill entitled "An act to provide for the education and maintenance of poor and indigent deaf-mutes and blind persons in the State" was passed. The sum of $5,000 annually was appropriated.

The act placed this fund under the supervision of the "president and directors of the library board." The board was composed of His Excellency Governor Graham, ex officio, president of the board, and Weston R. Gales, David Stone, Charles Manly, and R. S. Myers.

The board secured a building on Hillsboro street, and the school was organized by the appointment of Wm. D. Cooke, A. M., principal. On the first day of May, 1845, the school opened with seven pupils, and during the session seventeen entered.

NORTH CAROLINA INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB AND THE BLIND.

At the session of the general assembly of North Carolina in 1847 an act was passed to provide for the erection of a suitable building for the comfortable accommodations of deaf-mutes and blind persons in the State. The act appropriated only $5,000, but provided that the surplus out of the annual appropriations, amounting to ten thousand ($10,000), be placed in the hands of the board.

On the 14th day of April, 1849, the corner-stone of the main building, on Coswell square, was laid by the Grand Lodge of Masons, under the direction of William F. Collins, M. W. G. M., after which an address was made by Rev. Samuel S. Bryan, of New Berne, N. C.

In 1851 Mr. John Kelly, of Orange county, N. C., bequeathed the sum of six thousand dollars to aid in the education of indigent deaf-mutes. The will provided that only the interest accruing on this fund should be used.

Mr. Cooke continued principal till 1860, at which time he was succeeded by W. J. Palmer, who remained till 1869, when he went to Belleville, Canada, to assume the superintendency of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb. The school was kept open during the entire time of the Civil War, although the means for maintenance were very limited. Mr. John Nichols, who had no professional experience with the education of the deaf, succeeded Mr. Palmer as principal. In 1871 Mr. Nichols was succeeded by Mr. S. F. Tomlinson. He had no knowledge or experience in such work. But Mr. Tomlinson remained only about two years, being succeeded in 1873 by Mr. Nichols, whom he had so recently succeeded. These changes were made on political grounds. About this time the Governor appointed a board, among whom was one negro who could not sign his own name. Under such management were our unfortunate children placed for their physical, mental, moral, and spiritual instruction.

It will be remembered that formerly our Institution owned and operated a well-equipped printing-office and bookbindery. At one time the Institution did the printing for the State printer. The American Annals for the Deaf was printed in this office, and the Institution published a paper, "The Deaf-Mute Casket." The office had costly appliances for printing raised type, and printed several works for the blind. But during the administration of politicians the printing appliances were sold and the building torn down. A costly press was sold to a foundry as "old iron." The same press was afterwards purchased from the foundry and is now in use in one of the leading printing houses of the city. It appears that the board thought it unjust for the deaf to compete against the printing houses and thereby take some of the public patronage of the State printer.

In 1877 Mr. H. A. Gudger was elected principal, he having had no professional experience in the education of the deaf. But he devoted his energy and attention to the work and became conversant with the sign-language and methods of instruction. It was during Mr. Gudger's administration that the articulation department was introduced. Notwithstanding all these changes that the Institution underwent and the inexperience of the chief officers, it continued to grow in numbers.

Mr. Gudger remained as superintendent till January, 1883, when he resigned and was succeeded by Mr. W. J. Young, who had been principal teacher in the blind department for more than twenty years. When Mr. Gudger resigned there were 193 pupils on his roll, and the number has steadily increased, till now our last report shows 299.

W. J. YOUNG, M. A.

The North Carolina Institution has furnished to the profession some prominent teachers who have been honored in other States. Mr. W. J. Palmer was called to the responsible position of principal of the Ontario Institution at Belleville, Canada, and Mr. Coleman also went to the same Institution as teacher, where he still remains in the profession. Mr. Grow, the Maryland school, first "taught the young idea how to shoot" in North Carolina. Mr. D. C. Dudley spent his youth and young manhood in the North Carolina Institution, from whence he went to the Kentucky Institution, and afterward filled so acceptably the superintendency of the Colorado School for the Deaf and the Blind. Mr. Hill, superintendent of the West Virginia Institution, gained his first experience in North Carolina. Mr. John E. Ray, the efficient and progressive superintendent of the Colorado Institution, spent ten years teaching the deaf in his native State. It might not be out of place for North Carolina also to claim Mr. J. A. Tillinghast, now in the Colorado Institution.

The colored department has furnished teachers to the South Carolina, Georgia, and Texas Institutions.

In 1868 the general assembly made provisions for the education of the colored deaf and dumb and blind children of the State. North Carolina was the first State to provide an institution for the colored race. The colored department opened on the 4th of January, 1869, with 26 pupils. Mr. John J. Turner was in charge of this department for one session, when Mr. Z. W. Haynes was elected. He taught in this department for twenty years, and was removed to the white department in 1890.

The Institution for the Colored is a commodious, well arranged building, more suitable for its purpose than the buildings for the white department. The colored department is under the same general management as the white department, and enjoys the same care and privileges. This department has been under the immediate charge of W. F. Debnam since 1874.

An act of the general assembly of North Carolina creating and establishing the new North Carolina School for the Deaf and Dumb was passed and ratified March 7, 1891.

The School is located at Morganton, in Burke County. This location is just east of the Blue Ridge, and is surrounded on three sides by the mountains, and commands good views of South Mountains, Table Rock, and Grandfather Mountains.

The first brick in the building was laid by two deaf children, Maggie LeGrand and Robert Miller, May 16, 1892.

The building, designed by A. G. Bauer, architect, is a brick structure, three stories high (above basement), and is two hundred and fifty-six feet long, contains one hundred and fifty rooms, and will accommodate three hundred children.

The building is modelled after the "Advanced" building of the Pennsylvania Institution. It will be furnished with modern appliances and equipments.

The Institution for the Deaf and Dumb and the Blind at Raleigh has had very limited facilities for educating the deaf, caring for less than one hundred white mutes, with perhaps four hundred growing up in ignorance in the State.

In addition to the regular school course, there will be taught several industrial trades and arts—printing, tailoring, carpentry, free-hand and industrial drawing, shoemaking, broom and mattress making, and practical farming, gardening, and dairying. The School owns and will operate a farm of two hundred and thirteen acres. A very large per centum of our children are the sons and daughters of farmers, and our facilities to train the boys in the practical part of agriculture will be very good, and we can thus prepare them for their life-work.

The following gentlemen were appointed a board of directors :

Hon. M. L. REED,	Baltimore.
Hon. R. A. GRIER,	Charlotte.
Hon. J. J. LONG,	Eoka.
Hon. B. F. AYCOCK,	Fremont.
Col. S. McD. TATE,	Morganton.
Prof. M. H. HOLT,	Oak Ridge.
Mr. N. B. BROUGHTON,	Raleigh.

The board of directors met in Morganton and organized April 22, 1891. At this meeting E. McK. Goodwin, of the Institution for the Deaf and the Blind at Raleigh, was elected advisory superintendent, and Mr. Jno. A. Dickson was elected secretary and treasurer. Mr. Dickson resigned, and at a subsequent meeting Capt. Geo. L. Phifer was elected to fill the vacancy. Col. S. McD. Tate having been appointed State treasurer, Dr. P. L. Murphy was appointed a director.

At the recent session of the general assembly a stringent law was passed requiring professional experience in the training and management of deaf-mutes for eligibility to the superintendency of the School.

It is hoped that the building will be completed by the first of November, 1893.

HISTORY
OF THE
ILLINOIS INSTITUTION
FOR THE

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.

OF THE

ILLINOIS INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB.

During the year 1838 Hon. Orville H. Browning, a resident of Quincy, Ill., while making a journey by steamboat on the Mississippi river, met an educated deaf mute gentleman who interested him very much not only in himself but in the subject of deaf mute education. Mr. Browning, a man of legal talent, was abreast of the times in all public educational and humane enterprises. Indeed he was rather ahead of his times in such causes. The interest once aroused in his mind on this subject did not abate. He at once entered into correspondence with Rev. J. A. Jacobs, Principal of the Kentucky Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, asking his advice as to the best method of procedure to establish an institution in Illinois. Mr. Browning, being a man whom his fellow citizens delighted to honor (he was often in the public service in various capacities as Congressman, U. S. Senator and member of President Lincoln's Cabinet), was a member of the Senate of the State of Illinois at the session of the General Assembly which convened at the capital (Vandalia) in December, 1838. He prepared and presented at that session a bill which became the charter of what is now known as the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, though it was at first styled an asylum, as was common in those days. Mr. Browning's bill very clearly shows that he had the correct estimate of the character of such an institution as purely educational; and that the deaf mute from being an infant in law might, by educational instrumentalities, be advanced to the position of honorable and responsible manhood. That one having this just and proper conception should consent to style the proposed corporation an asylum seems strange. But this may be in a measure explained by the consideration that in practical affairs it is often necessary to defer to the unintelligent views that prevail in society. There has always been and still remains a disposition to regard institutions for the deaf as asylums. We can understand why this should be so in case of the earliest institutions for them, as previously they were held as little better than human brutes on whom the contempt and jeers of coarse minds were too frequently visited, or as infants incapable of rational acts, so that they did, indeed, require an asylum for their better protection, and to withhold them from the perpetration of unreasonable conduct that their ignorance often impelled them to. An uneducated adult deaf mute is at once a pitiable and a dangerous character. Absolute solitude is one of the most dreadful conditions to which one can be subjected. A poet has sung

Oh solitude, where are the charms
That sages have seen in thy face?
Better dwell in the midst of alarms
Than reign in this horrible place.

Alexander Selkirk on the island of Juan Fernandez was scarcely more solitary than is an uneducated deaf person. The consequence is that his ceaseless, unintelligent introspection with the many taunts he receives, in time brings him to the verge of lunacy, ferocity or brutishness. As children they are as lovely and interesting as any others, but as adults they have only the infant mind, with manly passions and brute strength. Were there no schools for their education, the asylum for their protection and restraint would, indeed, be of the first importance. This was always obvious even to the careless thinker. Hence it is easy to perceive that when the first movements were proposed for their amelioration, the asylum idea should be first and uppermost in the public mind. Though scarcely more than twenty years had elapsed since the first efforts to instruct the deaf and dumb had been made in America, yet Mr. Browning in his bill showed a conception of the nature of the work to be done quite in advance of the popular idea. Section third of his bill says: "The object of said corporation shall be to promote by all proper and possible means, the intellectual, moral and physical culture of that unfortunate portion of the community, who, by the mysterious dispensation of Providence, have been born, or by disease become deaf, and, of course, dumb; and by a judicious and well adopted course of education, to reclaim them from their lonely and cheerless condition, restore them to the rank of their species, and fit them for the discharge of the social and domestic duties of life."

Mr. Browning's bill passed the Senate without a dissenting vote, and passed the House of Representatives by a large majority and was approved by Governor Thos. Carlin, February 23, 1839. For the support of the institution the bill appropriated one quarter per cent. of the interest upon the whole amount of the school, college and seminary fund; thus most intimately connecting the new institution with the school system of the State, since its maintenance came from the same funds from which the public schools derived theirs. The theory was that the deaf mute children of the State had as good a right to a portion of school funds as those who were more favored. Certainly a most enlightened view.

In securing the passage of this bill Judge Browning was promptly assisted by the Senators and Representatives from Morgan county, among whom were Hon. William Thomas, Hon. Newton Cloud, and Gen. John J. Hardin. Gen. Hardin died on the battle-field of Buena Vista. Messrs. Thomas and Cloud were fast friends of the institution till far advanced in life. Never has a nobler type of honesty and magnanimity been in public life than Rev. Newton Cloud. When very far advanced in life as a member of the House of Representatives, a patriarch among the younger members, who delighted to honor him, he still gave to the institution his best service, and to his dying day delighted to visit it and rejoice in its growth and success.

The first Board of Directors of the institution named in the act of incorporation comprises a galaxy of brilliant names in the history of Illinois. Thomas Carlin, Thomas Cole, Joseph Duncan, each at different times governors of the State; Samuel D. Lockwood, Samuel H. Treat, Cyrus Walker, eminent jurists and judges of the Supreme Court; William Thomas, repeatedly a member of the Legislature, and many years a member of the Board; Julian M. Sturtevant, President of Illinois College, and one of the foremost educators of the State; Otway Wilkinson, Dennis Rockwell, George M. Chambers, and Matthew Stacy, men who to the close of life enjoyed the highest confidence of their fellow citizens. In this connection there is but one cause of regret, which is that the name of Hon. Orville H. Browning does not appear. No name might more fittingly have appeared. But the act was drawn by Judge Browning, and the modesty that accompanies merit caused him, while naming others to omit himself. Strange that some one did not move to insert his name in the bill; but though never actively and officially connected with the institution, he never ceased to entertain for it the liveliest interest as was manifested by his sending to it valuable public documents while he remained in public life, and by his earnest inquiries concerning its work until his earthly career terminated. Judge Browning's complete disinterestedness in the subject is manifested by his naming another place for the location of the institution than the city of his own residence. The best and most convenient location was the one he desired, and as Jacksonville seemed in those days (preceding railroads) to combine most advantages, he named that city in the act, only stipulating that the citizens should provide a site comprising not of less than five acres of land. The omission of his name is the more to be regretted since we may hope that had he been one of the Board of Directors seven years would not have elapsed before the school would have been opened for pupils as was the case.

On the 29th of June, 1839, a majority of the directors named in the Act of Incorporation met in Jacksonville and proceeded to organize. Gen. Joseph Duncan was elected President, Samuel D. Lockwood, Vice President, Otway Wilkinson, Treasurer, and George M. Chambers, Secretary. Gen. Duncan was a most suitable man to be placed at the head of any educational enterprise, having, in addition to his experience in Congress and as a general in the Black Hawk war, had the honor of being the author of the first school law of the State of Illinois. He was a man of large views, of noble impulses and public spirit. Gen. Duncan continued President of the Board until his demise, when he was succeeded by Col. James Dunlap, July 1. 1845. Col. Dunlap had been elected a member of the Board February 16, 1842, vice Thomas Carlin, resigned. He had, at the incipency of the enterprise, shown a deep interest in the institution, having made the largest subscription toward the purchase of land required by the Act of Incorporation. He was continued in the Presidency of the Board as long as he remained a member of it. His interest in the institution continued to the close of his life. One of the last acts of his life was on his death-bed, to send for the superintendent of the institution and talk with him upon matters connected with the institution. Col. Dunlap was a man who devised liberal things and undertook large enterprises. There have been but few, if any, more public spirited citizens in Illinois than Col. James Dunlap.

With such men as have been named in the Board of Directors it seems strange to us at this distance of time that two years and a half elapsed before a site had been secured for the institution, and that seven years should pass before any deaf-mutes had been admitted to its halls, or any instruction given them, and then to only four pupils. But it is due to the good men of those times to remember that the grand scheme of internal improvements which had been inaugurated in 1835 had collapsed, leaving the state overwhelmed with debt, its bonds and state warrants far below par, and hard times prevailing with a severity of which the active generation of to-day have no knowledge. The first and uppermost thought of the citizen then was to extinguish the debt of the state, and of the people to secure their homes. It is also true that a great system of State Institutions, such as now form so important a part of every State government, was then unknown.

This was the first institution established by the State for the alleviation of misfortune, and upon it fell the task of arousing the public mind to the practicability and importance of public beneficence, and of the extent of the demand for it, as well as the unavoidable outlay necessary in its prosecution. Institutions for the education of the deaf and dumb have this distinction in almost all States of the union. The American Asylum (for the education of the deaf and dumb) at Hartford, Connecticut, opened in 1817, was the precursor of all those great institutions for the Deaf and Dumb, the Blind, the Insane and the Feeble-Minded, that form so large a department of the government of all the States of the Union, for whose support, in some States, more than half of the public expenditure is made.

In view of these facts it is not at all strange that, in the third decade of this century, and only twenty years after the first institution had been established in the old and well peopled east, that a new and young State should proceed in a manner that now seems to us, in the light of seventy years' experience, quite slow. But, though the progress of the first few years was slow, it was determined. That such a humane work should be commenced immediately on its suggestion, though at a time of most distressing financial depression, is greatly to the credit of the men of those days. It seems to one reviewing it like a turning away from the wild speculation of a few years before, when, as a historian of the State says, "the fever of speculation rapidly advanced in intensity until the fever developed into mania, reason was dethroned, and the folly of inflation held high carnival," to the more honorable work of caring for those who could not care for themselves, in practical obedience to the Divine command, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." Obedience to the Divine command was speedily followed with the blessing of Providence, and the State of Illinois at once entered upon a career of prosperity, slow indeed at first, but unremitting in growth and increasing in rapidity that is the marvel of the world. "Them that honor me I will honor" has been shown to apply to the State as well as to individuals. The State can in no more forceful manner acknowledge the Creator than by beneficence to the needy and helpless.

There are two beneficent results accruing from the instruction of the deaf and dumb by the body politic. First, to its subjects who are elevated to a plane of enlightenment in which they can enjoy the noblest pleasures of family ties and social life, and secondly, to the State which thus secures for itself intelligent, self-reliant citizens instead of ignorant dependents who, otherwise for the term of their natural lives, would be an incubus upon society in some form. It costs less to educate the deaf child, maintaining him for a few years, than to care for and support him for several decades as a man but little elevated above a brute. The sum of money expended by the people of Illinois in the support of its Institution for the Deaf and Dumb is large in the aggregate and is easily computed, but what the expenditures by society for its beneficiaries would otherwise have amounted to, being made in innumerable driblets, no one can compute with certainty, but certain it is that the sum of all these would far exceed the former.

Let it not be supposed that between the incorporation of the institution in February, 1839, and its opening in February, 1846, that the Board of Directors had been unmindful of their trust. There were frequent meetings of the Board and its Prudential Committee during those years. A building, then deemed ample for many generations, was erected and paid for. To effect this result in times of financial depression, so severe that Auditor's warrants were sold as low as thirty cents on the dollar, was a matter of such difficulty as the present generation knows nothing of, when the State Treasury contains a surplus, the State debt is all paid, and holders of its bonds refuse to present them for payment. The building erected was eighty-six feet long, fifty feet wide, three stories and an attic high. The writer has been told that by some it was then regarded as far beyond all the requirements of the next hundred years, and sometimes derisively styled the State's folly, so little was the demand for such an institution understood. Not a vestige of that building remained after thirty years. Could the men of that day, with prophet's ken, have looked down the vista of only forty years upon the great and beautiful structures that now succeed theirs, it would have seemed to them that they were viewing the baseless fabrics of a dream. But in their day they planned and labored as hard as we have since, and practiced far more self-denial than has fallen to our lot. During the summer of 1845 eight rooms of the building were finished. With these the Board of Directors felt that they would be able to open the school. They were now brought to the most serious and important duty that could come to them. In all that had thus far devolved upon them in their respective spheres of life the members of the Board were as wise and as sagacious as any body of a similar number that could be gathered in Illinois or any other State. They were, as already seen, men eminent at the forum, in the halls of legislation, in agriculture, the pulpit and the arenas of trade. They were fully cognizant of the necessity of the greatest prudence in the selection of a principal whose success or failure in the conduct of the institution would make effective or paralized all they had thus far done, thus bringing credit or mortification to them. There is probably no position in society in which a man more surely requires technical skill, based upon years of actual experience, than does the position of superintendent or principal of an institution for the education of the deaf and dumb. The gentleman who first, in America, undertook this peculiar work, prepared himself by long previous study, investigation and work in institutions of foreign lands, and then, not until he succeeded in inducing a man of still longer experience in a European institution to assist him in his new work, did he actively enter upon it. The first instructors of the deaf and dumb in America were all college bred men of the most brilliant attainments, and of ability that would, and did in some cases, achieve success and distinction in the most exalted walks of life; some in college faculties, some in divinity, some in law, and some in authorship. No profession—for the instruction of the deaf is as truly a profession as law, medicine, theology or art—was ever inaugurated by a better class of men or style of mind than was this. Its prestine dignity it has maintained as well as any other profession. That some individuals have been improperly admitted to it is not to be denied. Still more regretful is the fact that there have been foisted upon it some incompetent and unsuitable persons as a reward of party service. But this has not, in any case, been by the influence of members of the profession, but in spite of them. Repeatedly has the high-toned and expert instructor felt the tinge of shame and indignation when he has seen his loved and honorable profession made a shuttle-cock to be bandied back and forth by party heelers as though it was legitimate party spoils. If the “boodler” could be of some service the case would not be so shameful, but he not only can do nothing in his new sphere, but he is actually an obstacle who can only strut around, hold down an office chair and draw a salary he has not earned. To direct the benefactions of a generous people, appropriated by them for a noble purpose to such use, lacks but little, if any, of the essential spirit of knavery and robbery, even though it is done under the forms of law. It is impossible to conceive of anything more absurd than to place in charge of a company of youth, to direct their morals, manners, instruction, and look after their welfare, one who cannot even ask after their ailments in sickness, or give them a word of comfort in trouble. This iniquity, it is due to say, has not often been practiced anywhere, and never in connection with this institution.

The Board of Trustees have from the first recognized and acted upon the principle that so sacred a work as superintending such an institution should be entrusted only to one who was versed in the work of instructing the deaf, who could communicate with them in their own language since they cannot use ours.

Before the building was ready for occupancy the Board had appointed a committee to seek for a thoroughly competent man to take charge of the new institution at its opening. Extensive correspondence was opened with institutions in other States with the result that Mr. Thomas Officer, who five years preceding had been engaged as a teacher in the Ohio institution, was elected principal. It is quite surprising that the records of the Board and the reports of the institution make very little reference to Mr. Officer. So far as they are concerned it would only appear that he was employed at a meagre salary, and after a period of nine years withdrew from the institution. The writer, as his successor and from some personal acquaintance, and from inquiry of his coadjutors and comrades both in the Ohio and in this institution is prepared to say that the Board made a most happy and fortunate selection for their first principal. Mr. Officer was well posted in his profession to which he was an ornament, was a good teacher, a fine executive, with pleasant, genial bearing, eminently becoming the Christian gentleman. He had an urbane and winning manner that ingratiated him instantly with all well disposed persons and soon fixed him in their confidence. While the earlier reports of the institution after his advent make very little reference to Mr. Officer, the subjects they discuss and the manner of their discussion, is so different from those preceding them as to clearly show that they are inspired by a mind such as previous reports have not felt the influence of. That mind could have been no other than Mr. Officer himself, though his name was not attached to them. In March, 1849, Mr. Officer was elected secretary of the Board, and in that capacity prepared and signed the last three reports of the Board before the time of his departure from the institution. This statement will readily explain the fact of so little reference to him in the printed reports of the institution.

Mr. Officer arrived in October, 1845. Necessary arrangements for opening the school were made, such as providing furniture and the appointment of a steward, and the first day of December fixed upon as the date for opening the school, notice of which was published in the newspapers throughout the State. The day for opening came but no deaf-mutes came with it. Accordingly, Mr. Officer started out on a search for them. In the course of several weeks twelve were found whose parents promised to send them, but at the designated time they failed to put in an appearance. However, by the last of January, 1846, four had reached the institution, and in the month of February, seven years after the passage of the bill establishing the institution, it began its noble work. Accessions to the number of pupils were made during the next spring so that during the first term there were nine deaf-mutes admitted. This seems to us now a small beginning, but other institutions had before this been opened with small numbers; the American Asylum with but six; the Pennsylvania with seven; the Ohio Institution with three, only six more during its entire first year; the Tennessee Institution with nine, and the Indiana Institution with six. Hence the directors, nothing daunted, sent out on a tour of search the superintendent during the summer vacation. His success in securing promises of attendance were so encouraging that an additional teacher was employed for the new term which was to open on the 17th of September. During the fall and early winter there were five accessions, so that in its second term fourteen pupils were enrolled, some being quite tardy in their arrival. In their report made at this time, December, 1846, the directors state to the General Assembly that if the means to complete the building were supplied they could also admit the deaf-mutes of Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas and Wisconsin to a participation in its advantages. Except Arkansas, all of these States did, in a few years, send deaf children to this institution for instruction.

A regulation that seriously impeded the growth of the institution in its early history was one which had a similar paralyzing effect on institutions in other States, namely, a provision that required parents of deaf children who could not command the means to pay for their tuition and board to make an affidavit to that effect before a justice of the peace who should then certify to that fact. In recommending the repeal of this provision the directors say: "The only effect in requiring these certificates, so far as we can see, is to deprive many of those who are actually too poor to pay for the advantages of the institution. Many parents, though barely able to provide food and clothing for their families, cannot bring themselves to submit to the disagreeable task of going before justices of the peace and asking for certificates of poverty." During the year 1846 earnest efforts were made to ascertain the number, names and residences of the deaf and dumb within the State by personal exploration of the State, circulars of inquiry to census commissioners of 1845, and to clergymen of various denominations, by which means the names of one hundred and sixty were obtained of whom but six or eight were in circumstances to pay for their support at the school. These efforts in time bore fruit, though probably not as soon as was expected.

In the fourth biennial report, December, 1848, only three years after the opening of the school, the directors find that the building that in their first report they had stated would answer for many years to come, and in their third report had intimated its adequacy for the deaf-mutes, not only of Illinois, but also for those of Missouri, Iowa, Arkansas and Wisconsin, was now quite crowded, though only sixty pupils had been received, ten of whom were from Missouri and one from Iowa. They accordingly applied to the General Assembly for an appropriation of ten thousand dollars to extend the buildings by the erection of a main building to which the existing structure should be a wing. For most other purposes the building then in use would have been adequate for a much larger number of persons than it then served. Such a multiplicity of things must be done for the deaf and dumb in the course of their education that they require more room than any other class of people, Separate provision must be made in sitting-room, dining-room, bed-room, school-room, chapel and shop so that at the very infancy of this institution for each one six separate and distinct provisions had to be made, beside those provisions which can be used in common such as kitchen, bath rooms and lavatories and laundry.

With the coming of new classes at the opening of each school year it became necessary to employ additional instructors. At the outset the directors clearly determined that their policy should be to employ only competent instructors with previous experience in this peculiar work. The principle that had governed them in the selection of a principal they adopted as a governing one in the appointment of subordinate officers. In the fourth biennial report, the second after the opening of the school, the directors wisely say, "In the employment of instructors the directors have endeavored as far as possible to engage none but those possessing the very best qualifications, and it is their design to continue in future to act upon the same principle. The difficulties to be encountered in teaching the deaf and dumb are such that persons possessing even the best common education could be of little service. We deem it, therefore, of the highest importance that the instructors be men possessing a thorough education." No profession or vocation in life more seriously demands skillful training and protracted experience than the profession of deaf mute instruction, and yet it seems impossible to make many people understand this. No one would seriously think of placing a piece of fine goods in the hands of a novice to make a garment, yet the importunities sometimes made to place a mere tyro in charge of a class of children to practice on their minds for a term of years until he acquires skill would be amusing were they not astounding. It is a pitiful scene to witness the blunders of a novice in his efforts to instruct a class of deaf mutes. The intentions are good and the well-meant efforts are the best he can do. If the loss resulting from his mistakes was visited upon the tyro it might be patiently tolerated, but, alas, it falls upon the deaf mute child whose golden moments are being wasted. A thoroughly educated young person with a natural aptitude for teaching can not become fully equipped for this work in a shorter time than seven years, and even then will, if honest, confess that he has but just entered into acquaintance with the profession and is but beginning to get a view of its philosophy and scope and the immense difficulties it involves. The loss of a capable teacher is a calamity to an institution, while to gain one is a stroke of good fortune indeed. This institution has been compelled to train and induct some young persons into this work who, in process of time, have become thoroughly efficient, but whenever able to do so, has drawn them from elsewhere. Upon the institutions in ten States we have at various times made drafts.

When the school was first opened the policy was adopted of entrusting the domestic department to a steward, allowing him a stipulated sum for boarding each pupil. This plan was continued for two years, when, being found unsatisfactory, it was discontinued and the steward was made an agent of the Board. He was, however, continued an independent officer amenable only to the Board. This arrangement makes an institution a double-headed affair, in which there will inevitably be conflict and misunderstanding. It has been tried in most, if not quite all public institutions with the same results. It has seemed almost as inevitable for an institution to pass through this experience as for children to be attacked with colic, measles and whooping-cough. It is a principle that everywhere else is universally condemned as subversive of order and system. As well undertake to wage a war with two generals to an army, or send a ship on a voyage with two captains, as to undertake to successfully operate a public institution with two heads by whatever titles they may be called. This plan was followed in this institution for eight years with such friction that the Legislature by legal enactment, regardless of the Board of Directors, abolished the office of steward and placed the institution under the sole management of one head. Had this sensible and reasonable plan been entered upon at the outset a vast amount of unnecessary animosity and wrangling would have been avoided. This action of the General Assembly was upon a recommendation of a special committee appointed to inquire into the difficulties and troubles that had so long disturbed the institution. This was a joint committee from the Senate and House of Representatives, of which Senator Robert Boal, then of Marshall county, but later of Peoria, Illinois, was chairman. Dr. Boal was soon after appointed a member of the Board of Directors, which relation he sustained for seventeen years, part of the time being President of the Board. Dr. Boal's influence on the institution was most enlightened, helpful and progressive.

The subject of industrial training secured immediate attention upon the opening of the institution. The pupils when admitted in those days had already become stout youth and were well able to perform physical labor. The boys were required to pass a portion of each day in doing such chores as sawing, splitting and carrying wood, and work in the garden. The girls were taught various kinds of housework and sewing, but there was soon developed the necessity for trades as a department of systematic instruction. The first teacher who was permanently employed, Mr. Nathan M. Totten, while a pupil of the New York Institution had acquired some knowledge of cabinet-making. In May, 1848, the Board purchased an inferior frame structure which they hauled upon the grounds of the institution. In the following month Mr. Totten, in addition to his labors in the school-room began the instruction of male pupils in the cabinet-maker's trade. About this time some sporadic work was done by pupils at shoe-making, but not till October, 1857, was the instruction in this trade systematic and regular. The directors in their fifth report, December, 1859, speaking on the importance of trades in an institution for the deaf and dumb speak so wisely that it is fancied a more lucid and satisfactory statement of the whole question has seldom, if ever been made.

"The more we see of the practical workings of the plan of connecting manual labor with mental and moral instruction, of calling into exercise the physical energies, and directing them to some definite and useful object, while the intellect and heart are being trained, the more we are convinced of its importance and practicability. Without some regular employment, requiring bodily exercise, many neglect to take such an amount of daily exercise as is necessary to a healthy condition of the body, or to a vigorous exercise of the mind. Although at times the ordinary games and sports of youth, in which the deaf and dumb engage with as much zest as others, would seem to afford an abundance of healthy exercise, yet these all in turn become wearisome to the most lively and playful, and frequently for weeks together they seem to take no pleasure in them. This want of exercise superinduces listlessness, low spirits, discontent, dissatisfaction, and other kindred feelings, which are utterly incompatible with success in the great object for which they are assembled together.

“Another advantage gained by the connection of manual with intellectual labor is, that there is much less liability to disturbances and irregularities of conduct among the pupils after school hours. This, among a large number of youth, is a matter of no small consequence. Possessing, as mutes do, all the varieties of disposition as exhibited by others, it would be unreasonable to expect harmony and good conduct among so many, if left without regular employment during the hours necessarily devoted to exercise and recreation. Frequent disputes and difficulties would unavoidably arise. Furnishing them with some stated occupation during a portion of those hours is the best security against these difficulties. No serious disturbance has ever occurred among the pupils at the Illinois institution, and it is chiefly to be attributed to the fact that they are thus occupied.

“But the chief advantage remains yet to be mentioned. It is that the pupils thus acquire habits of industry, which are of great value to them in after years. In comparison with this it is a small matter that a few dollars are saved annually to the institution by the labor of the pupils. The attainment of this object would, we think, justify the outlay of considerable sums, if necessary; for unless such habits are formed before leaving school, it is greatly to be feared that, in view of the difficulties which a mute has to encounter in getting employment, many of them will lack the energy and tact necessary in providing for themselves. Failing in this they will lose their self-respect and will be too apt to become wandering beggars, living upon the charities of others. Wherever there is a mute in the family it almost universally calls forth the tenderest sympathies of the parents. Feeling that they cannot reason with it as they can with their other children, about right and propriety, they too often allow it to grow up almost entirely without restraint, requiring of it no more labor than seems agreeable to its own feelings. If the habits of indolence which they thus form are allowed to continue during the whole period of their attendance upon school, by the time that they are ready to go forth from the institution, these habits will have become so fixed that there will be little prospect of their ever being entirely eradicated. When, moreover, it is considered that the pursuits upon which a large majority of them must depend for earning a livelihood are of that class which requires considerable physical exertion, we cannot but regard manual labor, and the training to habits of industry, as a necessary part of the system of education which should be adopted in all such institutions.

“In the accomplishment of this object, shops are an indispensable requisite. Without them it would be impossible to furnish many of the pupils with regular employment, and besides, their energy should, as far as practicable, be directed to the acquirement of some useful occupation. The aim and purpose of every institution for the deaf and dumb should be to prepare the pupils in every respect—physically as well as mentally and morally—for becoming good and useful citizens, supporting themselves by their own exertions, without being dependent upon the community at large or their friends. To this end not only should industrious habits be formed, but opportunity should be given for acquiring practical knowledge and skill in some honest and useful calling. An institution which makes no such provision fails to discharge an important duty which it owes to the deaf and dumb. For, however, good their education may be in other respects when they go forth from the institution, unless they have also acquired some considerable knowledge of a trade, experience proves that few tradesmen will take the pains necessary to impart that knowledge to them. The difficulty does not arise from any want of aptness on the part of the deaf and dumb to learn trades; on the contrary, their ingenuity is proverbial; but it arises solely from the inconvenience which necessarily attends the communication of ideas on the part of those unacquainted with the sign language. This makes it important that trades be taught them at the institution, where, through the medium of their own natural language, instruction in mechanics can be imparted to them as readily as any other kind of instruction.

“As there is the same diversity of talent and taste among mutes as among hearing and speaking people, it is important that several trades be established at the institution. Those who cannot succeed in one trade may be found to excel in another, and it would be well to give them an opportunity to make a selection from several pursuits.”

In their fourth report the directors made two important recommendations to the General Assembly, which, by an act approved February 3, 1849, were carried into effect. The first, changing the name of the corporation from the Illinois Asylum for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, to the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, and the second, providing that section 7 of the act of incorporation which required certificates of poverty from all who were unable to pay tuition and board, should be repealed, and that the institution be made free to all within the bounds of the State. The Board, in urging the latter change, state: "The only effect of requiring these certificates, as far as we can see, is to deprive many of those who are actually too poor to pay, of the advantages of the institution. Many parents, though barely able to provide food and raiment for their families, cannot bring themselves to the disagreeable task of going before two justices of the peace and asking for certificates of poverty."

Funds for the support of the institution and for making improvements were supplied first by a provision of the act of incorporation which set apart one quarter per cent. of interest upon the whole amount of the school, college and seminary fund, for the use of the institution, and secondly, by an act approved February 23, 1847, making a permanent appropriation of three thousand dollars per annum for the same purpose, and thirdly, by special appropriation for specific purposes until the year 1851. In the meantime, the Illinois State Hospital for the Insane, and the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Blind, had come into existence and were sustained by a special tax which gave to them an assured stability very desirable, and one which this institution very greatly needed for its more confident progress. The vicissitudes that always attend an appropriation before a legislature are seriously distracting, not only to a board of trustees and superintendent, but also to all subordinate officers who cannot be oblivious to the fact that an oversight or a clerical error may subject them for two years to weighty inconvenience, if not to the entire loss of the means of subsistence; and to the pupils also, who are well aware that the entire course of their life may be changed to their very great and lifelong disadvantage and perhaps discomfiture. It is as true of deaf mutes as of others, that for the best results of school work their minds require the absence of distracting anxieties and disturbing influences. It is entirely an error to suppose that the pupils of such an institution take no thought upon these subjects. Indeed no other class of students enter more fully into all that affects their instructors as well as themselves. The directors in the fifth report presented this subject to the General Assembly and recommended that the institution thereafter should be sustained by special tax.

"The directors would respectfully urge upon your consideration the propriety of establishing the institution upon a more permanent basis. Although the institution for the deaf and dumb was the pioneer of the three noble state charities amongst us, yet, while the other two have a permanent fund upon which to rely for their support from year to year, this institution is obliged to solicit special appropriations at every session of the legislature. We have no cause to complain of any want of liberality on the part of the legislature towards the institution; on the contrary, we are proud in being able to say that no appeal has ever been made by the institution but what has been met by a hearty response from both branches of the General Assembly. Still we cannot but feel that there is a degree of uncertainty and instability necessarily connected with this method of supporting the institution, which is a disadvantage to it. We would therefore beg leave to recommend that the institution be supported either by an appropriation which shall be annual and sufficient to cover at least the ordinary expenses, or by a special tax, as is the case with the other two institutions. Of the two methods proposed, the Board would prefer the latter, as it would relieve them of the responsibility and embarrassment connected with the disposal of so large an amount of auditor's warrants, and as the institution would thereby become more extensively known throughout the State than by any means of publication within the power of the Board."

This subject was favorably considered by the General Assembly, and an act approved April 18, 1857, provided:

"That for the purpose of defraying the ordinary expenses of the Illinois Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, a separate fund is hereby created and established, in addition to the fund provided for in the act of incorporation, to be denominated, 'The fund for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb,' which shall consist of one-sixth of a mill upon each dollar's worth of taxable property in the State, to be taken and deducted from the tax of two mills on the dollar, authorized to be assessed and collected for paying the ordinary expenses of government by the act passed on the first day of March, one thousand eight hundred and forty-five, entitled 'An act to provide for paying a portion of interest on the State debt,' and as the revenue of the State is collected and passed into the treasury, the Auditor shall direct the Treasurer to credit the aforesaid fund by the amount of one-sixth of a mill, in a separate account to be kept for that purpose."

Such a provision for the support of an institution is the ideal one, so far as the institution itself is concerned, but whether this does not in a measure estop the frequent exhibit to the people of its workings and prevent the recognition of the accountability which should never be forgotten by public officers may be seriously questioned. As the manager of an institution one should most unhesitatingly favor it, but as a citizen and taxpayer one would object to it. But whether the wisest or not, the law under consideration was continued in force only four years, being repealed by an act amending the revenue laws, February 14, 1855, since which time its necessities have been provided for by special acts of successive sessions of the General Assembly, with the exception of the small amount that accrued to the institution in pursuance of the act of incorporation, which set apart to it, as already detailed, a small portion of the interest of the school, college and seminary fund. This, however, was taken from it and turned over to the Illinois Normal University in the year 1872.

Reference has been made to the conflict between the principal's and steward's departments, which resulted in the dismissal of three stewards by the Board and the abolishment of the steward's office in all the institutions of the State by an act of the General Assembly, February 13, 1857. The events that led up to these dismissals and this enactment were attended with very unpleasant controversies between the friends of the parties most interested. Bitter antagonisms, as was inevitable under such circumstances, were engendered which could not be suppressed. The consequence was that after the failure of repeated efforts to harmonize the discordant elements in the Board of Directors, and in the institution, that on the 16th of October, 1855, Mr. Thomas Officer resigned the office of principal of the institution. This was shortly followed by the resignation of the secretary and treasurer, and by the withdrawal of two members from the Board. Rev. Thomas M. Newell, who had been one of the instructors for four years, was offered the office of principal, but declined to accept it or even to superintend the school until a competent principal could be found. The institution being without a competent head was thrown into great confusion; the pupils most of them absconded, or were removed by friends; some teachers withdrew, and others, having nothing to do, were dispensed with, only two remaining to instruct the few pupils who had continued at the institution. Rev. Newton Cloud, a member of the Board, a gentlemen held in the highest esteem by the entire community, was requested to accept the office of principal, and was by action of the Board clothed with all authority pertaining to that position. Mr. Cloud consented to do the best he could under the demoralized condition of affairs, but knowing himself not qualified for the position, and being too honest to hold a position he could not faithfully and efficiently fill, would only consent to occupy it until a competent principal qualified by professional knowledge and actual experience could be obtained to discharge its duties permanently. Soon after Mr. Officer's resignation a committee of five members of the Board was appointed "To ascertain who can be employed to act as principal of the institution," but the withdrawal of the chairman of the committee from the Board and other causes prevented their doing anything in the matter. After reorganization and some futile efforts to act, the committee, upon their own request, were discharged, and the president of the Board was requested to visit various institutions in search of a competent man for the position. After a search of two months he returned and recommended to the Board Mr. Edward Peet, of New York, who was unanimously elected and notified thereof, and requested to enter upon his duties as principal of the institution without delay. Mr. Peet promptly appeared on the ground, and a meeting of the Board was convened at his desire to conclude negotiations, but when the Board convened, to their surprise, Mr. Peet had "quietly folded his tent" and returned to New York without waiting to meet the gentlemen of the Board, some of whom lived in remote places in the State. Mr. Peet, however, favored the Board with a letter from his home in New York declining to accept the appointment. The president of the Board was instructed to open immediate communication with Mr. Philip G. Gillett, of the Indiana institution, with whom he had some negotiations while on his way to the East, and who had failed to receive an important communication forwarded him by mail several weeks before. The president carried out his instructions by deputizing Rev. Newton Cloud, the acting principal, to personally visit Mr. Gillett at his home in Indianapolis and close an engagement with him if possible. Mr. Cloud, who had grown weary of the novel labors he had undertaken and had become satiated with its honors, lost no time in making the proposed visit and bringing back with him the young man in search of whom he was dispatched. Mr. Cloud having captured, wisely bagged his game and took him at once to the institution, where he was safe from any evil influences that might tend to scare him away. Mr. Gillett, after a few days' survey of the situation, and becoming assured that all requisite and proper authority and prerogatives, including the selection of all subordinate officers, would be accorded him, and that he should be the sole head of the institution and the sole organ of communication between the Board and the subordinate departments, signified his willingness to accept the position of principal. Some of his friends thought it a rash thing for a beardless youth to do, but accounted for it upon the principle that "fools rush in where angels fear to tread." Mr. Gillett (derisively styled "that boy that's come to run the deaf and dumb") at once (April 26, 1856) entered upon the duties of the principalship of the institution. Of the one hundred and seven pupils that had been present in the fall only twenty-two remained. The matron and all but two of the teachers had left the institution, feeling, as one of the local papers said in announcing Mr. Gillett's coming, that "Acceptance under such circumstances was proof positive of incompetence and untrustworthiness." To bring together and organize a new corps of officers and restore confidence in former pupils and their parents, and overcome prejudice, was the difficult task to be done as soon as possible. Guilty of the "atrocious crime of being a young man," with a face innocent of down, he not unfrequently experienced amusing episodes as well as trying and vexatious unreasonableness. Time, however, rapidly healed the misfortune of youth, as Mr. Gillett promised it should if only a due amount of patience was shown him. The Board of Directors in the eighth biennial report, December 26, 1856, eight months after Mr. Gillett's advent, in announcing the change of principals, say, "The Board of Directors now have the pleasure to announce that they have been enabled to procure the services of Mr. Philip G. Gillett, of Indiana, as superintendent, and that the school opened this session with, and has now a larger number of pupils than at any previous session, the number being one hundred and nine. The Board of Directors deem themselves fortunate in having procured the services of Mr. Gillett. He is a gentleman of strong and vigorous mind, and accomplished scholar and experienced in teaching the sign language; indeed, he has made this his occupation for life, and with him it is as much a labor of love as duty. Mr. Gillett comes to us highly recommended from the Indiana school and from distinguished citizens of our neighboring State, and we are well satisfied that the people of Illinois will be content with the action of the Board in calling Mr. Gillett to the head of the institution." Twenty years later, in 1876, in preparing their report for the centennial year, the Illinois State Board of Public Charities review the history of all the State institutions then in existence, and in their review of this institution say, "With the advent of Mr. Phillip G. Gillett to the superintendency, in 1856, the institution entered upon a new career of vigorous youth and expansion. His energetic spirit has driven the school the public and even the Legislature before him. When this has been impossible, he has sometimes gone in advance himself and waited for the rest to come up."

Three serious problems presented themselves to the new principal immediately upon assuming the responsibilities of his office. The first was to secure the return of the absent pupils and to gain the confidence of their parents and friends; the second to bring together and organize a corps of officers; and third to hasten the completion and proper furnishing of uncompleted buildings. No parents are more chary of entrusting their children to strangers than the parents of deaf-mutes. This is reasonable, for the deaf child's every want has been the subject of parental solicitude in every hour of its life. Unable to make known its wants by ordinary methods, their anticipation has become the parental habit, and its limited gestures always appealing most touchingly to the sympathy of members of the family, are understood by them only. It is extremely hard for the parents to believe that another can or will do this better than themselves. The ordeal of committing a deaf child to strangers is one of the most trying that ever comes to a parent. After witnessing it continuously for forty years, and having been one of the parties in more than two thousand cases, it still remains to me an affecting scene. While of necessity it possesses an element of business, yet its element of sentiment is as decided as at first. Personal visits in the homes of the pupils were the means chiefly relied upon and found most effective in inducing the return of pupils to the institution at the beginning of the next term, which opened with a larger attendance of pupils than any previous term.

Experienced teachers and a matron were secured in other states, some former teachers were continued or re-engaged and a new one was taken under training in time to be of some avail when needed. Up to this time the profession of instructing the deaf and dumb had been practiced only by men, and solely by hearing and speaking men who were college graduates or by deaf men who were graduates from institutions for the deaf and dumb. No women to this time had been regularly appointed anywhere upon the corps of instruction, though there were a very few instances in which females who were born or reared in institutions had been for a time engaged to supply vacancies, but this had been regarded as unprofessional, irregular and not to be approved. Necessity sometimes drives us to the adoption of most excellent expedients, as was the case of the women alluded to. There are no other persons who so well know the deaf and dumb, and so fully enter into sympathy with them, and so clearly understand their inner life, as those who have been born and reared among them. In entering upon the work of instructing the deaf they have advantages at the outset that one differently reared can acquire only by long years of association with them. Indeed, it may be questioned if any others even as fully, accurately, and justly understand the deaf and dumb as they. Consequently it would seem as almost an imperative duty for such persons to devote their lives to the work of deaf-mute instruction.

Mr. Gillett having seen some of these sporadic cases of women temporarily engaged in instructing deaf-mutes, and believing that as teachers of children none are superior to women, in organizing a corps of instruction appointed a woman upon it as a regular and permanent teacher. This has been followed by similar appointments in this and all the other institutions of America, until now more than two-thirds of the teachers of deaf-mutes in America are women. It is urged by eminent authority that in this the profession had deteriorated, but no one has yet shown that the work accomplished in the school rooms of the institutions for the deaf and dumb is at all inferior to that of forty years ago. It is believed to be better. In selecting women for instructors the same governing principles were recognized as in selecting men, that they should have a college education or its equivalent. On this subject, in his first report to the Board of Directors, the principal insisted. In the organization of an institution nothing is of greater importance than to secure persons of superior attainments to fill the offices of the intellectual and its cognate departments, and to make their situations permanent. "No person is qualified for a situation in a deaf mute institution who could not succeed in any profession, especially one which depended mainly on public speaking; nor will the ordinary duties admit of taking men worn out in other professions; nowhere does a drone succeed more poorly than teaching the deaf and dumb. For teachers we must look to young, enterprising persons in the prime of life; and, as a general rule, the employment of young, active officers is desirable in all departments. If we expect persons in the prime of life, with the world opening before them its long vista of hopes and anticipations, it must be perfectly evident that a remuneration corresponding with the emoluments of other professions must be afforded, otherwise we shall be unable to procure and retain men of the right stamp; a result which would be extremely detrimental to the literary character of the institution and of but slight advantage as regards its finances." These have been the ruling principles in the selection of officers to the present time. No influence has ever been allowed to contravene them. In consequence its corps has always maintained a high standard of efficiency and honor. This is well attested by the fact that from its corps, ten have been called to superintend similar institutions in other states; two have been called to college professorships, and one to the acting presidency of an important college. To obtain capable, experienced officers has been no slight difficulty. Applications for situations have been numerous, but from individuals who had no knowledge of the labors they were seeking to enter upon. Young men who would not trust their skill to cut a side of leather to make a pair of shoes, and young women who would not trust themselves to cut a piece of silk to make for themselves a dress lest there might be waste of material, have often thought it a very proper thing that they be entrusted with twenty plastic minds to practice on, in order to acquire skill in the intricate and difficult work of instructing the deaf and dumb. If the blunders and mistakes entailed loss only on themselves they might be tolerated for a time, but unfortunately upon the deaf-mute pupils are visited the evil consequences of inexperience in the teachers.

In securing competent persons for its official corps this institution has, at various times, drawn from those of eleven other States. The only question that has ever been discussed with reference to proposed appointments has been capability and fitness. Party affiliations and sectarian predilections have never been considered in this connection. That practice that of late years has debased some institutions for the deaf and dumb in other States to party boodleism has never invaded the Illinois institution.

The subject that engaged much solicitude at the reorganization of the institution was the condition of the buildings. The members of the first Board of Directors were men eminent and successful in their own callings, and of great prominence in the State, but they are a striking instance of how important it is for any enterprise to be directed by a mind that understands what he has in hand and how to accomplish the work in contemplation. The first building erected, in three years after its occupancy, was proved inadequate, which the directors explain in their fifth report, saying: "The original building was put up before anyone had been employed who was familiar with the wants of such an institution." Some remodeling was done on this in connection with the construction of a main edifice which was completed in the year 1852. But in two years this latter was found to be insecure, and in the year 1854 its front was torn down to be rebuilt in connection with the erection of a north wing. At the time of the reorganization these buildings were incomplete, being unplastered and only partially floored. The plans for warming and lighting them contemplated ordinary wood stoves and lard oil lamps. This subject was accordingly urged upon the Board and the legislature with the result that the appropriations were made to adopt steam heating and gas lighting.

In the first report he prepared, Mr. Gillett called the attention of the legislature to the subject of the education of feeble-minded children. The processes of education practiced in this institution being the most elementary of any practiced in the State, such children were often brought here under the misapprehension that as they were speechless that they must be deaf. A mistake common even yet, a frequent concomitant of mental imbecility being absence of speech when the hearing faculty is perfect. At that time there was a general disbelief in the practicability of teaching the feeble-minded, though in the Eastern States a few institutions for this class were advocated by the most cautious and conservative citizens as a wise measure of political economy, as well as a public duty. In this report (the eighth), Mr. Gillett stated: "It will certainly be a proud day for Illinois when she can boast of institutions whose blessings, like the rains and dews, the air and sunshine, are festooned alike upon all her unfortunates." This subject was presented from time to time till the legislature, in 1865, was induced to make an appropriation for an experimental school for feeble-minded children, which was conducted by the trustees and principal of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb until it was established upon the same independent basis as the other State institutions. It is with no little pleasure that that institution, in a sense the child of this, is seen to occupy a most honorable position among those of a similar nature throughout the world.

Soon after steam heating was adopted as a means of warming the institution, a scarcity of water was experienced. Previous to this, wells and cisterns had been found adequate, but under the new system so much more water was required that they utterly failed to meet the requirements. Resort was had to hauling water from other sources, but this was expensive and laborious, and obliged the limited use of an element that should be used freely. An expedient was adopted of throwing out wing ditches on the north side of College Hill, to catch the storm water and conduct it to a reservoir on a piece of low ground on the institution premises, but this failed to meet the expectations that had been entertained. The subject became more serious until it threatened the life of the institution. In the early winter of 1870 the Board of Directors decided to construct a water-works plant on a stream known as "The Brook," a mile south of the institution, and pump the water therefrom to the reservoir they had already built. It would have been wiser had they abandoned that reservoir and constructed a new one on the high ground over which the water was pumped from the brook. This plan would have ever after placed the water in the building by gravity and saved the perpetual labor of pumping it. This was appreciated at the time, but, having as a dernier resort assumed the authority of constructing the water-works, the Board of Trustees, influenced by a desire to make the smallest possible outlay, continued the use of the old reservoir. The water-works were not finished until midwinter, the pipe being laid in trenches, dug through hard, frozen ground, much of the way the frost being driven out of the ground by fires along the line where it was proposed to lay the pipes and the foundation for the pump and boiler house. This proved successful and had the effect not only to relieve the institution from its distress but demonstrated to the public the practicability of securing a supply of water for the city of Jacksonville upon the same general plan. But a few years later the city constructed a system of water-works for its own use, from which the institution has since secured its supply of water, favorable terms having been offered upon which this service would be rendered. Only one who has passed through the experience of managing, with a limited supply of water, a large establishment when the warmth, cleanliness, health and daily routine of work and study of a multitude of persons is involved, can fully appreciate the situation of one so circumstanced. The spectres that rise before one in this condition are truly appalling.

The satisfactory settlement of the water question opened the way for the rapid growth and enlargement of the institution, which was at that time greatly needed, as an epidemic of cerebro-spinal-meningitis largely increased the number of deaf children in the state.

The south wing, that had been completed in 1846 and remodeled in 1850, was deemed unsafe and was, in 1871, rebuilt in a substantial manner, and in style corresponding with the north wing and main building, as rebuilt in 1855 and 1856. Two years later a dining hall, one hundred by sixty-seven feet, and a hospital of sixteen rooms were erected. These were followed by the erection, in 1874 and 1875, of the school and chapel building, containing twenty-eight school-rooms and an auditorium capable of seating a company of twelve hundred persons. This building has been pronounced by competent judges one of the best school-houses in the country. Of the dining hall it is an almost universal remark that it is one of the most satisfactory and pleasing anywhere to be found.

In 1877 the present industrial building, with ample room for schools of printing, cabinet-making (with use of planing mill, circular and scroll saw, with lathes for wood-turning), shoe-making, and a machine shop and gardener's room and engine and other steam machinery, was erected. During the year 1879 a large and well equipped laundry was built.

In the year 1881 spacious horse-barns, and a cottage for boys, a store, bakery and library were constructed and occupied. In 1883 a large dairy barn was built, and in 1884 a splendid kitchen and a cold storage plant were erected; in 1886 a gymnasium, natatorium and drill hall and a cottage for little girls were built; in 1888 and 1889 the electric light plant was extended through the entire institution, extensive street improvements were made and the grounds improved and extended; in 1891 a farm was purchased for the use of the institution, and the heating plant enlarged.

Thus it is seen that the institution has been from its founding in 1839 an almost constant scene of building and extension. The improvements since the year 1855 have all been of a substantial and durable character, designed in the light of experience for the uses to which they were to be applied. Elaborate ornamentation has been avoided in all of them, yet all are handsome and tasteful. The buildings comprise twenty in number and occupy fifteen acres of ground. They have a mile and a half of cornice, eighteen acres of plastering, eight acres of flooring, fifteen hundred windows and seven hundred doors. A thousand electric light lamps are used for their lighting; seven large steam boilers, with several miles of steam pipe, are a part of their heating apparatus. The boilers are also used in culinary operations and furnish power for driving the machinery which consists of a planing-mill, three turning lathes, a circular saw and a scroll saw in the cabinet-shop; an engine lathe, a pipe machine and a small lathe in the machine-shop; three presses in the printing-office; five washing-machines, a hydro extractor, a laundry callender, a shirt ironer and a Sturtevant blower in the laundry; a rotary oven and two cracker machines in the bakery.

Until the year 1868 the sign system was the one pursued in this institution in the instruction of its pupils. That is to say, not that signs themselves were taught, but that in explanation of principles and truths or the narration of events and in ordinary conversation with pupils the language of signs or gestures was used extensively and its use encouraged. At the same time it had always been the case that much use was made of writing and finger spelling, while comparatively little attention was given to articulation and lip signs. For be it remembered that for a deaf person there can be no articulation though there is articulation by him. Articulation or speech is a combination of sounds. It is as absurd to speak of seeing a sound or reading speech, as of hearing a color. The deaf person can produce the sounds but cannot hear them. To him they are as unreal as if they did not exist. Hence he is forced to substitute vision for hearing. A sign is a distinctive guiding indication to the eye, whether made by the hand, the arms, the body, the countenance or the lips. A spoken word is a distinctive guiding indication to the ear. That which is sometimes termed speech-reading is but the observation of lip movements or lip signs much less distinct than manual or brachial signs. As one who understands several languages will use the one which pleases and aids him most, so the deaf person will use such class of signs as is most satisfactory to him. Signs made with the hands and arms, aided by the countenance, being more perspicuous and often ideographic, the deaf person, if left to himself, will almost universally adopt. Hence it is that children who lose hearing after speech has been acquired cease to talk and will not resume it until special efforts are taken to induce them to do so. To impart speech to one who does not hear, or for such an one to acquire speech, is one of the most difficult undertakings to which a human being can address himself, for he possesses only half of the organ of speech since the organ of hearing is as important an element in speech as the organ of voice. There is no speech of any race of men independent of the sense of hearing.

In that large class of persons commonly known in community as deaf-mutes, there are several divisions, whose conditions are quite unlike; 1st, those whose deafness is congenital, or supervened before speech had been learned; 2d, those whose deafness was acquired after they had learned to talk but at so early an age that their memory of speech is indistinct; 3d, those who became deaf so late that they retain a distinct recollection of speech; 4th, those whose deafness is only partial. The third and fourth of these divisions can, with comparative ease, use vocal utterance, though the fourth experience much less difficulty in reading the lip signs of others. Many of the second and a few of the first division can learn to speak, though all of the first and second divisions experience difficulty in reading the lip-signs of others. Just which members of these classes will be successful articulators and lip-readers no one can know until an opportunity is given all of them to test their ability. In the year 1868 classes in articulation and lip-reading were organized in this institution, and have been continued to the present time. The practice of the institution is to test all pupils who are admitted, to learn who give promise of success in these classes, and continue such in them during their continuance in the institution.

Some meet with very gratifying success while others but poorly repay the great labor involved in their instruction. Many enter upon it with avidity which some maintain to the end, but others, after a time, importune to be excused from articulation classes, urging that it is a lifeless, uninteresting procedure to them. The testimony of many of their friends as to its value to them when away from the institution is very encouraging, but some parents think it labor in vain and request its discontinuance with their children. In the estimation of the public generally it is regarded as marvelous, and calls to mind the time of the Savior of mankind to whom

“The blind, the deaf, the dumb were brought Lepers and lame, and all were healed.”

This department of the institution has been continuously extended until there are now eight instructors whose sole duty is to teach articulation and lip-reading.

As this was the first of the State institutions of Illinois, which have become so numerous, and whose support involves so large an expenditure in recent years, comprising more than half the annual expenditures provided for by the General Assembly, it will not be a matter of surprise that there have been a number of changes in the law governing its support and management. The act of incorporation approved February 23, 1839, empowered the directors, twenty in number, to fill all vacancies in their own body whether occurring by death, resignation or otherwise. The Board exercised this prerogative until the year 1849, when by an act approved February 3 the number of directors was reduced to twelve, to be appointed by the governor for the term of two years exclusive of the principal, who was to continue a director, with the provision that vacancies occurring between the biennial appointments made by the governor should be filled by the Board of Directors themselves. Under these two acts always a majority and much of the time all the directors were residents of Morgan county. An act of February 12, 1853, provided that the directors should be divided into three classes of four, each holding office for six years, exclusive of the principal, who was continued ex-officio a member of the Board, it being enacted that a majority of the members of the Board should reside without the county of Morgan. February 13, 1857, following the dissensions already referred to, the General Assembly reduced the number of directors to six, exclusive of the principal, who was continued ex-officio a member of the Board, no two of whom should be residents of the same county, with a provision that no member of the Board should be employed or appointed in or to any office or place under the authority of the Board, or should be directly or indirectly interested in any contract to be made by said Board for any purpose whatever.

This law continued in force till April 9, 1869, when this institution with all the others belonging to or sustained in whole or in part by the State were brought under the operation of one act intended to unify the institutional work of the State government. This last act and one supplemental to it approved April 15, 1875, still in force, are founded in wisdom. The population and resources and improvements of the State of Illinois for three decades had been growing with unexampled rapidity. Along with this growth was a large increase of those classes of people found in all times and races who by some physical or mental impairment require unusual means of instruction, treatment or care. The humane and enlightened influences of the people of the State kept pace with the necessities of the times. The consequence was that the little Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb chartered in 1839 and opened in 1846 with four deaf mutes had been followed by others, one at a time, until at the end of thirty years after the first legislative action they numbered thirteen, and their inmates were counted by the thousand with the outlook indicating that an increase of institutions and a large increase of their inmates were inevitable in the not remote future. Each of the institutions existed by virtue of enactments peculiar to itself, no two of them being very similar, and their management as dissimilar as the laws bringing them into existence; of course there would inevitably be confusion if not conflict of interest from so many institutions in various localities throughout the State. It would not be considered at all strange if under such circumstances the managers of the institutions felt themselves invited to the exercise of such adroit expedients as they deemed not improper for advancement of their several institutions. The systems of keeping accounts were so diverse that the citizen desiring to ascertain correct information as to the use of public funds appropriated to the various institutions could do so only with difficulty.

The Acts of 1869 and 1875 embodied as much practical wisdom as any that can be found in any one of the United States; it has not, in this respect, been surpassed by the act of any other state since its enactment, while it has been copied by many. Their adjustment of prerogatives and responsibilities between the boards of the respective institutions, and a board having powers of inspection, suggestion and recommendation, but no administrative power, styled the Board of Charities assures to the respective institutions all the advantages of the interest of its own board, and secures for it the advantage of frequent intelligent inspection, and regular times of accounting for all expenditures. There is nothing more important for a public officer than the performance of this service often, regularly and systematically. It is the popular impression that the public interest demands this, but the officer himself is as much interested therein as the public. Another eminently wise provision of this law is the one that members of the local boards and the Board of Charities shall serve without compensation, the result of this being that the trusteeships are not sought after for mercenary reasons, and honorable, high-minded men, actuated by a desire to advance noble, humane and educational enterprises, are chosen for members of all the boards. There can always be found such men in a community such as constitutes the population of Illinois. The character and wisdom of the members of these boards for the last twenty-three years is aptly illustrated by their reports. No more reliable, just and true compendium of the relations of the defective classes to the public and the obligations of the public to them can anywhere be found than is contained in the eleven biennial reports of the Illinois Board of Public Charities. Their discussions and conclusions will be dissented from by different persons, and especially experts in various departments of institutional work, but these reports will surely stand as acknowledged authority upon the subjects they treat upon, and an honor to the members of that Board and their able secretary, Mr. F. H. Wines, who has prepared them.

That the system of institutional management tends to induce if not to cause controversy on projected improvements and methods cannot be denied, but controversy, when conducted by earnest, sincere and capable disputants, can only result in good.

The proper, eager interest of one whose life-thought and work has been given to a particular enterprise may preclude him from duly recognizing the just claims of others, and his schemes for future development may, for this reason, all the more fittingly be carefully scrutinized by wise and discriminating persons who sustain advisory relations to many others. That there have been sharp differences between the officers of this institution and the Board of Charities upon the wisdom of proposed policies, and animated discussions upon them is true, but, as should always be the case with high minded men after the questions at issue were settled and the "smoke of the contest had cleared away," no personal animosities remained, and the general good had been advanced. All the operations of both the boards have been conducted with a view upon the part of each to do the best possible. The pleasant working of this system, so far as this institution is concerned, has been largely due to the fact that the members of both boards were men of honor, entirely above influence of partisan or personal considerations. Only men of such character are suitable for such trusts. The State of Illinois may be congratulated that its executives have so wisely exercised their appointive power.

The subject of a library for the use of the pupils and the officers of the institution received no attention worth naming in the first years of its existence. Some regard was had to it in the second decade of the institution, but it was not until the year 1870 that the subject was systematically and energetically taken in hand. At every session of the General Assembly since that, the subject has been presented, with an application for a small appropriation to be used in this way. It is a pleasure to say that this has met with the most ready and hearty approval of every session of that honorable body. An annual appropriation of five hundred dollars, for the purchase of books and repairs of the old and worn ones, has been made. A judicious use of the money, with the trade discounts, has brought together a collection of over thirteen thousand volumes, which are among the best productions of ancient and modern times. The greatest care has been exercised in the selection of these books to secure the works of the best authors. The departments of history, poetry, fiction, travel, science, biography, and art, with the best encyclopedias and other books of reference are each quite full. Nothing tends more to give an institution a good uplift than a good library. Its influence is not ephemeral but far reaching, affecting the taste and habits of the pupils to the remotest period of their lives, keeping them upon a higher plane than they would, without it, ever have attained. The love of good books is one of the most ennobling traits than any one can possess, but for a deaf person it is of far greater importance than to any other person.

Since the commencement of the school there have been two thousand, two hundred and fifty-five pupils enrolled, of whom one thousand, two hundred and eighty seven are males, and nine hundred and sixty-eight are females. They were members of two thousand and seven families. In one family there were six deaf-mutes. In seven families there were four deaf mutes. In fifty-four families there were three deaf mutes. In one hundred and fifteen families there were two deaf mutes. In one thousand, eight hundred and twenty-nine families there was one deaf-mute.

Though there are, doubtless, some of whom the fact has not been learned, yet one hundred and ten of the pupils enrolled have been reported as the off-spring of parents of consanguineous origin as follows:

- 79 children of first cousins.
- 12 children of second cousins.
- 11 children of third cousins.
- 8 children of fourth cousins.
- 1 the grandchild of first cousins.
- 1 the child of uncle and niece.

It is worthy of note that in families where the parents were first cousins in one case there were four deaf-mutes; in three cases there were three deaf-mutes; in seven cases there were two deaf-mutes. In families where the parents were second cousins in one case there were three deaf-mutes; and in one there were two deaf-mutes. In families where the parents were third cousins in one case there were three deaf-mutes and in two there were two deaf-mutes. In families where the parents were fourth cousins in one case there were four deaf-mutes and in one case there were three deaf-mutes.

The deaf-mute relationships reported among the 2,255 pupils enrolled (though there are probably others) are as follows:

A cause inducing congenital deafness which does not appear on the foregoing list is one upon which, from its peculiar nature, it is exceedingly difficult to obtain information. Reference is here made to prenatal impressions, popularly known as birthmarks. As opportunity has favored, inquiries have been made of parents with reference to this, causing the persuasion that it is an active cause, and may account for many cases of deafness otherwise inexplicable.

The ages at which deafness has occurred, as far as information has been furnished, have been as follows:

The reports received of pupils who have passed through the institution and are engaged in the battle of life are of a very gratifying nature. They are in a great variety of occupations, including the clergy, teachers, artists, farmers, book-keepers, mercantile and all the mechanic arts. Thirty-three of them are known to have been engaged as teachers in schools for the deaf. An extended account of their successes and difficulties might be written, but present limits will not admit. Their position in society is such that they enjoy the universal respect and esteem of the community wherein they reside. As heads of families many of them are rearing excellent and well-ordered households, bringing their children up to a condition of usefulness and respectability that is quite equal, if it does not surpass that of the average in society at large. Their intermarriage has been promotive of their happiness and comfort, and has not tended to the multiplication of deaf-mutes, as may be seen by a careful study of the preceding table of pupils.

The institution is an honor to the State of Illinois, and has repaid manifold all that has been expended in its upbuilding and support.

GEORGIA SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF (GENERAL VIEW, LOOKING S.E.; 1887-1893).

The Georgia School for the Deaf,

CAVE SPRING, GEORGIA,

1846-1893.

By WESLEY O. CONNOR,

Principal of the School.

THE GEORGIA SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

In the year 1833 a memorial was presented to the legislature of Georgia, by John J. Flourney, a semi-mute, of Jackson county, praying for the establishment of an institution for the education of the deaf and dumb.

This memorial was referred to the Governor, Hon. Wilson Lumpkin, with a request that he obtain full information and report to the next meeting of the general assembly; so in November, 1834, the Governor, who had become much interested in the subject, laid before the legislature all the information he had secured, expressing himself as particularly indebted to Governor Fort, of Connecticut, and to Lewis Weld, principal of the American Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb, at Hartford, Connecticut.

In the latter part of the year 1834, Mr. Weld, accompanied by two deaf-mutes, Edmund Booth, of Massachusetts, one of his assistant teachers, and Thomas S. Perkins, of Connecticut, one of his pupils, who was then a lad of about twelve years of age, visited the capital of Georgia, and Mr. Weld says of this visit :

We reached Milledgeville on the thirteenth of December, and I lost no time in introducing myself and my pupils to Governor Lumpkin. The Governor received me and my pupils with marked affability and kindness, and expressed himself as much gratified that we had come on without waiting for his letter, which he sent for to the post-office and handed me himself. He informed me that the committee of the Senate to whom my communication of last September had been referred, with other deaf and dumb documents from here and from other places, had made a report and offered certain resolutions providing for the education of the indigent deaf-mutes of Georgia; that this report had been favorably received and, though not acted on at all in the lower house, there was reason to hope it might pass in both, especially if a favorable impression should be made by an exhibition of my pupils. * * * The impression produced by my pupils was evidently very favorable before their public exhibition. This took place on Monday evening, the fifteenth, in the Representative room, and was, I believe, very satisfactory.

The board of directors of the American Asylum, in their nineteenth report, use this language :

The reception of our delegation by the executive and legislature of Georgia was also very gratifying to the board, and particularly the passage of the liberal and benevolent act above referred to (appropriating three thousand dollars), which took place before the close of the session. While they are thus trying the experiment of educating them abroad, they will have the opportunity of deciding, on data which must be constantly accumulating, whether it is best to establish a Southern Institution.

On Saturday, December 20, 1834, Hon. John W. Burney, of Jasper county, introduced into the House of Representatives a series of resolutions, prescribing the method by which to carry into effect the purposes sought to be attained by the above-mentioned appropriation, which were immediately agreed to, and the Rev. Elijah E. Sinclair was, under these resolutions, the first commissioner appointed by Governor Lumpkin, in March, 1835, to gather up and convey to the American Asylum, at Hartford, Connecticut, the deaf-mutes of Georgia. He was faithful and zealous in this work; was reappointed successively by Governors Schley and Gilmer, and was publicly complimented by the legislature for his efficiency and integrity. He travelled extensively over the State searching for deaf-mutes, but he succeeded in inducing only a few to accept the beneficence of the State. This office was filled in succession by Rev. S. G. Hillyer and Rev. Jesse H. Campbell, both efficient officers.

The number of deaf-mutes who were sent to the American Asylum for education was as follows: In 1835, eight; in 1836, three; in 1837, four; in 1839, two; in 1840, one; in 1842, one; in 1843, one; in 1844, four; in all twenty-four, each of whom remained from one to six years.

In the years 1842 and 1843 five deaf-mutes, children of Asa Prior, of Paulding county, two of whom had spent several years in the American Asylum, were sent as day pupils to the Cedar Valley Academy, which stood near the large spring in Cedartown, and was presided over by Benjamin Mosely, a noted educator of that day, which may be considered as the first attempt made in Georgia to impart instruction to the deaf and dumb. No record remains of this work that will give any idea of the measure of success that attended the efforts made during these two years, but it is presumed that it did not amount to much, as there was no one connected with the enterprise who had had any experience with the deaf and dumb.

The deaf-mutes of Georgia are indebted much to the energy and efficient action of Rev. Jesse H. Campbell for his agency in procuring the location of an institution for their instruction within the limits of the State. His philanthropic and Christian heart prompted him to endeavor to ameliorate the condition of those who, on account of the distance to the American Asylum, would not avail themselves of the privileges offered by the State.

His first step was to have the previous acts amended so as to allow deaf-mutes to be educated in Georgia upon the same terms as at Hartford. One section of the amendatory act, approved December 25, 1845—and a grand Christmas gift it proved to be to the deaf-mutes of the State—was as follows:

SECTION 3. And be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, That His Excellency the Governor be authorized to remove such beneficiaries as are now at the said Asylum at Hartford, if the means of a proper education be supplied at the Cedar Valley Academy, or elsewhere, on the same terms of economy to this State, and the general usefulness of the appropriation, made by said act of 1838."

After the passage of this amendment he opened a correspondence with the trustees of several institutions of learning, and among them was the board of trustees of the Hearn Manual Labor School, at Cave Spring, in Floyd county. An arrangement was effected between Mr. Campbell and the trustees of this school, by which a department should be opened for the reception of deaf-mute pupils. The preliminary arrangements having been completed, Mr. O. P. Fannin, the associate principal of the Hearn School,—a Georgian by birth and education,—and a gentleman of fine literary attainments, was deputed to proceed to Hartford to learn the method of teaching the deaf and dumb, and to bring the Georgia pupils from the American Asylum and enter them in the deaf-mute department of the Hearn School. This department was placed under the immediate supervision of Mr. Fannin, and upon his return, after an absence of several months, was opened May 15, 1846, in a log cabin which stood directly in the rear of the present Hearn School building, with four pupils in attendance, viz., Thomas Mims, of Thomas county; Murdock McDuffie, of Pulaski county; Temperance L. Jordan, of Oglethorpe county, and Elmira Pugh, of Upson county.

This period, to which the friends of the deaf and dumb can now look with pleasing reflections, was fraught with a degree of interest far beyond anything that was conjectured at the time. The novelty of the undertaking, and the entire absence of any knowledge of the deaf-mute character, as well as of the obstacles that stood in the way of his acquiring an education, on the part of all persons connected therewith, seemed to carry with it the promise of an early failure and discontinuance; but such was not the case, for the projectors "had builded wiser than they knew."

While in attendance upon this department the pupils were boarded in private families; the males with A. Richardson and Carter W. Sparks, and the females with Rev. W. D. Cowdrey.

Of course, the results of the school work which followed the opening of this department were not such as could have been desired, but under the adverse circumstances in which the labor was performed they were such as would commend themselves to the good judgment of the friends of the deaf and dumb all over the State. In the meantime the services of Mr. Josephus B. Edwards, formerly a beneficiary of the State at the American Asylum, were secured as an assistant teacher. The number of pupils had increased to a dozen or more, and thus the department stood at the close of the year 1847.

At the session of the legislature in the winter of 1847, the second step was taken toward the establishment of a permanent institution for the deaf and dumb in Georgia, by the passage of an act, which was approved December 16, 1847, locating the Georgia Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb in Cave Spring, and making the necessary appropriations for support and for school purposes, and for the erection of a suitable building. This act also authorized the Governor to appoint a board of five commissioners, one of whom must be the teacher in charge of the deaf-mute department of the Hearn School, under whose supervision and control the Institution should be conducted. Mr. Fannin and Dr. I. N. Culbertson visited Milledgeville in the interests of the deaf and dumb, and used their influence in securing the passage of this act.

The five commissioners appointed by the Governor under this act, were Dr. George D. Philips, of Habersham county; Dr. Leonidas B. Mercer, of Lee county; Dr. Isaac N. Culbertson, Oliver P. Fannin, and Seaborn J. Johnson, of Floyd county. As soon as practicable, this board met and organized by the election of Dr. I. N. Culbertson president, and S. J. Johnson secretary and treasurer. They also elected Mr. O. P.

Fannin principal instructor, and J. B. Edwards as his assistant.

The next work of the board was the selection of a suitable site for the erection of the necessary buildings for an institution, which was effected by the purchase, from the trustees of the Hearn Manual Labor School, of a lot of eight and six-tenths acres, for which two hundred and fifty two dollars was paid. This lot was pleasantly located in the eastern part of the village, and finely watered by a large limestone spring of pure cold water, and having its western boundary within thirty feet of a bold, limpid stream, of which the cave spring is the source. From the premises a fine view is had of Van's valley and its picturesque scenery. The valley is named for Dave Van, a sub-chief of the Cherokees, and is one of the most beautiful and fertile in North Georgia.

A plan for a building was procured and adopted which at the time was thought to be ample for all who would apply for admission for many years to come. It was contracted to be built of brick, forty feet wide by seventy feet long, and two stories high. Halls running east and west on each floor divided the building into four large rooms.

In the spring of the year 1849 the announcement was made that the building would be ready for occupancy by the first of July following, so the board of commissioners proceeded to select suitable persons to fill the positions of steward and matron of the Asylum. Mr. John M. Carroll, a gentleman whose energy of character well qualified him for the discharge of the duties pertaining to the office, was chosen steward, and his wife, Mrs. Sarah Carroll, who was well fitted in every way for the place, was made matron, and it may be interesting to the people of this generation to say that they accepted the positions under a contract which required them to "furnish all the necessary household and kitchen furniture, and family utensils of such style and quality as the board of commissioners might approve, at their own expense, and also to furnish the shops pertaining to said institution, with all necessary tools and materials for carrying on the business thereof, and procure the services of some one or more mechanics of sufficient skill to instruct the boys in the art and mysteries of a trade, at his own expense, provided, nevertheless, that it should be such a one as the said board of commissioners would approve." As a compensation for all this they were allowed the services of all male mutes who were in proper condition to labor, for and during the hours set apart for labor, and to appropriate to their own use all the proceeds and incomes arising from the shops, and, in addition, were paid six dollars per month for each pupil in attendance. And in this day of technical training it may be well to give from the minutes of the meeting of the board of June 24, 1848, the following extract to show that the importance of manual training was fully recognized, even in the days upon which modern writers are disposed to look and describe as days of elegant leisure and idleness on the part of the Southern people. The commissioners say: "The working department, which the board conceive to be one of the most prominent and efficient auxiliaries that has been, or can be employed to give useful knowledge to any class, cannot, under the existing circumstances, be made as effectual as could be desired."

Friday, June 29, 1849, and the Sunday following, were set apart for a public examination of the pupils and for a dedication of the building. Hon. Augustus R. Wright, of Cassville, Ga., was chosen to deliver the dedication address, and Rev. N. G. Foster, of Madison, Ga., the dedication sermon. From the high standing of these gentlemen as persons of acknowledged ability and eloquence, it is perhaps unnecessary to say that a large concourse of people were on hand to witness the novel exercises, and to listen to the eloquent and learned discourses delivered by them, and in which they did full justice both to the theme and to the occasion.

On the first day of July, 1849, Sunday, the Georgia Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb began its first legitimate work.

In the year 1850 the ell leading in an easterly direction, twenty-seven feet wide by fifty-five feet long, was added.

In 1854 the time allowed the pupils in school was increased from four years to six years.

In 1857 the south extension, fifty feet wide by seventy-two feet long, was added, together with the twenty by twenty-seven feet addition to the east end. At the same time the old roof was taken off, and a new one of different style substituted, covering the entire building. In this year, also, the shop building of brick, thirty feet by one hundred feet and two stories high, was erected.

In the autumn of 1858 Mr. Fannin retired from the work, of which, from the time of its inauguration in the deaf-mute department of the Hearn School to the time of his departure, he was the spirit and presiding genius. In every effort that was made to advance the interests of the deaf and dumb of Georgia, during this time, he was a principal factor. He was possessed of a rare insight into the difficulties that confronted the deaf mute in his every step in search of written language; most thorough in his mastery of and graceful in his use of the sign-language; patient and painstaking, and withal a most indefatigable worker; hence his success in imparting instruction was not to be wondered at. His kindness of heart gave him a genial disposition and personal magnetism that made him friends wherever he was known.

Up to this time the Asylum was managed under several different heads, each independent of the other and responsible only to the board of commissioners.

The offices of steward and matron were filled in succession under this plan by John M. Carroll and wife, 1849-1850; Dr. William A. Love and wife, 1851-1853, Dr. Love also filling a position as teacher; Seaborn J. Johnson and wife, 1854-1857; Peter W. McDaniel, for a few months in 1858, and Alexander T. Harper, 1858-1859.

Mr. Fannin was succeeded as principal by Mr. Samuel F. Dunlap, of Indiana, who entered upon his work in September, 1858. At the following session of the legislature an act was passed making the principal the executive head of the Institution, and responsible to the board of trustees for its management in all its departments, which was a long step forward in the right direction. At the same time the name of the board of commissioners was changed to the board of trustees, and the name of the school changed from the Georgia Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb to the Georgia Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb.

Mr. Dunlap was retired in April, 1860, and the position of principal tendered Mr. Wesley O. Connor, a young gentleman who had entered the Institution in 1857, under Mr. Fannin, to learn the art of teaching the deaf and dumb, and who was not yet nineteen years of age ; but he declined the honor designed to be conferred upon him at so youthful an age, not being willing to assume so weighty a responsibility at his age and with his three years' experience.

Mr. William D. Cooke, principal for sixteen years of the North Carolina Institution, was elected to fill the position of principal, which he accepted, entering upon his duties the first of September, 1860; the steward, with the assistance of the teachers, in the meantime, carrying on the school to its close on the 1st Wednesday in June.

In June, 1861, Mr. W. O. Connor, having resigned his position as teacher, took leave of the Institution and of his friends to enter the Confederate service as a private soldier. Later in the year Mr. J. S. Davis resigned for the same purpose, and thus the Institution was left without a male teacher.

When the trustees met, the latter part of June, a committee of one, Mr. W. R. Webster, was sent to the camp of instruction at Big Shanty, at which Mr. Connor was drilling, to see if he could be prevailed upon to return to the service of the Institution, as he was more needed there than in the field; but he declined to return, although it was intimated to him by this committee that a vacancy in the position of principal was probable, in which case it would be open to him as a bomb-proof place under the State government for the war.

From the opening of the Institution proper, in 1849, to March, 1862, there was no break in the operations of the school, which had continued to increase in numbers until there were about sixty pupils in attendance. At this date, on account of the turbulent and exciting times, as well as from the fact that the two teachers on whom the principal relied most were absent in the army, the trustees thought best to close the doors of the Institution, which was accordingly done. All the pupils were sent home with the exception of two orphan girls, and a family selected to live in the building, both to care for the two girls and to endeavor to protect the property.

During the whole four years of war, although the village was first in the hands of the Confederate and then of the Federal troops, the premises escaped without material injury. Much of the bedding, table-ware, and furniture was donated to the hospitals, and the rest scattered in various ways. The building was occupied for short periods as a hospital by both the Federal and Confederate authorities. The school-desks and large slate blackboards escaped uninjured, for the reason, it is supposed, that these were two articles that a soldier could turn to no possible use. The two girls, Misses Hudgins and Bishop, remained during the war and re-entered the school in 1867.

At the session of the legislature in November, 1866, the first to assemble after the war, an appropriation was made for reopening the school, and a board of trustees appointed, five of whom had been members of the former board. This body met as soon as practicable after its appointment, and called Mr. W. O. Connor, who had ended his career as a soldier in prison at Camp Chase, near Columbus, Ohio, to the principalship. Mr. Connor, after his return from his four years' service, entered upon agricultural pursuits in Cherokee county, Alabama, with the intention of making it his life business, and had not only not mentioned anything about re-entering the work of instructing the deaf and dumb, but had given the subject no thought. The State was not destined, however, to lose his services, and he was literally taken from between the plow-handles and placed at the head of the Institution. Rev. B. B. Quillian and wife were appointed steward and matron, and Mr. James S. Davis installed in his old place as teacher. All necessary arrangements having been completed, the doors of the Institution were again thrown open for the reception of pupils, and the exercises of the school resumed on the fourth day of February, 1867, after a cessation of nearly five years, which covered a period fraught with the most momentous events of our country's history. There were eight pupils present on opening day, but the number soon ran up to twenty-five. From that time to the present, the exercises have continued without interruption, though several times, during the vicissitudes of military government and reconstruction, it was thought the Institution would be compelled to close its doors; but somehow it escaped such a calamity. Once, however, if Governor Bulloch had not assumed a personal responsibility for the money necessary to keep it going rather than see its usefulness even temporarily suspended, the school would have been disbanded for want of funds.

In 1873 fifteen hundred dollars were expended to secure a supply of water for domestic purposes from the spring on the premises.

Early in the year 1877 an act was passed by the legislature appointing a new board of trustees, and prescribing that the principal should have his residence in the Institution, which up to this time had not been the case. An act was also passed extending the time allowed pupils to remain in school to seven years for all, and power conferred upon the board to grant an additional three years' term in certain cases, upon recommendation of the principal.

The board met as soon as convenient and, among other things acted upon, abolished the office of steward, as it was deemed an unnecessary one in a small Institution, requiring the principal to assume the duties that had to this time devolved upon this officer.

In 1878 the brick building, two stories high and twenty by thirty-six feet in size, and known as the store-rooms, was erected, and the capacity of the water-works increased so as to give partial fire protection.

In 1882 the north extension, for the use of the principal and his family, was added, and in this year the department for negro deaf-mutes was opened in a building of brick sixty by eighty feet in dimensions and two stories high, purchased for the purpose, and located about two hundred and fifty yards from the main or dormitory building for the whites. F. M. Gordon and W. A. Caldwell are the teachers, and Mrs. Lucinda Gordon matron—all colored people. In Georgia the State laws require separate schools for negro and white children.

In 1885 the school-building was begun, which was finished and occupied in 1889. This building is a handsome and substantial structure, and well adapted for the uses for which it was designed.

The roof on the dormitory was replaced in 1887-1888 by a handsome one of the mausard pattern, by which were secured, not only about twenty-five comfortable rooms, but a marked improvement in the appearance of the building.

The engine-house and laundry was added in 1890, and well equipped with engine and boiler, all necessary laundry machinery, and a five-hundred-gallon steam-pump; six-inch water mains laid, with ten Ludlow fire-plugs conveniently located; hose-carriage with seven hundred feet of fire department hose purchased, and four steel stair fire-escapes erected to the different buildings where needed, and this brings the history of the school to the year 1893.

In all these years the attendance has gradually increased, of its own accord, as no special efforts were made to secure an attendance of a larger number, for the reason that until within the past year the dormitory was crowded to its fullest extent.

The Georgia school has kept pretty well up with those of her sister States in her school work proper, but in her educational work in other respects she still falls behind some of them, notably in the departments of manual and technical training.

The combined method of instruction is used—that is, speech and lip-reading are taught to those to whom they can be made of practical use in their intercourse with their fellow-men, and the manual alphabet and sign-language used in imparting instruction to all.

The attendance is seventy white and thirty negro pupils, who are taught by seven teachers.

OF THE
SOUTH CAROLINA INSTITUTION
FOR THE
Education of the Deaf and the Blind.

PREPARED BY N. F. WALKER,
FEBRUARY, 1893.

CEDAR SPRING, S. C.

THE SOUTH CAROLINA INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND THE BLIND.

FOR THE

Education of the Deaf and the Blind.

This Institution was established, at its present location, Cedar Spring, Spartanburg county, S. C., by Rev. Newton Pinckney Walker, in 1849. On the 22d of January of that year Mr. Walker admitted a class of five deaf children into his school for speaking and hearing children. By the end of the year three additional pupils had joined this class and Mr. Walker decided to devote his entire time to the education of the deaf. He had spent a few months during the year 1848 at the Cave Spring (Georgia) School for the Deaf, preparing himself for this special work. Dr. J. H. Johnson, the present Principal of the Alabama Institution for the Deaf, informed the writer recently that he was teaching at the Cave Spring School in 1848 and gave Mr. Walker his first lesson in the use of the Manual alphabet.

The names of the five pupils first admitted are as follows :

John M. Hughston,	E. Jane Hughston,
E. Melton Hughston,	Irene A. Cooper,
Harvey W. Bennett.

All of the above were residents of Spartanburg county, in which the Institution is located.

The founder of the school was born in said county on the 29th of November, 1816.

In the first printed report of the Institution (1854) Mr. Walker says: " Little did I think, a few years ago, that I would ever be as I now find myself—surrounded by multiplied cares of so peculiar a character; children whose condition in life gives point to the sacredness of the trust; when indeed, at first, I aspired to nothing higher in this sphere of action than the amelioration of the intellectual condition of a few deaf-mute relatives of my wife." In the same report he says: "From these statements it would appear that, as the Institution is now being conducted, it might continue to dispense its blessings, though in an humble manner, without disturbance. And were I to consult nothing except my own interest in a pecuniary point of view, or self-composure in the uninterrupted possession of this property—a something which 'nature calls its own,' I might never ask for any change, feeling that I am sufficiently compensated to raise my family as my neighbors are doing. * * But over all this, I submit for your consideration, and of citizens of the State generally, that private property, being subject to forego material changes, is always unsafe for public purposes. And though content in my humble sphere, trying to manage my business as a unit, in an individual, independent manner, yet I am willing to acquiesce in any change in the matter which might be dictated by candid deliberation. My great desire is that the Institution, in some form, be perpetuated in all time, in such a manner as to reflect honor according to that form, whether individual or State protection be thrown around it."

In April, 1855, a department for the Blind was added, with Professor James S. Henderson, a graduate of the Tennessee School for the Blind, as principal teacher.

In 1857 the school was changed from an individual enterprise to a State institution, and the Legislature made a liberal appropriation for the erection of suitable buildings.

The death of the Principal, Rev. N. P. Walker, occurred November 13, 1861. In the Annual Report of the Board of Commissioners to the Legislature, after the death of the Principal, they say: "In the last report of our predecessors, your body was also advised of the death of the Principal, N. P. Walker, which occurred previous to the report, but after the expiration of the fiscal year. We have not supplied his place by the appointment of another. This we could not have done if we had deemed it advisable, because of the appropriation for the support of the Institution being less than it had been for the two preceding years. We are satisfied, however, that no change in the management or government of the Institution is desirable.

* * The Professors and their Assistants are connected by blood or marriage; the utmost harmony prevails, and each appears desirous of advancing the interest of the Institution; and the introduction of a stranger as Superintendent and governor would probably cause dissatisfaction and destroy that harmony which is necessary to success. The only change made in the employees is the appointment of a Steward, who is the son of the late Superintendent. We therefore, at present, propose no further change, and have directed the Institution to be conducted in the same manner as the last year." The school was carried on in this way, without the appointment of a Superintendent, from November, 1861, to April, 1865, at which time, on account of the unsettled condition of the country and of the finances of the State—the Civil War having just ended—it became necessary to close its doors and to send the pupils to their homes.

No statement of the origin of the school, with its successes and its difficulties, would be complete without mentioning that in all things the founder had a faithful co-worker in his wife, Mrs. Martha L. Walker, who, by her personal labor and constant words of cheer and encouragement made success possible.

She still lives (February, 1893,) and delights in the continued success and growth of the school.

In October, 1866, J. S. Henderson and N. F. Walker were appointed Associate Principals, and the Institution was reopened; but after one session was again closed on account of the continued unsettled condition of the State's finances.

In September, 1869, the school was again reopened, with J. M. Hughston, a graduate of the Institution, as Superintendent. In 1872 Mr. Hughston resigned and the present Superintendent, N. F. Walker, was appointed. During the school-year of 1872-'73, by the direction of the Board of Commissioners, a building, on a lot adjoining the Institution, was fitted up for the opening of a department for colored pupils. On the 17th of September, 1873, the following instructions from the Board of Commissioners were placed in the hands of Superintendent Walker:

"First. Colored pupils must not only be admitted into the Institution on application, but an earnest and faithful effort must be made to induce such pupils to apply for admission.

"Second. Such pupils, when admitted, must be domiciled in the same building, must eat at the same table, and be taught in the same class-rooms and by the same teachers, and must receive the same attention, care, and consideration as white pupils."

On the reception of the above order the Superintendent and all other officers and teachers sent in their resignations. An effort was made to secure a Superintendent and teachers who would accept and be governed by the above instructions, but it failed. The school, on account of above order, was closed from September, 1873, to September, 1876. It is proper that it should be stated that the same political party which was in power and issued the above instructions directed the reopening early in the year 1876, on the basis of the original arrangement, viz.: the establishment of separate departments for white and colored pupils. Superintendent Walker and most of his corps of teachers were reappointed. The progress of the school has been uninterrupted since its reorganization in 1876.

The Department for colored pupils was opened in 1883.

South Carolina took her first step in the matter of educating her deaf children in 1832, or at least sent her first pupils to the Hartford (Connecticut) School during that year. From 1832 to 1849, the date of the opening of the Cedar Spring School, the State paid the whole or a part of the expenses of seventeen pupils at the Hartford Institution. Mrs. S. W. C. Rogers, nee Holmes, who now (February, 1893,) lives near Cedar Spring, and her brother, Joseph Holmes, were the first children sent by the State to Hartford.

A special teacher of Articulation was employed in 1880, and a second teacher was added to this Department in 1887. A teacher of Drawing and Painting was added to the Corps of Instructors in 1889. Fourteen pupils are receiving instruction in this Department at present.

All pupils have training in some handicraft or useful occupation. The following schedule of hours is observed :

Breakfast, 7. A. M.

Morning Prayers and opening school, 8 A. M.

School closes, 1 P. M.

Dinner, 1:15 P. M. •

Shop-work, 2 to 5 P. M.

Supper, 6 P. M.

Study-Hour, 7 to 8 P. M.

Evening Prayers, 8 P. M.

Retire, 9 P. M.

The above schedule gives the pupils eight to nine hours' work in Literary and Industrial Departments each day. On Saturday the pupils are engaged in Industrial Department from 8 A. M. to 12 M. On Sunday morning one hour is spent in Sunday-school work by the teachers with their respective classes; in the afternoon one hour or more is spent in the Chapel in Bible lectures or the reading of sermons.

The Institution is located four miles south of the city of Spartanburg, in the Piedmont section of the State, in a county which borders on North Carolina. It is situated on and owns a tract of 157 acres of land. The building is 210 feet front, with an average depth of 65 feet; three stories high, heated by steam, and supplied with pure water from a large, bold spring. The water is forced into tanks in the attic of the main building by means of a hydraulic ram.

Cedar Spring was known prior to the Revolutionary war as Green Spring. It took its present name from the fact that formerly a large cedar tree stood very near the spring. The place is historical. A battle was fought here between the Whigs and Tories on the 13th of July, 1780.

School for the Deaf and Dumb.

Until a few years ago there stood near the outskirts of Fulton a dilapidated frame building, in which had been begun the work of educating the deaf of Missouri. In contrast to this edifice, scarcely a mile away, stand the magnificent buildings where the work is being vigorously prosecuted. This growth all took place within the life time of one man, who lived to see his work apparently destroyed but to reappear like the fabled bird of antiquity in a more enduring and symmetrical form. The school came into existence in 1851, under the provisions of an act, approved on February 28th, by which 40 acres of land with the buildings thereon were transferred from the Asylum for the Insane to the Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb.

The founder of the school was a young man teaching in the Kentucky School for the Deaf, at Danville. One evening, after his day's work, he chanced to glance at a map of the Western States, and his thoughts dwelt on the many children of silence in Missouri, growing up in ignorance, unprovided and uncared for. The impulse came to him to write to two of his friends, Rev. W. W. Robertson and Mr. Preston B. Reed, to influence them in behalf of the deaf of their State. These gentlemen resided in Fulton, and one, Mr. Reed, was a member of the Legislature, although Mr. Kerr was not aware of it at the time. Their sympathies were actively enlisted and mainly through their representations the act was passed to establish the school. In looking around for one to guide the destinies of the newly started enterprise, the thoughts of the projectors reverted to their friend in Kentucky, whose earnest words had influenced their cause of action, and they offered him the place. He hesitated long, but finally accepted and prepared to bid adieu to the scenes of his early manhood where he had spent twenty years in teaching the deaf. Just as he was about to start for Cincinnati, he was detained by the illness of his little son. This proved a fortunate circumstance, as the boat on which he had engaged passage to St. Louis was wrecked and many passengers lost their lives. In due time he reached Fulton with his family and set about carrying on his work in the new field. The preparations were completed during the summer, and on the fifth day of November, 1851, the school was formally opened with one pupil from St. Louis. This was a little Hebrew boy, named John Isaacs.

At first the growth of attendance was slow, but by the end of the first session in July, 1852, an enrollment of seventeen was recorded. This number was augmented during the second year to fifty-four. The number of pupils soon proved too much for the capacity of the original farm building and in 1854, a tract of eighteen acres was purchased a quarter of a mile northwest of the original site, and a commodious building was erected thereon at a cost of $28,000. This building was dedicated by the Rev. N. L. Rice, a noted divine of the day, and the father of Mrs. E. M. R. Taylor, the present instructor of the art department. These quarters proved adequate to the needs of the school for over a decade. During the civil war, the work was suspended. Supt. Kerr retired to a farm in Audrain County, about 20 miles north of Fulton. He took with him several of his pupils who had no homes and there continued their education. The Federal authorities made use of the establishment as a barracks and military prison. On April 25, 1863, the Board of Commissioners formally took possession of the grounds and buildings and reopened the school. Supt. Kerr was induced to take charge of its affairs, which control he only relinquished at the behests of advanced age. The Superintendent also acted as steward besides performing his duties in the school room. The growth of the school and the corresponding increase in its accounts influenced the Board of Commissioners to ask for a steward to attend to the subsistence department and thus allow the Superintendent to devote more time to the educational department. In their report for 1857-58, the Board of Commissioners had asked for authority to appoint a steward to relieve the Superintendent of the financial management. This was granted, but after the reopening of the school in 1863, the Superintendent again was required to perform the duties of steward, which soon grew too onerous. Accordingly Mr. James K. Sheley was appointed in 1873 as steward, and Mrs. Kate B. Sheley as matron. Mrs. Susan M. Kerr, after assisting her husband for 21 years as matron, resigned in 1872, to be succeeded by Miss C. C. McNair, who retired in 1873. Mr. and Mrs. Sheley filled their positions faithfully and acceptably until 1889, when Mr. Sheley was forced by failing health to retire. Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Overton were elected to fill the vacancies. In June, 1891, Mr. J. E. Watson and Mrs. Mary Gathright were elected steward and matron, and have held the positions since.

Mr. Kerr continued to manage the affairs of the institution so well, that in 1872 a new three-story school house had to be built to accommodate the increased attendance.

But these additions proved inadequate and in 1883 the front and wings were altered and enlarged to give 21 more rooms for dormitory and hospital use. On the night of February 27, 1888, while the pupils were assembled for study, a fire was discovered in the tower of the centre building. Every thing possible was done to check the flames, but as there was no fire engine, although an abundant quantity of water was only a short distance away, the fire continued to spread. A strong breeze from the southeast aided in the work of demolition, and only the school house was saved. The citizens of Fulton rendered valuable assistance in saving the clothing and household goods of the institution. They also generously took care of the children until the Board was able to make temporary arrangements for their care. The large brick shops, which had just been completed, were cleared out and fitted up as dormitories for the girls. The boys were lodged in the two-story brick building which had been used as the printing-office and shoe-shop. With the funds for enlarging the barn, the Board erected a temporary dining-hall of pine boarding. This was afterwards used as a temporary carpenter-shop. In a week after the fire, the school duties were resumed. Two theories have been advanced to account for the origin of the fire. One was that it resulted from a defective flue in the centre building; the other that it was caused by the defective insulation of the electric wires. The latter is probably the correct theory.

Only a few months before the fire the Board had increased the insurance on the main buildings to $65,000. The companies interested promptly met their obligations, and in consideration of an early settlement, a small discount was deducted. With the $64,500 of insurance money and $11,630 of balances from other funds, the Board proceeded to rebuild. The east wing was erected under the direction of the steward, Mr. Sheley and Mr. W. H. Humphreys, the foreman of the cabinet shop, at a cost of $5,580.89. The centre building and west wings were let to P. McCarty & Co., of St. Louis, for $70,450. The work on these buildings was confined to making them tenantable, further appropriations being expected to finish the interior. The General Assembly of 1889 appropriated $30,000 to complete these buildings. For the construction of a dining room extension, with study room and kitchen, an appropriation of $20,000 was made. To provide a new school building, $30,000 was granted. These buildings now furnish sufficient accommodations for 325 pupils.

The infirmities of advanced age had begun to press heavily on the venerable Superintendent. Along with his seventeenth and last biennial report to the Board of Commissioners, he presented his resignation. On the 28th of February, 1889, he laid aside the harness of an educator of the deaf, which he had worn continuously for fifty-eight years. His health had been feeble for some time, and his friends feared that the sudden release from the cares of the institution would be fatal. Their fears seemed unfounded for three months, but on the morning of the 24th of May,—scarcely three months later—he sank to his eternal rest. No man stood higher in the regard of the community than Dr. Kerr, as the vast concourse at his funeral testified. His body was borne to its last resting place by the male teachers, and laid by the side of his wife and sons who had preceeded him. Only two weeks before his death, the faculty of the National Deaf-Mute College, of Washington, D. C., had conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters, in consideration of his distinguished services in the cause of deaf-mute education.

The mantle of Dr. Kerr fell to his assistant superintendent, who was elected in June, 1889, to the superintendency. Trained by the venerable head, Mr. Tate has carried forward the work with fresh vigor. He commenced his work as a teacher in 1876, when he was appointed soon after graduating from Westminster College. By successive steps he rose from teaching a primary class to the highest class and to the position of assistant superintendent in 1887.

DESCRIPTION OF BUILDINGS.

The buildings are grouped in a semi-circle with the school house on the west and the trades building on the east. They consist of ten substantial brick structures, having a frontage of 600 feet, including the school and manual training buildings, and an extreme depth of 212 feet. The main buildings stand on a terrace, from which the lawn slopes gently southward. They are flanked on the east and west by the boiler-house and laundry and the girls' gymnasium, respectively. The centre building is a four-story structure, and the wings are three stories high. They are connected by 35-foot corridors, which are fire proof. In the rear of the west centre wing is the dining hall extension. This is a two-story fire-proof brick building, 75 x 90 feet. The centre building and west wings are of fire-proof material and have iron stairways. The east transverse wing was used as the school house until the fall of 1891, when the new school building was ready for occupancy. The centre building and transverse west wings are used as sleeping quarters by the girls and female teachers and employes. The girls' workshops and study rooms are also located here. The girls' hospital is in the west centre wing. The transverse east wing is occupied by the boys and their hospital is in the west centre wing. The dining hall addition has a refectory 75 x 45 feet, with an extension of 45 x 45 feet, on the second floor. It has a seating capacity for 350. The first floor is used as the study room of the younger boys, and the kitchen and pantry are in the rear. The school house stands a short distance from the front of the west transverse wing. It is three stories in height and has a ten-and-a-half-foot basement. It contains twenty rooms and a chapel and gallery, capable of seating 800 persons. The rooms are all large and well-lighted and ventilated. A six-foot tunnel for steam pipes and electric light wires connects the school house with the transverse west wing, and affords a passageway for the pupils in very inclement weather.

METHODS OF INSTRUCTION.

The methods pursued in instructing the deaf are the same as those in a majority of the schools for the deaf in the United States. Although Mr. Kerr was a firm believer in the sign language as a means of instruction, yet he perceived early that a part of the pupils would be benefited by articulation, and advocated its introduction. In the report of 1867-68, he asked for the employment of a teacher of articulation. After repeated solicitation, the Board of Commissioners were granted the desired authority, and in 1873 Miss Mary C. McClelland, now Mrs. Mary M. Tate, was transferred from the sign department to take charge of the new venture. Under her able care the experiment proved very successful, and in 1881 Miss Eliza M. Reed was also transferred to this department, on account of the growth of the class in articulation. In 1888 it was decided to try the experiment of teaching pupils by the oral method. The result has proved satisfactory, though the number of pupils in a class must be limited. At present sixty pupils receive instruction in articulation for 40 minutes each day. The rest of their school day is spent in the sign department. Six pupils are taught orally during the whole of the time. In the academic classes signs are almost entirely discarded and recitations are conducted by finger spelling and writing.

A brief sketch of the process pursued in beginning the education of a deaf and dumb child by means of the sign language would not be out of place here. No just comparison can be made between the work of a teacher of the deaf and that of a public school teacher. The one gives individual instruction to his class; the other addresses them in the aggregate. Moreover, the hearing child acquires at home a vocabulary, of which his teacher avails himself, but a deaf child very seldom has such a previous instruction. He comes to school with his mind a total blank. He does not know the names of even the simplest actions and household objects. The child is taught to form the letters of the alphabet on his fingers and to write them. Then the picture of some familiar object, as that of a dog, is shown him. The name of the object is written out, and he is taught to spell it on his fingers and to copy it on his slate. Then more names are learned, and in a similar way he learns the names of visible actions. One of the class is directed to walk. The name of the action is taught and its connection with the action is impressed on his mind. Having mastered the names of several objects and actions, he is instructed how to form them into simple sentences. Usually after a year's instruction a pupil knows the names of from twenty-five to fifty objects and of most of the visible actions. With a good start, the child increases the store of his knowledge and finishes his course in the school with the history of his country and of the world and practical arithmetic. In articulation the semi-mute is instructed on the right pronunciation of words, and to read the motions of the lips. Oral teaching is by a kind of sign language—substituting the motions of the lips for the gestures of the hands.

MISSOURI SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB BEFORE THE FIRE IN 1888.

TIME OF INSTRUCTION.

By the provisions of the act establishing the school, pupils were allowed the benefits of the institution for three years. This was increased in 1855 to five years, and again in 1857 to seven years. Subsequently the benefits of the school were granted for ten years, but this period was reduced in 1877 to eight years. This law continued in force until 1889 when the time was extended to ten years. This can hardly be considered too long when hearing children, with all their faculties, are instructed from twelve to sixteen years. The fact that the deaf have to surmount greater obstacles than the hearing in acquiring an education ought to secure them a longer period of instruction than the hearing. This proves sufficient in most cases to give the deaf a practical knowledge of the English language and mathematics.

The ages of seven and thirty were fixed upon as the extremes between which pupils could be admitted. This was on account of the large number of deaf children who had grown up to maturity without the benefits of education. Many of the earlier pupils were from 18 to 25 years of age at the time of their admission. As the school became better known, younger pupils came in and it was rare to admit any at 25 years of age. During the period of retrenchment and reform, induced by the depression in value of property in 1877, the limits were fixed at nine and twenty-one. At the revision of the statutes in 1889, they were changed to eight and twenty-one. Once in a while, a child is brought who has passed the limit, but these cases are happily becoming rarer.

In the early days of the school it was a difficult matter to induce parents to send their children to be educated. This was due to a mistaken impression that they could not be benefited. Some were influenced by a misplaced affection, others by parsimony and many by timidity. To remove these obstacles it was the practice of the Superintendent or one of the teachers to give exhibitions with one or two pupils during the summer vacation. These exhibitions were usually given in the large cities and other localities where deaf children were known to exist. They contributed much to overcome the prejudices, fears and morbid affections of parents. But this plan entailed a considerable expense which was beyond the means of the Superintendent or teacher to continue several years in succession, and it was soon abandoned.

Assessors of taxes in the counties were required to return the number of deaf children in their districts, but this requirement was very imperfectly observed. Reports of the school were sent to those having the care of deaf children, and proved fairly fruitful of results. Within the decade circulars setting forth the benefits of the institution have been mailed. The names and addresses of the parents of deaf children were obtained from the Census Bureau, and they were induced by circulars to send their children to the school. The benefits of this school were free only to indigent children, parents were obliged to go before the courts and establish their inability to pay for their child's education. This requirement was rescinded in 1871, since which time the benefits have been free to all deaf children of proper school age.

In the fall of 1892, the school session was begun with a division of the classes into primary, grammar, and academic grades. There are seven primary classes, and three grammar and academic classes. In the primary and grammar grade, the teacher has charge of his class all the time. In the academic grade the classes rotate among three teachers, each instructing them in a particular branch of study. In COURSE OF STUDY.

First Year.

LANGUAGE—Names of common objects; a few simple verbs. Writing from actions. American Asylum series, number 1, commenced and completed, if possible. Wing's symbols commenced.

ARITHMETIC—Numbers from one to ten, exercises in combining and arranging objects, illustrating the four simple rules in arithmetic. [Geography of the institution, of Fulton, and of Missouri commenced the first year and enlarged upon for the two succeeding years. Also teach the pupils to analyze every object whose name comes before them. This process is kept up through the entire course. The aim of every successful teacher is to lead the pupils to think.]

PENMANSHIP—Simple exercises in copying and tracing. Copy book number 1, Analytical series.

Second Year.

LANGUAGE—American Asylum series, numbers 1 and 2. Writing from actions, objects, and pictures. Questions and answers. Wing's symbols.

ARITHMETIC—Exercises of first year enlarged upon; and numbers above ten introduced at the discretion of the teacher, involving principles of the four simple rules of arithmetic.

PENMANSHIP—Simple exercises in copying and letter writing. Copy book number 2.

Third Year.

LANGUAGE—American Asylum series, numbers 2 and 3. Journal and story writing. Writing from actions and pictures. Original sentences on words and phrases. Wing's symbols.

ARITHMETIC—Regular exercises in the four fundamental rules. Work prepared by the teacher and suited to the capabilities of the class.

PENMANSHIP—Copy book number 3. Letter writing.

Fourth Year.

LANGUAGE—American Asylum series, numbers 3 and 4.

Journal and story writing. Writing from actions and pictures. Words and phrases. Wing's symbols.

GEOGRAPHY—Monteith's First Lessons. Map drawing.

ARITHMETIC—The processes of the third year enlarged upon. Problems introduced, prepared by the teacher. Miss Barton's Arithmetic used as a guide to the teacher.

PENMANSHIP—Copy book number 4. Letter writing.

Fifth Year.

GEOGRAPHY—Monteith's Introduction to the Manual. Map drawing.

LANGUAGE—American Asylum series, number 4 completed. Journal and story writing. Writing from actions. Original sentences on words and phrases. Description of objects. Wing's symbols. Reed and Kellogg's system of diagraming begun. Class not to use book.

ARITHMETIC—Same as fourth year, carried farther. Problems more complex. Multiplication table committed to memory, also division table, numbers as high as twelve.

PENMANSHIP—Copy book number 5. Letter writing.

Sixth Year.

LANGUAGE—Talks and Stories, published by the American Asylum. Journal and story writing. Writing from actions. Original sentences on words and phrases. Description of objects continued. Wing's symbols.

GRAMMAR—Swinton's Language Primer introduced and completed,—books used by class. Diagraming,—Reed and Kellogg's system, class not to use book.

GEOGRAPHY—Monteith's Manual completed, special attention given to geography of Missouri, county seats, townships, ranges, sections, and parts of sections, railroad systems. Map drawing.

BOTANY—The Child's Book of Nature, part I—Plants, —by Hooker.

ARITHMETIC—Miss Barton's introduced, Part I. Steps to be carefully stated and answers given in language.

PENMANSHIP—Copy books. Business forms. Letter writing.

Seventh Year.

LANGUAGE—Compositions. Writing from actions. Original exercises in words and phrases. Reading lessons. Descriptions.

GRAMMAR—Reed and Kellogg's Elementary introduced and completed, if possible. Definitions.

HISTORY—Lossing's Primary History of the United States and others used by the teacher.

PHYSIOLOGY—Teacher's Hand-Book to Smith's American Manikin and other books used by the teacher. Manikin by class.

ARITHMETIC—Work of previous year continued and reviewed. Miss Barton's Book completed.

PENMANSHIP—Business forms continued. Letter writing and compositions.

Eighth Year.

LANGUAGE—Reading lessons. Original compositions. Words and phrases.

GRAMMAR—Reed and Kellogg's Elementary Grammar continued and Reed and Kellogg's Higher Lessons in English introduced. Definitions.

HISTORY—Lossing's Primary History of the United States.

PHYSIOLOGY—1st Term, Cutter's Beginner's, 2nd term. The Child's Book of Nature. Part II,—Animals, by Hooker.

ARITHMETIC—Franklin's Elementary.

PENMANSHIP—Letter writing.

Ninth Year.

LANGUAGE—Original compositions. Words and phrases.

Reading lessons. Definitions.

GRAMMAR—Reed and Kellogg's High Lessons in English continued.

PHILOSOPHY—1st Term, The Child's Book of Nature, Part III. Air, Water, Heat, Light, etc.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT—2nd term Townsend's Seventy Lessons.

ARITHMETIC—Franklin's Written.

PENMANSHIP—Letter writing.

Tenth Year.

GRAMMAR—Reed and Kellogg's Higher Lessons or Kerl's Academic.

HISTORY—Outlines of World's History or English.

PHYSICAL GEOGRAPHY—Huston's.

Original compositions weekly.—Penmanship and letter writing.

The preceding course of study combines the excellent features of former ones. These had been found serviceable in preparing the deaf for future usefulness. The school may well be proud of the record its graduates have made. One made some reputation as a writer of verse; another has become the leading chemist of a large Chicago smelting company, several have become teachers in their Alma mater; one has become the foreman of the cabinet shop of the Louisiana School; the rest are scattered over the State, earning comfortable livings at their occupations the rudiments of which they learned at the school.

PRESENT SCHEDULE.

The school formerly had two sessions a day. The morning session was devoted to the school room work; the afternoon session was given to manual training. For a long time this system worked satisfactorily, but finally the number of pupils severely taxed the facilities of the industrial departments. Accordingly, in 1890, the present schedule was adopted. It provides for three sessions of $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours each. The classes of the school are grouped in three sections, as nearly equal in number as possible. Two sections are in school while one section is in the manual training department. These sections rotate monthly. Each section has five hours of school work and $2\frac{1}{2}$ hours of industrial training. The sections are designated A, B, and C, respectively. In September A is in school from 8 o'clock to 10:20, and again from 10:30 to 12:50. From 2:00 to 4:30 it is in the shops. B is in school from 8:00 to 10:20 and from 2:00 to 4:30; in shops from 10:30 to 12:50. C begins the day in the shops from 8:00 to 10:20; its school work is done from 10:30 to 12:50 and from 2:00 to 4:30. During the next month A takes the place of B, and B that of C, and C moves to the place of A, and so on. The advantages of this plan are two-fold: more time can be devoted by the instructors in the industries to individuals in classes, because fewer come in sections, than when all come at once; and time passes more quickly and agreeably for pupils and teachers. The appended schedule makes further explanation unnecessary.

INDUSTRIAL TRAINING.

The value of manual training for our youth is acknowledged by educators. Manual schools have sprung up in all parts of the country to train the hearing youth in the use of their hands. Such a training is a greater necessity of the deaf than of the hearing, as the former is debarred by his deafness from otherwise acquiring a trade in this hurly-burly scramble for existence. Few employers have the inclination to take deaf apprentices or the time to teach them. Hence the deaf should acquire an industrial education at the same time they are acquiring other knowledge. This view early impressed the educators of the deaf and they make provisions therefor. Superintendent Kerr was impressed with the utility of such an education, and made repeated requests for appropriations for instituting a course in manual training.

The Legislature of 1866 made an appropriation of $3,000 for the erection and furnishing of shop buildings. The amount proved insufficient for the purpose. Nothing further was done until 1869 when the Board appointed an excellent carpenter, who had been employed on the school building, to superintend the repairing around the institution. He was assisted by a number of the larger boys. The management requested permission to make his employment permanent, but this application was not successful. They employed a deaf-mute in 1874 to give instruction in shoe-making to a few of the boys. This experiment proved highly successful, and in 1875 the Legislature granted authority to make the venture a permanent feature. Mr. George McCauley was appointed the next year, and has continued in his position since. The success of this department was followed by the establishment of a carpenter-shop with Mr. M. F. Bell, as foreman, in 1876. He continued in his position until 1883, when he resigned to devote his attention to his business as architect. The gentleman has since made a name in his chosen profession, and a score of private and public educational buildings testify to his skill. The present instructor in carpentry, Mr. William H. Humphreys, succeeded Mr. Bell, and has proven very efficient.

The printer's trade is one peculiarly adapted to the semi-mutes who have a taste for language. As no provision was made for teaching this industry, several boys were permitted to go to the town newspaper offices to acquire the trade. In 1879 a printing office was started with Prof. Henry C. English as instructor. Prof. English issued a four-column folio, semi-monthly, called The Missouri Deaf-Mute Record. This was soon changed to a weekly, and the editorial work assigned to another teacher, to allow the instructor more time to teach the industry. Prof. English continued in charge of the office until his death, January 8th, 1889. The editorial work had been in charge of Mr. Chas. M. Grow, Jr., who temporarily assumed the duties of foreman in addition. In April the writer, who had taken Prof. English's place in the class room, was appointed foreman, Mr. Grow continuing the editorial work. The foreman had been one of the original compositors with whom the Record was first issued. Up to this time the paper had been coming out as a four or eight page four-column quarto. In the fall of 1889 it was enlarged to a six column folio. This form had been retained. In December 1891, Mr. Grow retired from the editorial management, and the paper was edited by the publisher. Mr. Gross gave way last June to Mr. Wallace Williams, an old newspaper man of Fulton.

The adoption of uniforms was followed by the establishment of a tailor shop. The uniforms made by contract were not always well-fitting and did not prove entirely satisfactory in material. Mr. Chas. Merkle, who had several years' experience in teaching tailoring in the Philadelphia School for the Deaf, was appointed in September, 1891. This branch of industry is proving very satisfactory.

Mr. Louis Kuss, who has been serving as baker for the school since 1876, has been teaching five boys in his handicraft. They help him to furnish the bread and rolls consumed by the pupils. This is a good trade for the deaf-ment, and these are acquiring a most excellent means of making a livelihood.

The girls were taught house-work from the inception of the school. This included sewing and general needle-work. In 1888 a department of cutting and fitting was established. The older girls are instructed in measuring and cutting and fitting their dresses. The younger girls are instructed in needle-work. They take turns in attending to the cleaning of the table ware in the dining-room. All are required to keep their rooms in a neat and orderly condition.

An excellent aid in industrial training has been the art instruction given by Mrs. E. M. R. Taylor. The students acquire a better understanding of proportions and utilize their artistic talent in their occupations. This is especially shown in the carving done by some of the cabinet makers. The classes in art go from the industrial departments, one division twice and the other three times a week for 40 minutes each.

The work rooms of the girls are on the first floor of the west transverse wing. The classes in sewing and in cutting and fitting occupy separate rooms, each 47 feet by 20 feet. All the mending of boys' clothing is attended to by the classes in sewing, numbering 79 girls at present. The classes in cutting and fitting measure and make the uniform dresses and other garments of the girls and many of the uniforms of smaller boys. There are 38 girls in these classes. The younger girls pass from the sewing to the cutting and fitting classes as soon as they are proficient in needlework.

The industrial training of the boys, except the class in baking, is carried on in the manual training building. This is a two story brick building in the form of an L, having a length of 110 feet and depth of 100 feet. The carpenter and shoe shops are on the first floor and the printing

The carpenter shop is 82 x 45 feet in dimensions. There are 20 benches supplied with full sets of tools. Among its equipments are two turning lathes, a planer, two 12-inch rip saws, two scroll saws, a mortiser, a freizer and a moulding machine. All these are run by steam. The power is transmitted from the boiler house by means of a 7-8 inch steel wire cable, which also furnishes the motive power for the printing office. There are 36 boys learning the various branches of joinery work. They make all the furniture used about the institution, and attend to the repairing of the wood work and painting. Some very neat specimens of carving have been made lately. The boys also attend to the varnishing and polishing of the furniture. This is done in a room 20 x 24 feet, on the second floor. A section of the second floor, 34 x 45 feet, is used as the store room of the finished products. The value of the work done in this industry during the years 1891 and 1892 was $2,617.47.

The shoe shop occupies the south extension of 24 x 90 feet. Twenty-six boys receive instruction in making and mending shoes. The most proficient are able to cut and make the entire shoe. Four sewing machines of standard make are used. This shop does all the mending of the footwear of the pupils, and furnishes most of their boots and shoes. The aggregate value of work done in 1891 and 1892 was $2,116.50.

Immediately over the shop shop is the tailoring room. Here Mr. Merkle has twenty-three boys under instruction. They make the uniforms of the large boys and are busy all the time. This industry was established only one and a half years ago, but has already done work to the value of $2,388.00.

The northern part of the second floor is occupied by the printing-office, comprising two rooms devoted to composition and press work. The former is 45 x 25, the other 25 x 20. The office has an outfit well adapted to its purposes, consisting of sixteen cases of long primer, three cases of brevier, and two each of nonpareil and pica, with a varied assortment of display type, aggregating 1200 pounds. In the press room are a Cranston Cylinder Country press and a Liberty 13 x 19 job press. Among the other accessories are a 9 x 28 proof press, a 22 inch Paragon paper cutter, and a Lightning stapling machine, together with galley racks, imposing stones, and other necessary adjuncts of a first class printing-office. Besides issuing the Deaf-Mute Record weekly, the compositors do all the circular and job work needed in the school and office. The reports of the officers to the legislature have been printed here for the last ten years. The present force of compositors comprises thirteen. A number of the former compositors are now pursuing their occupation in country towns and, in several instances, having become the editors or foremen of papers. During the last two years the office turned out work to the value of $2,616.03.

LIBRARY.

No one can think of a school of this kind without the idea of a library suggesting itself. The library of this institution is almost as old as the school itself. Its nucleus was formed in 1855, when Mr. William Musgrove, then editor of the Lexington Express, interested his friends in collecting books for the school. A number of volumes were donated by the citizens of Lexington, and the list was augmented as the years passed until now there are 1181 volumes. A large well-lighted room in the rear portion of the centre building is used as the library. In handsomely polished oak cases, made in the cabinet shop, are classified the books. There are ten classes of works—embracing history, biography, poetry, science, fiction, travels, religious and miscellaneous works. A prominent class is the readers, comprising a full set of all the readers now published. These are among the most eagerly read of all the books.

Pupils have access to the library twice a week. Mr. Henry Gross acts as librarian and assists them in making a selection. By statute the Board of Managers are allowed to expend $200.00 annually for the benefit of the library. Last fall the books were reclassified by the librarian and a catalogue was prepared and this has been printed.

PHYSICAL CULTURE.

Although the need was early felt of giving physical training to the pupils, nothing definite was done in the direction until 1883, when the General Assembly granted $1,000.00 for fitting up a gymnasium. This appropriation was made at the instance of Senator James C. McGinnis, of St. Louis. The playroom of the girls was fitted up with a bowling alley and other gymnastic apparatuses. The basement of the school house was similarly arranged for the boys. The beneficial results of these arrangements were soon apparent in the increased vitality and elasticity of their bearing. The deaf as a class seem more prone to pulmonary affections than other people, and so are more in need of systematic physical culture. The fire of 1888 wiped out the girls' gymnasium, and in the confusion following, that of the boys was destroyed. After the completion of the main buildings, it was deemed best to have the gymnasium in separate quarters; accordingly the old shop building, which had escaped the flames, was remodelled and fitted up with bowling alley and other appliances. Here the girls drill for an hour three times a week. A course in calisthenics, comprising exercises in free movements, with wands, dumbbells and Indian clubs, is imparted by Miss Georgia Elliott.

These classes in calisthenics have taken part in the annual field day contests, and have made very creditable showings. The boys have no regular gymnasium, except what nature provides for them. However, they have excellent playgrounds which are extensive enough to admit of four games of base-ball being simultaneously played.

SOCIETIES OF THE PUPILS.

The pupils have two literary societies managed by themselves, with the assistance and advice of a teacher. That of the girls was founded in 1890 and comprises the girls of the four upper classes. The order of exercises consists of an essay, a debate between four members, two on a side, a dialogue and a declamation. The boys' society, named in honor of the founder of the school, was established in the fall of 1890. Its membership includes the three upper classes. The order of exercises is similar to that of the girls. Usually in the spring, these societies have a joint meeting in the chapel, to which the whole school is invited.

A circle of King's Daughters was formed among the girls in 1890. They meet once a month and give an interesting program. Many articles of fancy work have been made and sold by the members and the proceeds devoted to charity. The present circle has a membership of thirty-five. Branches of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor have also been formed among the older boys and girls and have influenced them for the better.

Outside of the school, there are two social and literary societies for the deaf, one each in St. Louis and Kansas City. The former is the older, having been founded in 1880, and comprises most of the adult deaf of that city. The Kansas City society has been formed recently. These associations take the lead in the social doings of the deaf. Lectures are given to their members and friends by invited speakers.

The social life is further enlivened by balls and parties, picnics and other amusements.

RECREATION AND AMUSEMENTS.

The saying that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" has its weight with the management. By the schedule already given, it is seen that the pupils are granted ample time for daily recreation. Saturday afternoons are regular half holidays, and those, whose deportment during the week has earned it, are allowed to make visits to the town. For the special holidays, as thanksgiving, etc., the teachers prepare entertainments. These have consisted of social parties, pantomines, shadow and open, tableaux, lectures and stereopticon views. They are in charge of a committee of three teachers for each holiday.

In order to develop a taste for reading, the teachers give monthly lectures to the five upper classes. The subjects are taken from among the standard works in the Library. A brief resume of the news of the day as gleaned from the daily papers, is posted in the two reading-rooms. These rooms are supplied with plenty of daily and weekly papers, and periodicals from other schools for the deaf. For two years a small paper was issued semi-weekly from the printing-office, filled with bits of news, suitable for the different grades of the school. This was called The Recorder, and was edited by the teachers who rotated weekly. Morning services are held daily in the chapel, conducted by the male teachers. These lectures precede the school work and last about fifteen minutes. On Sunday morning, after the service in the chapel led by the Superintendent, a half hour is devoted to Sunday School work. In the afternoon, the Superintendent gives short lectures on the history of the Bible. During the course of the week, the pupils reproduce these lectures as compositions.

UNIFORMS.

In the year 1890 a uniform was devised for the boys. In 1891 a uniform was fixed upon for the girls. The uniform for the large boys consists of four pieces, viz: coat, trousers, vest and cap. The small boys have knee pants and no vest. The material is cadet gray twenty ounce stuff to the yard, six-fourth yards wide. Three sizes of buttons are used, on each of which is found the words, "Missouri" across the center and "School for the Deaf and Dumb" around the margin. These suits are extremely neat and durable, and in the end economical.

Nothing could do so much to stimulate our boys to preserve their clothes as the uniform has done. Their conduct and bearing is evidently improved by this dress. The uniform is a source of protection to them from injury, incident to passing vehicles. As all these uniforms are made by the pupils in their trades, a number of them are thus afforded a means of becoming proficient in tailoring and dress-making.

The uniform for the girls was devised at their earnest request. They claimed partiality was shown to the boys. The uniform for the girls consists of dress and hat. The dress is of gray all wool serge, with yoke and cuffs of navy blue velvet, and standing collar. The hat is a blue straw sailor with band of blue gros grained ribbon two inches wide. A belt is used varying from one and one-half to two inches in width of navy blue velvet.

LEGISLATION.

Many changes have been made in the laws regulating this institution. Among the provisions of the act establishing the school was one allowing the sum of $80.00 per annum for the maintenance of each indigent pupil. This amount was subsequently increased to $100.00. All the other pupils were required to pay for their support and tuition. An indigent fund for the clothing and transportation of indigent pupils was furnished. The Superintendent attended to the boarding of the pupils until 1872, when the Board of Commissioners decided to assume entire charge of the subsistence department. A steward was appointed to attend to the accounts and make the necessary purchases. This system is still in vogue. The indigent fund law was repealed in the revision of the statutes in 1889. Hereafter indigent pupils can be clothed and transported at the expense of the county whence they come. Upon application of the parent, with proof of his indigency, the probate judge certifies the fact to the county court, which makes out the certificate to the child. In 1871, the benefits of the school were made free to rich and poor alike and have remained so since. This brought Missouri in line with the rest of the States of the Union.

In order to ascertain the number of the deaf population in the State, assessors of taxes were required to make returns but this law proved inoperative. A late enactment makes it the duty of school enumerators to report the names, age, sex and color of all deaf children in their districts to the county clerks, who are required to make returns to the superintendent of the school. This law has been but imperfectly observed.

A measure tending to hamper the work of the school room is the law requiring twenty pupils to a teacher. In order to comply with this law, classes have to be made up of different grades, for it is rare to find twenty pupils capable of making the same degree of progress. Consequently the brighter have to be kept back for their duller classmates. No other school has such a requirement. The graduates of the school felt the injustice of the statute, and at the reunion two years ago they passed a resolution asking for its repeal.

A separate department for the colored pupils was established in 1889. This is in charge of Mr. Monroe Ingram, a colored graduate of the Kansas School for the Deaf. The attendance this session is thirteen. The legal title of the school was at first Asylum. But this was repugnant and misleading, and in 1874 the name was changed to Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb. The present name was given in 1889.

HEATING AND LIGHTING.

Flanking the main buildings on the east is the two-story boiler house and laundry. This building was erected in 1880 at a cost of $10,000.00. In its five mammoth boilers is generated the steam to heat the entire establishment, comprising an interior of over two million cubic feet. The steam is conducted through pipes placed in six-foot tunnels to the main buildings, hence by another tunnel to the school house. The pipes for the trades building are laid in a box, though a tunnel is projected to connect this building with the boiler house. The average annual consumption of coal is about 48,000 bushels. The main buildings are heated with Bundy radiators, and the school house with the Perfection pattern. These are preferable to the old system of sheet radiators and pipes. The steam plant was put in under the direction of Mr. James Leach, who has rendered efficient service to the school for sixteen years.

In this building is located the dynamo to generate the electricity for lighting purposes. This machine is kept running all night. All methods of lighting, from tallow candles to gas, have been tried and discarded. Tallow candles gave way to kerosene lamps but these were a constant menace to the safety of the school. In 1870 sufficient appropriations were obtained to construct gas works. Unfortunately they were located too close to the buildings and proved far from satisfactory in other respects. In 1885, an electric light plant of the Edison system was put in. The fire of 1888 made a new plant necessary and the United States system was tried in a part of the buildings. There are at present 564 16-candle lamps in the establishment, lighted by a 250-lamp Edison dynamo. It is expected to procure another dynamo to relieve the present over-taxed machine.

An important factor in preserving the health of so large a community as ours is pure water. This is supplied in abundance from an artesian well of 707 feet depth in the boiler house. This well was sunk in 1883 and has not failed yet, though as much as 86,400 gallons have daily been pumped. The water is pumped into a large tank in the attic of the centre building, whence it flows to all parts of the place. The water has been found to contain traces of sulphur and iron. An artificial pond just north of the boiler house, supplied the school with water previous to the sinking of the artesian well. It is an excellent reservoir, and furnishes a plentiful supply of ice for the summer and water for steam heating and laundry purposes. Two ice-houses have been filled this winter with very thick and clear ice. The school has a pasture comprising about 100 acres. Here graze twenty milch cows, which supply the tables of the pupils with milk. A garden of five acres in the rear of the buildings is cultivated by the boys who are not in the manual training classes. Vegetable and fruits in season are furnished in plentiful quantities.

To prevent a repetition of the catastrophe of 1888 a water main has been laid to connect with the city water-works. Fire-plugs are placed at convenient distances around the buildings. The sanitary condition of the school is excellent. The grounds and buildings are kept in order by the steward and matron. The front has been laid out with walks and drive-ways, which, however, have not been completed for lack of funds.

A system of electric clocks was put in lately. It consists of 14 secondary clocks and connected with the central regulator are three tower clocks, and secures uniform time. The changes in divisions are made by means of a steam chime in the boiler house. It might be said that we wake, eat, and go to bed by chimes.

REUNION OF FORMER PUPILS.

In the spring of 1891 the Board of Managers, through the Superintendent, extended a cordial invitation to the former pupils of the institution to hold a reunion here. Over a hundred accepted and came from all directions, even from Pennsylvania. Several days were pleasantly and profitably spent in a social and business way. The new school building was dedicated by the Revs. A. W. Mann and J. H. Cloud, two deaf clergymen. The former has his head quarters in Cleveland, the other, in St. Louis. An association was formed of the graduates to be known as the Missouri Association of the Deaf. In the convention a number of interesting papers touching on the technical and moral education of the deaf were presented and discussed. The sentiment of the Association was in favor of a compulsory education law for the deaf, and a resolution was adopted petitioning the Legislature to pass such a measure. Another resolution asking for the repeal of the law requiring 20 pupils in a class to one teacher was also adopted. The meeting attracted considerable attention, as it was the first of its kind in the State. The time and place of the next meeting is left to the executive committee composed of the following officers: Henry Gross, president; Miss Dosia A. Grimmett, vice-president; Stephen Shuey, secretary; Chas.

L. Minor, treasurer and Peter R. Wear, sergeant-at-arms. Impressive services were held in the chapel of the school in memory of the late Superintendent, Dr. W. D. Kerr, of James K. Sheley, the former steward, and of Henry C. English, a teacher. These had a strong hold on the affections of the former pupils. The Convention adjourned on September 5th, 1891, after a session of four days. The proceedings of the meeting were printed in a neat pamphlet by the school printing office.

THE Wisconsin School for the Deaf.

The Wisconsin School for the Deaf is in Delavan, Walworth County, a town of 2,200 inhabitants, on the Racine & Southwestern division of the C., M. & St. P. R. R., which, with its wide streets, well-kept lawns and tasty residences, justly claims to be one of the most attractive towns in the state, and with Delavan Lake, which is two and a half miles from the town, is one of the most popular summer resorts in the Northwest.

The institution is delightfully situated on an elevation overlooking the town and the surrounding country, and the beauty and desirability of its location can hardly be surpassed. The grounds include about forty acres. The buildings are artistically constructed and are supplied with all the modern improvements, such as electric lighting, steam heating, and water for fire and domestic purposes. The institution embraces two departments—the educational and the industrial. The educational department comprises a school course covering about ten years, whose curriculum corresponds to that in our public schools. The system of instruction in the school is the Combined System, which includes the manual and the oral methods. The manual method is the teaching by use of signs, of the manual alphabet and by writing. The oral or articulation method is the teaching by speech. Each pupil is taught by that method which is best suited to the pupil. The manual method has been employed ever since the organization of the school. The oral method was begun in this institution as soon as, if not prior to, any institution in the West. Miss Emily Eddy has been articulation teacher in the school since 1868. For the last eight years there have been three articulation classes, each class having a separate teacher. The plan in these classes is to have exclusively oral recitations. Pupils are not only taught articulation, but they are taught by articulation. Graduates from this school are qualified to enter the introductory class of the Deaf-Mute College at Washington, D. C.

In the industrial department four trades are taught—cabinet-making, shoemaking, printing and baking. Each shop is under the direct supervision of a skilled foreman and pupils leaving the institution are thus enabled to earn a sufficient livelihood. The law provides that all deaf and dumb residents of the state, between the ages of eight and twenty-five years, of suitable capacity, shall be received and taught—free of charge for board and tuition, parents and guardians being expected to furnish clothing and pay traveling expenses.

The Wisconsin School for the Deaf was incorporated by an act of the legislature April 19th, 1852, which declared the object of the school as follows: "To afford to the deaf and dumb of the state, so far as possible, enlightened and practical education, that may aid them to obtain the means of subsistence, discharge the duties of citizenship, and secure all the happiness which they are capable of obtaining." The inception and establishment of this school is largely due to Ebenezer Cheesbro, who emigrated from New York State and settled two miles west of Delavan in 1839. Ariadna, the deaf daughter of Mr. Cheesbro, had been in school in the New York institution, and Mr. Cheesbro was desirous of completing her education. In 1850 Miss Wealthy Hawes was engaged to come to the Cheesbro residence and teach Ariadna, together with James A. Dudley, a deaf boy living in the vicinity. Miss Hawes was a graduate of the New York institution and had known Ariadna in school. This acquaintance led to her installment as a tutor of these two deaf children. In the fall of 1851 she was succeeded by John A. Mills, a graduate of the New York institution. About this time the idea of organizing a larger school was formulated by the members of the Cheesbro family, and it was through their efforts that the school opened in the fall of 1851 with seven deaf pupils and John A. Mills as teacher. This school was held at Mr. Cheesbro's residence for four months and was maintained at his own expense. It was then that Mr. Cheesbro had drawn up, and circulated, a petition to the legislature asking for the establishment of an institute for the education of the deaf, to be located at or near Delavan. Hon. C. M. Baker, assemblyman from Walworth county, presented the petition to the legislature, and it was through his efforts that a bill was passed April 19th, 1852, incorporating the "Wisconsin Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb," to be located at Delavan, Walworth county. On the recommendation of Superintendent J. W. Swiler, the legislature changed the name of the school to the "Wisconsin School for the Deaf" in 1885. The act of incorporation named Ebenezer Cheesbro, William C. Allen, Franklin K. Phoenix, Henderson Hunt, P. W. Lake, Wyman Spooner, Jesse C. Mills, James A. Maxwell and George Williams as a board of trustees, having the general management of the school, with power to employ a principal; and made an appropriation of $3,000 for buildings, and $500 for the support of the school for the ensuing year. This board was organized in June, 1852, with Henderson Hunt, president; Wyman Spooner, treasurer; F. K. Phoenix, secretary; J. R. Bradway, principal. Under this administration school was opened in July, with eight pupils, in the upper story of a building in the rear of the Schultz block, where it remained till the new buildings were completed. The pupils were at first boarded in private families, but their number increasing to fourteen a house was rented for their special use.

In the meantime the location and erection of the new buildings occupied the attention of the board. F. K. Phoenix donated a tract of eleven acres in the western part of Delavan, which is the present site of the institution, and in his honor the grounds are called "Phoenix Green." The plan of the buildings consisted of a main building, 56x60, five stories, of brick, including basement and attic, with two transverse or lateral wings. The east wing, a two-story building of brick, 34 by 44, with attic and basement, was completed in January, 1854, at a cost of $2,981, and had accommodation for thirty-five pupils. The school moved into their new quarters the following month. The main building was finished in 1857 at a cost of $30,000. Among other improvements made that year was the construction of a workshop, 24x48, two-stories in height, at a cost of $1,500, together with a large barn.

Principal Bradway had been succeeded by Lucius Foote, and he in turn by Horatio N. Hubbell. At the time of the opening of the new building, Louis H. Jenkins was principal. He was a man of experience in deaf-mute education and contributed largely to the auspicious opening of the school.

To Professor Warren Robinson we are indebted for the following extract from his history of the school. "In 1856 Mr. Jenkins was succeeded by J. S. Officer, under whose able management the institution made a decidedly forward move. Though previously advocated by Mr. Jenkins, industrial education was not begun until Mr. Officer's term, in the form of cabinet-making. This was a wise step, for too much can hardly be said in favor of manual training, especially in the case of the deaf.

During the session of 1857-58 a law was passed by the legislature requiring pupils who were sent to the Deaf and Dumb or Blind institutions to pay $75 per annum unless parents could make oath before an officer that they were unable to pay that amount; and a similar one in 1867; but they operated so disastrously on the prosperity of those institutions that they were both repealed soon after their passage. The period of the civil war was a time of considerable pecuniary embarrassment to the institute, and teachers worked on reduced salaries. Mr. Officer died in office in 1864 and his place was filled by Mr. H. W. Milligan, whose administration was signalized by the introduction of steam-heating, gas-lighting, and the opening of a shoe-shop. The next two principals to take charge of the institute, between the years 1869 and 1875, were E. C. Stone and George L. Weed, both men of experience and ability. In 1875 Dr. William H. De Motte was elected superintendent. The following events marked his term of office: The erection of a small wooden building for a gymnasium; the opening of a basket-shop in a part of the cabinet shop; the introduction of printing and the starting of a paper, the "Deaf Mute Press," in 1878; the giving of elementary instruction in drawing for a few months ; the erection and fitting up of a building for a kitchen and laundry ; and the destruction of the old institute by fire on September 16th, 1879. No clue as to the origin of the fire has ever yet been obtained. The building was a total loss to the state, as it was not covered by insurance. In spite of the great inconvenience caused by this most unexpected calamity the work of the school was not suspended. The shoe-shop was immediately converted into a dormitory for the boys, while the lady teachers and girls were taken in by private families on the hill and down town. In the meantime the school work was carried on mostly in the Methodist church in the village, until the carpenter-shop was divided up into school-rooms, and a small office for the principal and steward. After the fire the public press began seriously to discuss the advisability of moving the institution to some other place, but nothing came of it. Plans for new buildings were adopted and, an appropriation of $65,000 having been secured, their erection was commenced in the spring of 1880."

The new buildings were constructed on the cottage or segregate plan. The main building is a three-story white brick structure, with attic, and solid stone basement, 50x100. A wide corridor runs the entire length of the first floor, which contains a reception-room, parlor, office, matron's room and a suite of rooms occupied by the superintendent. On the second floor is a large, well-lighted study-room used by the girls, and the rooms occupied by the lady teachers living in the institution. On the third floor are the girls' sleeping and toilet-rooms. The attic is used as a gymnasium for girls. In the rear of the main building is a two-story brick extension, 45x75, which contains a chapel, with seating capacity for 300 persons.

The chapel has a large platform supplied with a full complement of stage settings and drop curtains which aid materially in the giving of institution entertainments. In the basement of the building are the dining-hall and kitchen. About 100 yards east of the main building stands the school building, a solid, white brick and stone structure, two stories in height, with basement, 66x122. It has two main entrances, one for the boys and one for the girls. A wide corridor runs the entire length of the building on each floor. The school-rooms, 20x26, are all supplied with closets and cloak-rooms, and are so arranged that each room has the benefit of sunlight during some portion of the day. The building is well furnished with the best school apparatus, and has ample accommodations in the way of heat and ventilation. Thirty yards west of the main building is the boys' dormitory, a two-story white-brick structure, with stone basement, 66x122, which contains besides the dormitories, lavatories and study-rooms. In the rear of the main building stands the new engine house, which was erected in 1885. The building is two stories in height, with a smokestack 107 feet high. The building is equipped with a Rice automatic slide-valve engine, which runs an Edison dynamo that furnishes the electric light for all the institution buildings and grounds. A storage battery is used to supply the light during the latter part of the night. The building is also furnished with a Knowles pump for fire purposes; two smaller pumps for filling boilers and an eight-horse power engine for driving the machinery. In the boiler-room are three large tubular boilers, five feet in diameter by sixteen feet in length, for generating steam used in the heating of the buildings, which is done by the gravity return system, and another boiler, 3x11, for running the dynamo engine and for heating water. On the second floor is the laundry, which is supplied with reversible, hydraulic washers, a Weston centrifugal wringer and a ternary mangle.

Other buildings contain the printing office, which is supplied with a Prouty power press, jobber and cutter; a cabinet-shop, a shoe-shop, a finely equipped gymnasium, bath and swimming pool, play-rooms and hospital.

The present Superintendent, J. W. Swiler, took charge of the institution in July, 1880. During his administration the new buildings have been constructed, the various departments of the institution enlarged and developed, and to-day the institution enjoys the reputation of being one of the best equipped and best managed schools in the country. That Mr. Swiler is a man well qualified for the position he holds is universally admitted, and further attested by the fact that he is retained notwithstanding political changes in the administration of the state. The following mention is taken from Professor Robinson's history of the institution: "The present Superintendent, John W. Swiler, was born in Cumberland county, Pennsylvania, in 1844. In 1852 his parents removed to Monmouth, Illinois, and in the course of time he entered the college at that place and graduated in 1864, after which he engaged in the book trade for two years. In 1867 he went to Jacksonville, Illinois, where he was appointed as a teacher in the state institution there. His stay in Jacksonville covered thirteen years, during which time he constantly rose to prominence as a man well fitted to educate and govern. Endowed with great practical and executive ability, as well as good judgment, he seems to have found his proper place in the profession. His experience grows rapidly with his years. His appearance indicates energy, decision, and firmness. His use of the sign language is characterized by perspicuity, and his utterances are fraught with the useful and practical. Since he came here he has steadily grown in the esteem of those in his charge, no less for his managing skill than for the faithful care, consideration and respect he ever evinces for them. And in closing it does not seem too much to say that his management has had a tendency to develop the present material and mental resources of the school to a degree never surpassed." Superintendent Swiler is a member of the Wisconsin State Educational Committee, and also of the committee of that section of the World's Fair Congress Auxiliary devoted to deaf-mute instruction, of which Dr. P. G. Gillett is chairman. He is a man of progressive ideas, and during his administration the school has attained a high rank among the institutions of the country. In 1885 the institution received a diploma from the Cotton Centennial Exposition at New Orleans for pupils' work. Very flattering exhibits of school work were made at the Teachers' National Convention at Madison in 1884, also at Chicago in 1886, and at the Milwaukee Industrial Exposition at several times.

The institution was under the general management of a Board of Trustees from its establishment till 1881, when, with all other charitable, penal and reformatory institutions in the state, it passed under the control of a State Board of Supervision, consisting of George W. Burchard, president ; Charles Luling, James Bintliff, C. D. Parker and L. A. Proctor. The outgoing board of trustees consisted of S. R. LaBar, D. G. Cheever, Hollis Latham, E. D. Holton, and Albert Salisbury. Dr. A. L. Chapin, the late president of Beloit college, resigned in 1880. He was for many years the president of this Board, and, having once been a teacher of the deaf, was at all times the ardent supporter and warm friend of the institution, and is held in sacred memory by all deaf-mutes and all friends of deaf-mute instruction in the State of Wisconsin. The Board of Supervision remained in office for ten years and during its administration of affairs the public institutions of the state enjoyed a period of unprecedented growth and development. In 1891 this Board was succeeded by the State Board of Control, which at present consists of Clarence Snyder of Ashland, president ; Charles D. Parker, of River Falls ; J. E. Jones, of Portage ; J. L. Cleary, of Kenosha ; W. H. Graebner, of Milwaukee, and J. W. Oliver, of Waupun.

Of the officers and teachers now employed in the institution, the Superintendent, J. W. Swiler, took charge in 1880 ;

Mrs. M. H. Schilling, matron, in 1891 ; Charles M. Tallman, clerk, in 1892 ; Joseph Wauchuta, boys' supervisor, in 1891 ; Miss Matilda Cannan in 1880 ; Miss Emily Eddy became a member of the teaching force in 1857 ; Mrs. M. H. Fiske in 1879 ; Mrs. A. I. Hobart in 1884 ; Miss E. M. Steinke in 1886 ; Miss I. C. Pearce in 1888 ; Miss Agnes Steinke in 1891 ; Mrs. Eleanor G. McCoy in 1874 ; Miss Jene Bowman in 1892 ; Warren Robinson in 1884 ; J. J. Murphy in 1884 ; E. E. Clippinger in 1883 ; W. F. Gray in 1887 ; J. S. Long in 1889 ; Thomas Hagerty in 1891. Warren Robinson, Thomas Hagerty and J. J. Murphy are graduates of this school, and J. S. Long is a graduate of the Iowa State School for the Deaf.

The only death of a resident officer that is recorded in the annals of the school occurred February 3d, 1865, when J. S. Officer, who had been at the head of the school, as principal and steward, for eight years, was removed by death. In a tribute to the memory of Mr. Officer, Hon. N. M. Harrington, Secretary of the Board of Trustees, wrote as follows : "Mr. Officer possessed a rare combination of qualifications for the position which he occupied. Among these were the following : A strong, ripe and luminous Christian character, a Christianity which infused its ennobling and benign spirit into all his life ; great executive ability and untiring industry ; unswerving integrity and scrupulous exactness in the details of business ; a marked suavity and kindness clothing a deportment of unusual dignity ; a ceaseless watchfulness for the well-being of those committed to his care ; system and order reigned wherever he had control. In the use of the sign language he was a master." In this connection it seems proper to state that in 1883 the institution sustained a serious loss in the death of Professor Z. G. McCoy, who had labored diligently, with an unswerving devotion to duty, and an untiring interest in all that concerned the members of this institution during almost its entire history, his connection with the institution dating from November, 1855. In Superintendent Swiler's report to the State Board of Supervision, we find the following mention : "Z. G. McCoy was born at Fort Edwards, New York, November 1st, 1829. He was appointed teacher in this school soon after graduating from the New York institution. He came to his work with the highest recommendations and during his subsequent course he developed a higher scholarship and a more loving Christian character than even his most sanguine friends had expected. During the years that have passed and through all the changes that have transpired in this institution, Zachariah G. McCoy remained steadfastly at his post, laboring earnestly for those he loved. No one but a teacher can realize how much of devotion, self-sacrifice, and hard work was required by the opportunities of those twenty-eight long years, and no one but the 'Infinite One' can know how much good work was done by this faithful servant, in unveiling so many beclouded minds."

In the industrial department John Beamsley has been at the head of the shoe-shop since 1882; W. T. Passage, foreman of the printing office since 1891; and Hollis Stone took charge of the carpenter-shop in 1892.

Nine hundred and twenty pupils have had instruction in the school since 1852; of this number 105 took the full course and graduated prior to 1880; since that time 89 have graduated; making a total of 194 graduates. Of this number 20 have entered the National College for the Deaf at Washington. There are at present 180 pupils in the school. According to the Eleventh Census there are 1,333 deaf and dumb in Wisconsin—793 males and 540 females, or one deaf person to every 1,265 inhabitants. Of these 743 are beyond the school age; 153 under school age and 437 between the ages of eight and twenty. As there are now about 275 children in the schools for the deaf in Wisconsin, it leaves 162 deaf children of school age not under instruction.

An Alumni Association was organized in 1876. Lars M. Larson, a graduate of this school and the founder and present superintendent of the school for the deaf at Santa Fé, New Mexico, was the founder of this association, and for several years its president. The association has held triennial reunions since then, and at present has a membership of about one hundred alumni.

In connection with the school are two literary societies.

The Ariadna Society, named in honor of Ariadna

Cheesbro, was organized in 1889 by Miss Linnie Bailey, a graduate of 1890. It includes in its membership the girls of the highest four classes and meets once a week. The Phoenix Literary Society, including likewise the elder boys of the school, was organized in 1884, though it existed two years prior thereto as the Badger Literary Society. It meets for debate and other literary exercises every Saturday evening and is well maintained from year to year.

The Art Department gives half-hour daily instruction in writing and drawing to each of the classes in school. In addition to this, select classes are given higher instruction in the studio. This department has grown since 1881, when regular instruction in writing and drawing was begun, until the whole school feels its influence and many have come to a higher appreciation of the possibilities of life.

The Department of Physical Culture with competent instructors and well-equipped gymnasias for the boys and the girls is doing a great work of development for many, who in addition to deafness would display other defects of form or feature were it not for a systematic course of calisthenics, which straightens, broadens, and makes more supple and graceful boys and girls, who lack only proper training to make them perfect specimens of manhood and womanhood.

The Wisconsin Times is a weekly, eight-page paper devoted to the interests of institution affairs and deaf-mute instruction in general. Prior to 1881 it was published irregularly under the name of the Deaf-Mute Press, at which time it was changed to its present name, made a regular weekly publication, and enlarged to its present size. The paper is printed and partly edited by the pupils of the school. Its editorials on leading topics pertaining to the education of the deaf, its spicy locals on life in the institution and its general matter of valuable information reflect a great deal of credit on its editor and on the institution, and its extensive exchange list attests its popularity with not only other institutions but also the press of the state.

In concluding it seems but justice to add that the present efficiency and prosperity of the school is largely due to the superior management of the state board, to the administration of its Superintendent, J. W. Swiler, and to his sagacity in selecting and retaining an efficient official corps of instruction. Since he assumed control, in 1880, the school has from time to time extended its course of instruction and organized new branches of study and work as fast as necessity required or ability permitted. The sterling worth of his character has been reflected on the lives of all children under his care, and the example of his life and the precepts of his moral and religious teaching are embodied in the high character of the men and women who have gone out from this institution. There are no deaf beggars and no deaf criminals in Wisconsin. Those who might have otherwise become a burden to society are found in the useful walks of life, most of them discharging all the duties of intelligent citizenship, supporting themselves and families, and in many cases occupying leading positions in the social and industrial pursuits of the communities in which they live. This brief historical sketch is only an outline of the course of events at the Wisconsin School for the Deaf, the records are replete with suggestive facts and incidents for the complete history of the school, which is yet to be written.

THE LOUISIANA SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

THE LOUISIANA SCHOOL

FOR

BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA,

1852-1893.

BY H. LORRAINE TRACY, B. A.

INSTRUCTOR IN THE SCHOOL.

THE LOUISIANA SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

UNTIL 1852 the deaf children of Louisiana were sent to the Kentucky Institution at Danville, at the expense of the State.

By an act of the legislature, approved March 18, 1852, the board of managers "purchased the property heretofore known as the 'Baton Rouge College,' together with three other squares of ground lying immediately back of, or east of, said property, with the exception of three lots, for the price and sum of six thousand three hundred and ninety-five dollars ($6,395). The price paid for the same, we are happy to say, is extremely reasonable, and the location, at the lower end of the corporation, possessing a beautiful and commanding view of the river, renders it, in the opinion of the board, for such an institution, one of the most desirable in the city of Baton Rouge." Thus ran the first words in the first annual report of the administrators.

The members of the first board were Gen. Joseph Bernard, president; William S. Pike, secretary and treasurer; Dr. B. F. Harney, Col. Nolan Stewart, Major James N. Brown, Dr. Thomas J. Buffington, and Major Augustin Duplantier. Of these, only one, Dr. T. J. Buffington, is alive.

Mr. James S. Brown, M. A., a gentleman eminently qualified, and who was then the superintendent of the Indiana School, was appointed to guide the infant days of this institute.

Thirteen pupils were the first record in attendance on the 8th of December, 1852.

From this year the preparatory arrangements, as well as the progress of the School, went along smoothly, the board of administrators and all connected with the School showing the highest enthusiasm. At the outset Superintendent Brown maintained the advantage of having the deaf and the blind together, affirming that the former in their intercourse with the latter improve themselves in the general use of language—the most important part of their education.

Mr. Martin M. Hanson, a deaf-mute, was Mr. Brown's first assistant.

The first appropriation made by the legislature was the sum of $25,000. and until "the late unpleasantness" it continued to appropriate that liberal sum yearly.

"A commencement, however humble, has now been made of an institution destined to pour incalculable blessings upon two of the most unfortunate classes whose helpless lot can demand human sympathy. It is to the credit of American statesmen that it can be said that such an enterprise has never been commenced, where a State legislature could be made aware of its benefits, and failed. Located, as this institution is, under the immediate observation of the legislature and State authorities, we may not—cannot—fear the result. Under such auspices we may well entertain the hope that a monument of the judicious liberality of the State will here be reared which shall tell to generations of men yet to inhabit the beautiful cities, the fertile fields and spreading savannas of Louisiana that her legislators in this our day had hearts to feel for human woe, and hands ready to lighten the crushing load of misfortune which weighs down the sorrow-stricken blind and deaf and dumb." These were the last words in Superintendent Brown's first annual report.

For the erection of the stately buildings that now stand as beautiful and useful ornaments to our State $350,000 was at different times appropriated.

Slowly but steadily did the School grow.

In 1860 Mr. Brown was removed, and the entire corps of instructors, of whom Dr. J. L. Noyes, now the efficient superintendent of the Minnesota School, was one, resigned. For a time the School was paralyzed. Mr. A. K. Martin, then the head of the Mississippi School, was appointed in his place.

At the commencement of the war the number of pupils was 77. During the struggle the list dwindled down to 25 or 30.

For several months the School was left to its own resources and all were supported by the proceeds of cakes, etc., made, in part, by the girls, and sold by the little boys, and by the sale of vegetables from the garden, and by means advanced by benevolent individuals. When these resources failed, rations were received from the Federal authorities, which were continued until 1866, when they evacuated our buildings, the larger portion of which they had been using since January, 1863, for hospital purposes. The legislature of 1865 made an appropriation of $18,000 for the benefit of the institute, but owing to the depleted condition of the treasury very little of it could be drawn, and the institution continued in a crippled, discouraging state. In the succeeding year more life and spirit was breathed into our affairs, and since that period the institution has been steadily going forward in its benevolent mission.

—A. K. MARTIN.

In 1867 arrangements were made with the board of trustees of the Mississippi School, Drs. Poindexter and Cabaniss, and Judge Potter, to have the pupils of that State in our school, their building having been burned down. The legislature of that State agreed to pay $250 a year per pupil.

In 1869 the board of administrators, with J. A. McWhorter as superintendent, yielding to the recommendation of Gov. H. C. Warmoth, gave half of the buildings for the use of the State Seminary and Military Academy. With the growth of these latter institutions the buildings became crowded. The blind were removed to other quarters in 1871, and this resulted in the provision for them by law of a separate institution. This removal of the blind only paved the "way for forcing an excusable removal of the deaf, and finally resulted in the ostensibly temporary occupation by the State University of our buildings, planned and erected for our peculiar wants, being made permanent." In speaking about this impolitic as well as ungenerous course, Supt. McWhorter says:

Education is inestimably more valuable to the deaf-mute than it can possibly be to any other class, and should be considered in the light of public necessity—as much as justice to the innocent or food to the starving. Besides, they cling to this building with the affection that surrounds a home, and as the spot where the sweet light of intelligence and culture first broke in upon and quickened a benighted intellect, bringing joy and elevation that could be found nowhere else.

The deaf were removed to the structure known as the "Herman Building," almost in the heart of the city, in the summer of 1879. This dingy old building soon became overcrowded. Small frame cottages were erected around it, and were used as boys' dormitories. They remained in this uncomfortable condition until 1887. During all this time the board of trustees were keeping an eye on the buildings originally erected for the deaf, and endeavoring to repossess them. They were finally rewarded in 1887, when the University was removed to the United States garrison. Governor S. D. McEnery ordered the institution restored to its original buildings in the summer of that year. This was according to a section of an act passed by the general assembly of 1871, which read as follows:

That the board of trustees shall have power to procure by lease or purchase a suitable building or buildings and grounds for all the necessary purposes of said institution, and as soon as this may be done they shall grant the temporary use of the buildings and grounds now occupied and held by said institution to the Louisiana State University until said University be otherwise provided for.

The two institutes, one for the deaf and the other for the blind, which had for nearly twenty years been supported as independent institutions, were by the legislature of 1888 combined under one management. A proviso was, however, added to the act by which the two were combined for restoring, on a specified condition, the separate organization of the "School and Industrial Home for the Blind." That condition was met by the purchase of a property and the erection of a building at an outlay of $30,000, without cost to the State.

The great storm of the 19th and 20th of August, 1888, did great damage to our buildings. Eight thousand dollars were borrowed from the Louisiana National Bank and the Canal Bank of New Orleans. The board of trustees pledged the sum of $5,400 in warrants, which had been appropriated by the legislature for repairs.

JOHN JASTREMSKI, M. D.

Our present superintendent, Dr. John Jastremski, took the reins in 1884, and since then our School has been steadily increasing its breadth of usefulness. The corps of instructors has been increased, and the classes better organized. But the best work so far accomplished has been in the organization of the Industrial Department. With more liberal means at hand all departments will be thoroughly organized.

In 1854, as a compliment due to the founder of this institution, the trustees ordered of Mr. Moise a large portrait of Mr. Richardson to be hung in the reception-room. It was the exhibition of this portrait that called forth the following remarks :

On the 18th of March, 1852, Gov. Walker approved and signed a bill appropriating $25,000 for establishing a deaf and dumb institute at Baton Rouge. This bill originated with the Hon. F. D. Richardson, by whose influence, popularity, and pure intentions, united with industry and eloquence, he was enabled to triumph over his opponents and pass the bill by a large majority. The building never fails to attract the attention of every traveller that passes the capitol, and in its unadorned beauty towers with simple grandeur over the laborious details that deck the Gothic structure of our state-house.

Ninety-three gentlemen have been members of the board of trustees since its foundation.

The School has had six superintendents and 25 teachers and 8 matrons.

The present officers are as follows :

The Mississippi Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb,

JACKSON, MISSISSIPPI,

1854-1893.

By J. R. DOBYNS, M. A.

Supt. of the Institution.

THE MISSISSIPPI INSTITUTION FOR THE EDUCATION OF THE DEAF AND DUMB.

THE first mention of the deaf that has been found in any of the State records is in the message of Governor A. G. McNut, sent to the legislature January 5, 1841.

In giving some statistics he says: "There were in the State on June 1, 1840, free white persons deaf and dumb, 69; colored persons deaf and dumb and blind, 118."

It does not appear that he made any recommendation looking to the establishment of an institution for their education, or that any member of the legislature introduced a bill to that end.

No reference has been found to this subject from that date till the meeting of the legislature in 1852, when Governor James Whitfield made the following recommendation, viz:

One other institution of a kindred character [referring to the Lunatic Asylum and Institution for the Blind] is still wanted to complete the list of noble charities so characteristic of Southern generosity; I refer to the asylum for the deaf and dumb.

The poor mute who is permitted to gaze upon the beauties of nature, but whose ears are forever closed to the sweet melody Providence has ordained to gladden the human heart, and whose tongue has never learned to hold social converse with his fellow-creatures or even unite in praises to the Most High, is a subject to claim our most anxious solicitude and prompt us to some action to ameliorate his condition, whilst he can only be taught to appreciate the bounties of Providence and the scheme of redemption by teaching him to read. Let us not withhold from him this exalted privilege so fraught with happiness to all who enjoy its benefits; and whilst he can only converse with his fellow-creatures and enjoy that social intercourse so necessary to the happiness of all by learning to write, let us do something towards unstopping the ears of the deaf and making the dumb to speak through the medium of the pen.

I would, therefore, recommend that a small appropriation be made, similar to the one made for the benefit of the blind, in order to employ a teacher or teachers and found a school for the benefit of this class of our people, which may be changed or enlarged as circumstances may hereafter require. And with this additional institution the people of Mississippi may justly feel that they have done everything that could be done by legislative enactment to educate the poor and ameliorate the condition of the suffering and afflicted.

In view of the intimate connection between this and the Institution for the Blind, I respectfully suggest that the two might be blended under one general supervision, thereby lessening the expense to the State without detriment to either.

This recommendation was followed by the introduction of a bill in the House of Representatives, at that session, by Mr. Jones, a representative from Pontotoc county, establishing an institution for the instruction of the deaf and dumb at or near the town of Pontotoc, in Pontotoc county. This bill went to its third reading in the House, when a "rider" was tacked to it, making the institution a department of Oakland College, a flourishing male college in this State at that time. This rider seems to have killed the bill on its final passage. At the session of the legislature in 1854 a similar bill was introduced in the Senate by Mr. Webb, senator from Pontotoc. This "bill was killed" in the house of its friends, and it seems the energetic representatives from Pontotoc gave up the idea of securing this prize.

On Tuesday, February 7, 1854, Col. Erasmus R. Burt, a member of the House of Representatives, and the father of the Mississippi Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, offered the following resolution, which was adopted, to wit:

Resolved, That the Committee of Education is hereby instructed to inquire into the expediency of enlarging the buildings of the Blind Institute so as to furnish apartments for the education of the deaf and dumb, and report by bill or otherwise.

Col. Burt was a prominent and influential member from Oktibbeha county, and at that session was not only a member of the Committee of Education, but was the chairman of the Committee on Claims, the first in the list of committees.

It will be seen that, instead of this being an asylum or a refuge for the deaf, its very origin was in the idea of education, and every recommendation, act, and resolution had in view the education of the deaf, making it purely an educational institution.

On Wednesday evening, February 22, 1854, just fifteen days after the introduction of that resolution, Col. Burt, from the Committee of Education, made the following report, to wit:

MR. SPEAKER: The Committee on Education have had under consideration the resolution of the House instructing them to enquire into the expediency of establishing an institution for the education of the deaf and dumb, and have instructed me to report the following bill, and recommend that it do pass.

The report was received; the bill was read the first time and passed to the orders of the day. On the morning of the 28th of February Col. Burt called up this bill, and it was made the special order for that evening at 7 o'clock. When the hour arrived, on motion of Mr. Newman, of Warren county, the special order was taken up. The House resolved itself into committee of the whole, considered the bill, and reported it back without amendment and recommended its passage. The report was received and agreed to and the bill was read the third time. Mr. Liddell moved an amendment by way of a rider. The rider was read the first, second, and third times and passed. The question was then taken on the passage of the bill and rider and decided in the affirmative by the following vote :

Yeas : Mr. Speaker (Hon. Hiram Cassidy) of Franklin county, Messrs. Austell, Anderson, Burt, Brown, Barksdale, Botters, Bernard, Beasley, Buck, Burrus, Covington, Downs, Duckworth, Dubisson, Gilleland, Huntley, Harper of Hinds, Holder, Helm, Foot, Liddell, Lewis, Mc-Lauren, Magee, Owen, Philips, Powe, Rozelle, Rawls, Rankin, Rhodes of Jackson, Regan, Shannon, Sharpe, Saddler, Stark, Strong, Swearingen, Thomas, Ward, and Wayne—43.

Nays : Messrs. Abbott, Autry, Boren, Bardin, Buckley, Dean, Dickens, Elzy, Garrett, Gordon, Henderson, Hindman, Hamer, Jayne, Lott, McQueen, Mitchell, Monet, Newman, Rives, and Siddall—20.

This bill was immediately reported to the Senate. At the afternoon session the next day, March 1st, Mr. Webb, senator from Pontotoc, called up the bill and it passed its second reading. At this juncture Mr. D. W. Adams, an energetic senator from Hinds county, got the floor and called up several other bills, which were passed. Mr. J. M. Ackerman, of Monroe county, moved a reconsideration of the bill and it was finally passed by the following vote :

Ayes : Messrs. Adams, Arthur, Berry, Cobb, Farrar, Graves, Hemingway, Johnston, McWillie, Nelson, Pegues, West, and Webb—13.

Nays : Mr. President (John J. Pettus), Messrs. Beene, Banks, Ellett, Greer, Keger, Oliver, Ramsay, and Stewart—9.

The bill was reported back to the House at the night session of this same day. Time was short; the legislature, by a resolution already adopted by both houses, was to adjourn the next day. Mr. Siddall, from the Committee on Enrolled Bills, reported that the joint committee had found the bill correctly enrolled. It was then to be signed by the presiding officers of both houses, and be sent to the Governor for his approval before it could become a law. It was reported to the Governor that evening, signed or approved by him that evening, and reported back to the House on the morning of March 2.

Thus was born, March 1, 1854, the Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb of Mississippi. Those who are familiar with the workings of legislative bodies know that, with the opposition to this bill, there must have been some interested, watchful, experienced, and influential friend to engineer it, when it was carried through so rapidly and skilfully, and so near the end of the session, the legislature having adjourned in less than twelve hours after it was reported back by the Governor. There being no other way of finding out who this friend was than from the journals of the House and Senate, the honor must be attributed to Col. E. R. Burt.

Col. Burt was auditor of State at the breaking out of the war. He gave up his office, raised a company, and tendered his services to the Confederate Government. For his gallant conduct he was soon promoted to the colonelcy, and laid down his life in 1862, at the battle of Leesburg. The fortunes of war left no time or money to mark the graves of its heroes. Miss Cabaniss, who is and has been for so many years matron of the Institution, was an intimate friend of the daughters of this good man. In the absence of the tender, loved ones, at her own expense, she marked the spot where he was laid, and from that day to this she has, unconscious of the fact that he was the real founder of the Institution, watched over the tomb of a friend whose name will always be honored by the deaf of Mississippi. It behooves Mississippians to honor and revere the memory of such a friend of her institutions, such a distinguished statesman and brave soldier.

Col. Burt did not and could not have dreamed of the possibilities of this Institution, and he certainly legislated wiser than he knew. During the years 1890 and 1891 the superintendent attempted to gather the statistics as to occupations and annual earnings of those who had gone out from the Institution since its foundation.

These efforts resulted in showing that out of about three hundred who had been in the Institution, returns were received from only sixty-two, aggregating twenty-two different employments, annual earnings of $13,158, and the total for the whole time, $131,257. Referring to this matter, the superintendent says in his report:

With two exceptions, these have all left the Institution since the war. The buildings, with all the records, were burned at that time, and there is no data from which to gather the facts previous to that period. I have been exceedingly careful to prevent an exaggerated showing in the way of annual incomes. From these facts I have no hesitancy in stating that the pupils who have left the Institution since 1871 are now producing annually more than the legislature appropriates for the maintenance of the Institution. What better argument can be presented for the liberal support of this branch of public education? Since that date (1871) about two hundred pupils have gone out into the world. Some of these have died, some have moved and cannot now be located, and some report that "they are making a living;" many of the young ladies have married, and while they are not working for wages, they are filling the noble missions of wives and mothers, and reflecting credit upon their State and alma mater. This list is being constantly increased, for there is not a year passes but some intelligent boys and girls, who have been receiving the State's bounty under the fostering care of the Institution, decline to be further assisted, join the busy throng, and take their places as good citizens and begin to bear their share of the burdens of government.

On the 19th of April following the passage of this bill Messrs. W. B. Smart, S. Pool, and F. C. Jones, trustees of the Institution for the Blind, organized as trustees of the Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb. Instead of enlarging the buildings of the Institution for the Blind as was contemplated in the act, and organizing a department for the deaf and dumb, the trustees very wisely purchased property and established an independent institution. They purchased the property on Capitol street, opposite the Governor's Mansion, at $9,000, and opened the Institution for the reception of pupils August, 1854, with Mr. John H. Gazlay, a deaf-mute and a graduate of the New York Institution, as principal. The salary was insufficient and Mr. Gazlay resigned in a few months. Mr. Momfort was then employed; he soon resigned to accept a more lucrative position. The school was closed about the first of November, 1855, and up to the time of their first report, January, 1856, the trustees were unable to secure a principal on account of not being able to pay a sufficient salary.

In March, 1856, the following board of trustees was appointed by Gov. John J. McRae: Jo Bell, A. B. Cabaniss, W. W. Devine, John T. Hull, and W. H. Brown. It appears from the report made by this board January, 1857, that the school was closed about three months in 1856, because they were unable to get a teacher. The records do not show at what date the school was opened, but the trustees say: "We secured, on June 1st following, Mr. Bliss, a deaf-mute, as a teacher, who remained about two months." On July 1st of the same year they employed as principal Rev. A. Pomroy, and Mrs. Pomroy as matron. Later in the year they employed Mr. E. E. Bowes, a deaf-mute, as assistant teacher. Mr. Bowes had attended both the Ohio and Indiana Institutions as a pupil. The board seems anxious, and very naturally, for the future of the Institution, for they say in this report: "How much longer this Institution is to exist must altogether depend upon the action of the present legislature." It is a pleasure to record that the legislature came to the rescue. In addition to the annual appropriation of $2,000 they made an increase of $6,000 a year. The trustees recommended in this report that the property then owned by the Institution in the city be exchanged for that known as St. Andrew's College, about one mile west of the city. This suggestion was adopted by the legislature and the exchange was made that year. Fifteen pupils were received during the year 1856 whose names are not given in the report. Rev. A. Pomroy made the first report as principal, in January, 1857. Among other things, he records the fact that Gen. Jo Bell, president of the board, handed him $5, with which, being increased by $2 from himself, they prepared the pupils a "sumptuous Christmas festival."

The future of the Institution now seemed bright, indeed. With handsome and commodious buildings, an energetic and active principal, the legislature having provided all that was asked, the trustees naturally hoped for large prosperity. Whether there was any further trouble or not the record is silent; but before the close of another year Mr. and Mrs. Pomroy quietly drop out and Mr. A. K. Martin, nephew of the distinguished founder, and for thirty-five years the successful superintendent of the Missouri Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, appears as superintendent. Mr. Martin was one of those educated, high-toned, chivalrous, Christian Southern gentlemen, whose wide experience and liberal knowledge in the management and education of the deaf rendered him peculiarly well fitted to adorn this position.

The following January Mr. Martin makes a lengthy report, in which the Institution appears in an exceedingly flourishing condition. It was in September of this year, 1857, that Mr. L. W. Saunders, who is still at his post, was first appointed teacher. In the words of Mr. Martin, Mr. Saunders was, at that time, "a promising young pupil, who has by his zeal and industry made such advances in the art of teaching as give good promise of his success. He is also indebted, for his appointment, to his genial temper and good moral character." With the exception of the years the Institution was closed on account of the war, Mr. Saunders has taught continuously in this Institution since his appointment in 1857. There seems to be no record of any other man having served Mississippi, in any capacity, for so many consecutive years. This history would not be complete without a special mention of this "promising young pupil" who has grown old in the service of the Institution, but whose energy and skill are yet being vigorously impressed upon the deaf of his native State. It affords the compiler of this history great pleasure to bear this testimony.

The next report is made in January, 1859, with thirty-four pupils enrolled. The crisis evidently has passed, the trustees think; Mr. Martin is still in charge, and the Institution is in a highly prosperous condition.

In September, 1860, Mr. Martin resigns to accept a similar position in the Louisiana Institution. By the first of October the board had secured the services of Mr. A. G. Scott, at that time principal of the Tennessee Institution for the Deaf and Dumb. The next report is made in 1861. During this time the number of pupils had increased from thirty-four to fifty-seven and everything seems to have prospered accordingly. For the first time this report gives a list of the officers and teachers.

A new era is dawning upon our country. About this time "rumors of unsuccessful and successful wars" fill the air, and the dark clouds of civil strife begin to settle down upon this happy and prosperous people. Before another biennial term had passed, the iron heel of War was on the neck of this child of State, and she lay trampled in the dust. The buildings were burned, this beautiful and happy home was desolated, and the unfortunate and helpless children were left, it seemed, to the doom of darkness and ignorance. It will not be out of place here to inject the following extract from the message of Gov. Pettus sent to the legislature, Monday, November 4, 1861:

It is my painful duty to inform you that Col. E. R. Burt, auditor of public accounts, fell mortally wounded at the battle of Leesburg, while gallantly leading a regiment of Mississippi's brave sons to one of the most brilliant victories which has come to our arms during the war. These are times that try men's souls.

The deaf of Mississippi can never cease to honor the State for what it has done for them. Inexorable war had brought death and destruction and almost famine, yet amid all this desolation the representatives of the people did not forget the deaf, as will be seen from the following section, taken from an act of 1862 and 1863 :

Be it enacted by the legislature of the State of Mississippi, That the trustees of the Mississippi Institution for the Deaf and Dumb be authorized and hereby empowered to place the deaf and dumb orphans in their charge, and such others in the State as are similarly situated, in some suitable institution for the deaf and dumb in or out of the State until the trustees of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb properly fit up and organize the same for the reception of scholars.

The same act appropriated $7,000 annually to enable the trustees to carry out this provision. The next legislature not only provided for the orphans, but, to use the words of the act, "for the deaf-mutes who have been or may be under the pupilage of the Institution for that class."

No one can say that Mississippi has neglected her deaf children, when, amid the roar of the cannon and while the circling smoke of battle ascended up to heaven as incense from the altar upon which the flower of her manhood has been offered a willing sacrifice, she takes time to stop and provide for their wants. What an incentive to the deaf to become honorable and useful citizens! This history from April 23, 1862, to October 21, 1865, can best be told by the following reports, which read like a novel :

REPORT OF THE JOINT STANDING COMMITTEE ON THE DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTION.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Joint Standing Committee on the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb beg leave respectfully to report that they have endeavored to discharge their duty in the best manner they could with the meagre information they have been able to obtain. We have not visited the grounds on which the buildings once stood, because we deemed it unnecessary, having learned that they were all destroyed by the fortunes of war.

The impoverished condition of the finances of the State preclude the possibility of appropriations being made, such as will be requisite for erecting suitable buildings for this Institution, except, perhaps, some small buildings for temporary use, and which may hereafter be used for workshops, etc., by the Institution, as indicated by the board of trustees in their report to his Excellency Gov. Humphreys, which is herewith filed and asked to be made a part of this report.

We would recommend that the annual appropriations now made by law to this Institution be used by the said board of trustees for the purpose of boarding and tuition of the indigent deaf-mutes until such time as the State may be able to put the Institution again into successful operation.

In examining into the facts as presented in relation to the burning of the building by the Federal forces, and the general destruction of the property of the Institution, we find nothing to allege in condemnation of the trustees and managers of the Institution, but, on the contrary, we verily believe they did the best they could under the circumstances. The destruction of the property is a calamity much to be deplored, especially at such a time as this, when the treasury of the State is empty and the people of the State unable to bear the weight of a heavy taxation.

We still recommend this unfortunate class of our fellow-creatures to the fostering care of the State. She has adopted them, and through weal or woe, riches or poverty, she ought to do the best she can for them. And although we cannot recommend appropriations at the present crisis of our affairs for the purpose of erecting an asylum for them on a magnificent scale, yet we would not have you for a moment lose sight of this important object and its consummation at the earliest possible time consistent with paramount public interest.

P. H. NAPIER,

Chairman Senate Committee.

JNO. L. MILTON,

Chairman House Committee.

REPORT OF THE TRUSTEES OF THE DEAF AND DUMB INSTITUTE.

JACKSON, October 21, 1865.

TO HIS EXCELLENCY B. G. HUMPHREYS,

Governor of Mississippi:

Having received from you a note enquiring if we had a report to offer, and also asking us for any suggestions we might be able to make in regard to a future policy, we promptly proceed to the discharge of the duty assigned us.

The Institution of the Deaf and Dumb had been, under its former managers, justly a matter of pride to the State. It had clearly been conducted to a success, and stood a proud exemplification of the generosity of the State and the energy and capacity of her citizens. In this condition was found this benevolent Institution.

Soon the thunder of artillery was heard in our land; battles were fought and blood flowed as a great river. Our mangled soldiers came pouring into our city, and every house that could be used for a hospital was demanded, and these poor God-stricken creatures were turned from their comfortable home to make room for the bleeding soldier. This was done cheerfully by the managers; the soldier must be cared for, and the deaf-mute, for a time, turned over to his former friends. It was war, inexorable war, which demanded this sacrifice; there was no help for it, no avoiding it. As time rolled on, our advancing foe reached our city, carrying the torch in one hand, the sword in the other. Black desolation marked his march, and our noble Institution did not escape. It was levelled to the ground and left a smouldering mass. Apparatus, implements, fences, and every appurtenance shared the fate of the buildings, and all that we have left is the land.

This is the brief history of the Institution of the Deaf and Dumb. * * * We must begin humbly, and perseveringly push on until, by energy and prudence, prosperity shall again dawn upon us. In the meantime we propose (as the law now allows) to send the orphans to the cheapest and best Institution in our reach. * * * The above is most respectfully submitted.

A. B. CABANISS,
GEO. L. POTTER,
W. Q. POINDEXTER,

Trustees of Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb.

The provisions made in a part of an act quoted above continued till February 13, 1869. Up to this date the Institution was entirely dependent upon the whims of the legislature, as that body could have abolished it at any time. Fortunately for the deaf, when the constitution of Mississippi, which was adopted in 1869, was drawn up, some friend was thoughtful enough to secure their interest by the enactment of the following clause, viz:

It shall be the duty of the legislature to provide by law for the support of institutions for the education of the deaf, dumb, and blind.

This provision was re-enacted in the constitution of 1890; consequently the education of the deaf of Mississippi is an assured fact until this part of her organic law is repealed.

In obedience to this provision, the legislature of 1871 re-organized and rebuilt the Institution, and its history has been one of continual progress from that day to this. Under the act authorizing the rebuilding of the Institution, Gov. Alcorn appointed a board of trustees, which proceeded at once to purchase grounds and buildings.

After visiting various sites in Jackson and other cities, the property now occupied, and at that time owned by Mrs. Edward Yerger, and some adjoining, was secured for $26,000 in State warrants.

The board met July 8, 1871, and elected Dr. J. L. Carter, then a member of the board, as principal. The school was opened on December 1, 1871, and in his first report, December 31, Dr. Carter gives the names of nine pupils who had entered, and stated there were thirty-five applications on file. His second annual report shows that forty-five had been received. In this report, December, 1872, the principal recommends the introduction of articulation teaching, but the fact is noticeable that it was just ten years till this department was inaugurated. The next report of Dr. Carter gives the names of fifty pupils received, and in 1875 forty-three.

THE MISSISSIPPI INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB. DEPARTMENT FOR WHITE PUPILS.

Before the next annual report was made, Dr. Carter resigned, and in referring to that subject the board said: "The Institution continued under the efficient management of its former principal, Dr. J. L. Carter, until October 23, 1876, at which time, very much to the regret of all interested in its prosperity, he tendered his resignation and removed to another State." Dr. M. S. Craft, a member of the board of trustees, was put in charge of the Institution during the interim. On the 16th of November following, Mr. Charles H. Talbot, for many years a successful teacher in the Kentucky Institution, was appointed to fill this vacancy.

The next December forty pupils were reported as having been received during the year. Mr. Talbot was confronted with a large deficit hanging over the Institution. The board asked for $12,386 with which to liquidate this debt and carry the Institution through the next year. It appears the legislature appropriated only $10,182, but by the careful management and judicious purchases of Mr. Talbot the indebtedness was paid, and all expenditures for the year were met and a balance was reported of $700. This report shows forty-one pupils present. In 1877 an amendment to the constitution changes the sessions of the legislature from annual to biennial. The next report appeared in 1878, and seventy-one pupils had been received during that time. In the summer of 1878, it will be remembered, the terrible epidemic of yellow fever visited this city, and the school was not opened till December. This is Mr. Talbot's last report, December, 1879. Before another biennial term passed, he tendered his resignation, to take effect March 1, 1881, and returned to his native State, where he has enjoyed the quiet and comfort of an elegant country home and indulged in the luxuriant abundance of a magnificent Kentucky blue-grass farm. Mr. Talbot was a Christian man of great force of character and splendid financial ability, and was successful in carrying the Institution through the most trying financial period of the State's history.

On January 10, 1881, Mr. J. R. Dobyns, the present incumbent, was elected to succeed Mr. Talbot, and entered upon his duties March 1 following.

During the biennial term ending December 31, 1881, there were received ninety-two pupils, and sixty-eight reported present at that time. In his report for 1880 and 1881, the superintendent recommended the introduction of articulation teaching, the teaching of trades, the purchase of more ground, and the erection of a school building, and provision for the education of colored deaf, all of which recommendations were adopted by the board and provided for by the legislature. The printing office was opened, and on April 1, 1882, the publication of the Deaf-Mute Voice was begun, which has continued, with the exception of a few months in the latter part of 1889 and the beginning of 1890. The teaching of articulation was begun in November, 1882, by Miss Mossie McGann, whose successful history of six years' teaching in this Institution and whose untimely death in 1889 are still fresh in the memory of the profession. The separate department for colored pupils was opened October 1, 1882, and has continued to grow during the ten years of its existence.

In December, 1883, an epidemic of typhoid fever prevailed in the Institution, and, continuing to grow more and more serious, the school was dismissed in March, 1884. Though there were many cases of the fever, there was but one death. The entire history of the Institution records only six deaths among the pupils while in school. There were under instruction in 1882 and 1883 eighty pupils, with seventy-nine present when the report for those years was made. During 1884 and 1885 there were enrolled one hundred and ten, with eighty present December 31, 1885.

About this time the De l'Epée Literary Society was organized for the pupils, and has continued its regular monthly meetings, much to the entertainment and profit of its members. In April, 1886, the Sixth Conference of Principals and Superintendents was held here, which became an important part of the history of this Institution. There were present at this Conference representatives from twenty-four States and two Provinces of Canada. This Conference was signalized as the "GALLAUDET CONFERENCE," in which was celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of THOMAS HOPKINS GALLAUDET, the founder of the education of the deaf in America.

MISSISSIPPI INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB. DEPARTMENT FOR COLORED PUPILS.

The enrollment for the period covered by the report made in December, 1887, was ninety for 1886 and ninety-three for 1887, with seventy-six present at that writing. There were received in 1888 ninety-six, and in 1889 ninety-five, with eighty-four present at the close of that year. There were enrolled in 1890 one hundred, and in 1891 ninety-five, with eighty-two present when the report was made. There were received in 1892 ninety-one, and up to this writing, in 1893, ninety-three have been admitted.

This Institution is supported entirely by appropriations made by the legislature and has never received a donation or bequest.

It is free to all the deaf of the State who cannot be taught in the public schools; the age of admission and time of remaining under instruction have been very wisely left to the discretion of the board of trustees. The course of study is about what is taught in the public schools of the State, and the average pupil who remains nine or ten sessions is well equipped for the battle of life. The combined system is the one in use. It is the constant aim of the management to supplement their education with some useful trade, so that they will go out into the world producers instead of consumers.

Brief as this history is, it required days of searching among the musty records of state, and should its friends find any material omissions or mistakes it is hoped they will attribute them to incomplete records and the limited time allowed for its preparation.

Thus ends a brief account of the record made by this Institution, which record would, undoubtedly, make an important and interesting chapter in a complete history of Mississippi.

Let the deaf of Mississippi uncover their heads and lift up their hearts in gratitude for the rivers of blessings that have been flowing from this Institution for all these years.

APPENDIX.

THE LAW GOVERNING THE MISSISSIPPI INSTITUTION FOR THE DEAF AND DUMB.

Annotated Code.

CHAPTER 64.

2320 (678). Name and Franchise.—The Institution for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, heretofore established at Jackson, shall continue to exist, for the purposes of its establishment, under the name of "Institute for the Deaf and Dumb," with power to receive and hold property, real and personal, for its benefit, and to accept and use, as provided by law, all bequests, devises, and donations made to it; and it shall continue to enjoy the rights and privileges conferred on it by law, and such as are necessary to accomplish the purposes of its establishment.

2321. Parts of Chapter for Institute for the Blind Applied.—Every section, except the first, of the chapter on "Institute for the Blind" shall apply to the Institute for the Deaf and Dumb as fully as if inserted here, changing the word "blind" to "deaf" wherever it occurs.

2311 (670). Government; Trustees.—The government of the Institute is vested in a board of five trustees, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, for a term of two years and until successors are appointed.

2312 (671). Vacancies; Removals.—The Governor may remove any trustee for cause, and he may fill all vacancies occurring during a recess of the Senate.

2313 (672). President of the Board; Quorum.—The Governor is ex officio president of the board of trustees; but in his absence the board may select a president for the time. A majority of the trustees shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but when a bare majority is present, the concurrence of all will be necessary.

2314 (674). Powers of Trustees.—The board of trustees may adopt all needful rules and regulations for the government of the Institute, and may regulate the number and fix the salaries of under officers and teachers, and prescribe the duties of all officers and teachers and the course of instruction.

2315 (675). None but Residents Admitted.—The board of trustees shall not admit into the Institute a person who is not a bona fide resident of this State, and who is not of good moral character.

2316 (675). Board and Tuition; Free Pupils.—The board of trustees shall fix the amount to be paid by pupils for board and tuition and the terms of admission and times of payment; and it shall admit free of all charges, upon the certificate of the county superintendent of education, all indigent deaf persons who are eligible.

2317. Superintendent.—There shall be a superintendent of the Institute, to be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate, for a term of two years, and he may be removed by the Governor for cause. All vacancies occurring during the recess of the Senate shall be filled by the Governor.

2318. Same; His Duties.—The duties of the superintendent shall be prescribed by the board of trustees, and he shall have general control over and responsibility for the management of the Institute and the care of its property. He shall make an annual report to the board of trustees, up to the first day of October, in such form as the board shall prescribe, and, in particular, giving the statistics for the preceding year.

2319 (676). Report of Trustees to Legislature.—The board of trustees shall make a report, through the Governor, every two years to the legislature, setting forth a full statement of its official acts and of the condition and progress of the Institute, with such recommendations as it may deem proper, and containing a detailed report of all receipts and expenditures for the two preceding fiscal years.
